FIFTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

HERALDRY

By DUDLEY BUTLER

It has been stated that "he who careth not whence he came careth little whither he goeth." This may, perhaps, be rather a bold statement to put forth, but the fact remains that the pride in race or ancestry seems to be innate in almost everyone.

When you speak of heraldry to anyone who knows little or nothing about it, the great majority will ask "When was it invented?"

About a year ago, I read in the morning paper a statement about the ancestry of a lady who had very suddenly become a prominent figure in the news. The account stated that a coat of arms of her family had been granted in the 9th century. If they had stated that the lady's ancestor rode around on a motorcycle, it would not have been much more of an anachronism.

The coat of arms of William the Conqueror, according to legend, were two lions and are so depicted on the monument erected to him in Caen in 1642. But on the Bayeux tapestry there is nothing which can be legitimately considered as a representation of arms. In this marvelous work, in which minute details are so scrupulously noticed, if coats of arms had existed they would surely have been depicted. But none of any kind appear.

It therefore appears from instances adduced that armorial devices were first probably borne by kings and nobles, as personal decorations, during the 12th century. But it was not until the reign of Henry III 1216-1272, that heraldry was reduced to anything like a definite system.

But, it may be urged, what actual service can the obsolete jargon of the old heralds possibly render now? Much, in many ways. A shield of arms, a badge or a rebus depicted on a glass window, painted on a wall, carved on a corbel or monument, will frequently indicate, with unerring precision, the date to which such relics are to be ascribed.

Entered as Second Class Matter at the Federalsburg, Md., Post Office under the Act of March 3, 1879.

How utterly devoid of meaning must be this opening speech of Shakespeare's Richard the III,

> "Now is the winter of our discontent > Made glorious summer by this sun of York" to a person who is unacquainted with the fact that the "Rose-en-Soleil," or white rose placed within a sun, was the badge assumed by Edward IV after the Battle of Mortimer's Cross.

I have seen hundreds of coins on both sides of which the inscriptions were completely effaced, but by means of knowing one quartering in the coat of arms, I have had no difficulty in my attribution.

In this paper, I shall confine myself solely to the rules and regulations laid down by English heraldry, which are very explicit and allow of hardly any exceptions. Heraldry, as practiced on the Continent of Europe, was quite different and many coats of arms used there would be impossible to describe in real heraldic terms. Let us take one example. According to the English law, you must not under any circumstances blazon a color upon a color or a metal upon a metal. This law is entirely disregarded on the Continent. A Fess is a straight bar across the shield (No. 4). It must always be a straight bar composed of two parallel lines. On the Continent, a Fess is sometimes depicted having the top line straight and the bottom one engrailed (No. 6) This would be impossible to describe in heraldic language.

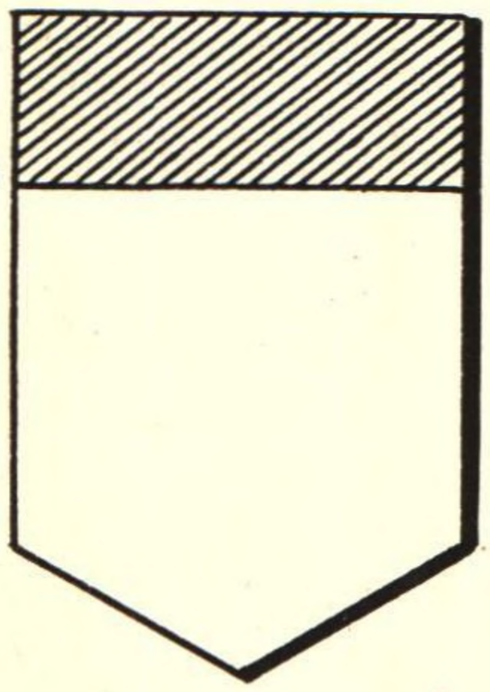

Any object having life is always depicted in natural colors. Thus, in the coat of arms of Captain John Smith would be described or blazoned "gules (red) three Moors heads, proper." In other words, three Moors heads in their natural color on a red field. Animals, birds, trees, and so forth, are always blazoned "proper." This term "proper" allows of considerable latitude. If, for example, you wished to depict the Moor's head with brown skin, black hair, a jewelled nose and gold ear rings, you would have a perfect right to do so. As a further example, take the coat of arms of the State of Connecticut, three grape vines, two and one proper. You could have red or white grapes on them, as you chose, or no grapes at all, and the vines either green or with autumn colors.

One of the most important things to know about heraldry is the name of the different parts of the shield. The Chief occupies the upper third portion of the shield (No. 1). The Pale is a perpendicular band placed in the center of the shield (No. 2). The Bend crosses the shield (No. 3). The Fess crosses the shield horizontally and is the same width as the Pale. The Canton is placed in the upper corner of the shield (No. 5).

The terms Dexter and Sinister are employed to designate the right and left sides of the shield respectively. The Bar or Bend Sinister has always, according to popular belief, indicated illegitimacy. But there has always been so much discussion pro and con that I shall not venture any statement on the question. All I can say is that of all the coats of arms I have seen, in glass windows, carved on monuments, or painted on wall or canvas, I have never seen a coat of arms so marked.

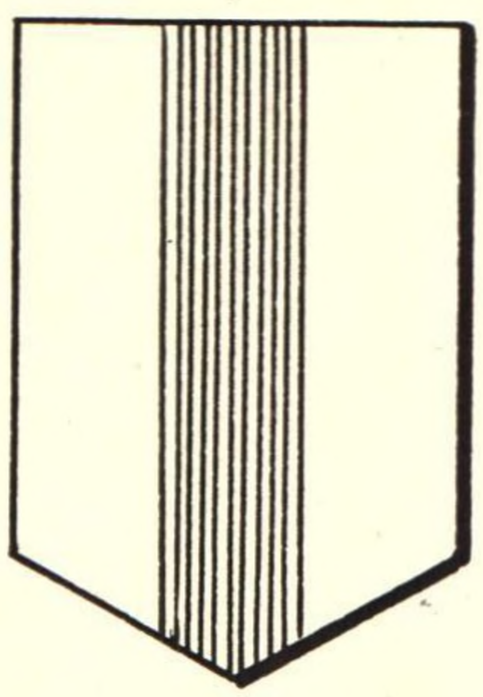

There are, however, many "Marks of Cadency," that is to say, which son of the head of the family was using the coat of arms. The eldest son bore the family arms marked with a Label (No. 7). The second son Labeled his arms with a Crescent (No. 8). The third son with a Mullet (No. 9), and so on. By this means, any stranger could tell at a glance whether he was speaking to the first born or the sixth or seventh. This was considered very important.

The oldest coats of arms were always the most simple. If, for example, you should see a plain silver shield with a red chevron, you could be sure that it was of much earlier date than one having more complicated design and more different colors. As one writer of the 16th Century puts it, "Plain coats are noblest, yet ye vulgar eye takes Joseph's for the best of Heraldry." The names of the various heraldic tinctures are as follows: Gold=Or; Silver=Argent; Red=Gules; Blue=Azure; Black=Sable; Green=Vert; Purple=Pelure.

It is a common belief that arms were granted only for deeds of valor on the field of battle, but such was not the case. They were granted by the Crown to persons who had performed public service and were granted to scientists, doctors, lawyers, writers and so on. Louis the 14th granted arms to a cook who had invented a sauce that pleased him.

Marshalling is the system by which the placing of quarterings on a shield is ruled. Let us suppose that Mr. A marries Miss B. Mr. A can now place his own arms and those of his wife "in Pale" that is to say side by side (No. 10). Now let us suppose that A and B have a son, C. Mr. C would have the right to "quarter" the arms of his father and mother, thus (No. 11). It is by this means that a coat of arms of many quarterings is built up. I have in my possession a picture of the coat of arms of Henry Crampton Lloyd. He satisfied the College of Heralds that he was entitled to 356 quarterings. The picture in my possession shows 323 of them. This is an all time record, for none of the Royal Families of Europe could show anything like that number. I am told that at the Court of Austria, before the first World War, no private citizen was admitted to a reception at the Royal Palace unless he could show at least 12 quarterings on his coat of arms. A very splendid case of quartering is shown on the Spanish coins of Leon and Castile.

Of all the coins I have ever seen, the coats of arms on the coins of Saxony show the largest number of quarterings. Some of these shields contain as many as 24 quarterings. This number was arrived at by using the arms of a duchy in the principality, a bishopric, a tiny village, and so on. We offer a picture of one of these coins.

Some of these arms are quite unforgetable, as for example the two pruning hooks of Dietrichstein; the three pretzels of Pretzelheim; the pine cone of Augsburg; the eagle eating a heart, the arms of Oppeln.

Tournaments held a most important place among the nobles of this period. At these trials of military skill, it was the custom for the directors of the contest to examine and publicly proclaim the Armorial Bearings and achievements of such competitors as presented themselves for the first time, before they were permitted to engage in the Lists, while an attendant esquire would blazen or blow a horn, to attract attention to the ceremony. The antecedents of a knight having been thus openly proclaimed, he was permitted henceforth to bear on his helmet two horns, which signified that his Arms had been duly "blazoned," thereby rendering a subsequent examination unnecessary, and thus we find the Crests of German nobles are frequently placed between two horns. On these coins of Saxony, you will notice that there are almost as many Crests as quarterings, and that these Crests are most elaborate.

In the Metropolitan Museum of Art, here in New York, is a suit of armor designed for use in a tournament. The helmet carries a Crest composed of peacock feathers about 14 inches in circumference and at least two feet high. This Crest, needless to say, was for tournament use only. It was never intended for use in battle.

The question of the Crest and its relation to a coat of arms is rather a large one. I do not intend to go into it at this time, but it will be discussed in a later article.

NATIONAL COIN WEEK

RICHARD S. YEOMAN TO BE CHAIRMAN

President Martin F. Kortjohn has announced the appointment of Richard S. Yeoman, 3619 Graceland Blvd., Racine, Wis., as General Chairman in charge of activities connected with National Coin Week.

Mr. Yeoman is preparing a special announcement which will appear in the February issue of THE NUMISMATIST, and in the meantime the officers and members of all clubs should arrange to publicize coin-collecting by special exhibits on view to the public, newspaper publicity, radio talks, et cetera.

Last year the theme of National Coin Week was the Sesquicentennial of the Silver Dollar. This year marks another milestone in the history of our coinage—

"The Sesquicentennial of the Eagle and Half Eagle, Our First Gold Coins."

This is an important event and a most fitting theme around which to promote numismatics. Enquiries and suggestions should be sent direct to Mr. Yeoman, the General Chairman.

PART III

Engravers and Printers

The various engravers and printers of the notes are listed in Table III with the type numbers of the notes produced by each. The number of engravers reached its maximum with the September 2nd, 1861 issue, exemplified by the fact that the $5 note occurs in 7 types by 6 engravers, the $10 in 9 types by 4 engravers, the $20 in 5 types by 5 engravers, and the $50 in 3 types by 3 engravers. Much jealousy and confusion arose between them and a number of changes took place in individual firms. Dr. William Lee's book gives details of this situation:

"The Southern Bank Note Company printed no notes after the issue of September 2, 1861. J. Manouvrier, New Orleans, has but one note, so far as known to the writer, the $5 F. G. H. I., of July 25, 1861. Hoyer & Ludwig printed no notes after the issue of September 2, 1861. This firm sold out about May 16, 1862, and Dr. J. T. Paterson bought a half interest. Colonel Blanton Duncan, of South Carolina, was very active as a printer, and his correspondence with the Treasury Department is voluminous. In 1862, being invested with military power, serious difficulties arose between Dr. Paterson and himself, which retarded the proper execution of work; Duncan at times insisting that Paterson's printers should be enrolled in the military service. Suitable printers were very scarce at this time, and on July 5, 1862, Duncan writes that he lost $1,000 by sending a man to New York to employ printers, who never returned. Evans & Cogswell first became printers of these notes with the issue of December 2, 1862, and continued in favor to the end, supplanting all other printers. Keatinge & Ball (at first Leggett, Keatinge & Ball) appear as engravers on the issue of September 2, 1861, and about August 19, 1862, the Confederate Government purchased their stock, and made them the engravers."

The Notes, Their Designs and Illustrations

The designs and illustrations of the notes, particularly of the issues of 1861, are greatly diversified. Use was made of many existing medallions, vignettes and illustrations that already had appeared on the thousands of varieties of State bank notes, which were in wide circulation in the pre-Civil War period.

Following the classical tradition, several of the illustrations are mythological deities: Ceres, goddess of agriculture; Minerva, goddess of defensive war; Juno, Queen of all gods and goddesses in her role as Moneta, goddess of money; Pallas Athene, the civic goddess; Proserpina, the goddess of the underworld; Tellus, goddess of earth, especially of cultivated fields; and Thetis, daughter of Nereus, an ancient sea god.

Other illustrations depict by personification abstract qualities such as Justice and Liberty, or activities such as Agriculture, Commerce, Industry and Navigation, or sovereignities such as Columbia, the Confederacy and the Union.

Many activities are also depicted concretely by illustrations of railroad trains, sailing ships, steamboats, cotton hoeing, cotton picking, etc., which are of particular interest because they show the practices and facilities of the period of about a century ago.

Various notes bear illustrations of Revolutionary War heroes, such as George Washington and General Francis Marion, and of men of later national prominence, such as Andrew Jackson and John C. Calhoun.

Commencing with the issue dated September 2nd, 1861, illustrations appear depicting persons prominent* in the Confederacy, as listed below:

* Reference should be made to Statesmen of the Lost Cause by Burton J. Hendrick (Little, Brown and Co., 1939) for a penetrating analysis of the civilian leadership of the Confederacy.

Judah P. Benjamin—First Attorney-General, Second Secretary of War, Third Secretary of State.

Clement C. Clay—Confederate Senator, distinguished for his zeal and devotion to the Confederacy.

Jefferson Davis—President.

R. M. T. Hunter—Second Secretary of State.

Lieutenant-General Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson—Famous for his tactical skill and courage in the battles of the Confederacy.

C. G. Memminger—First Secretary of the Treasury.

Mrs. (Lucy H.) Pickens—Wife of the War Governor of South Carolina.

George W. Randolph—Third Secretary of War.

Alexander H. Stephens—Vice-President.

John E. Ward—Mayor of Savannah, Georgia.

For the collector who desires further information on the illustrations appearing in Confederate notes, reference should be made to the interesting articles by H. C. Allen, published in the issues of THE NUMISMATIST from June, 1917 to February, 1919. These present a wealth of detail information developed from Mr. Allen's exhaustive research on this subject.

Counterfeit, Facsimile and Bogus Notes

Many of the Confederate States of America notes were counterfeited. A large proportion of the counterfeits and facsimiles are immediately apparent from the crude engraving, poor printing or printed signatures, and some are marked "Counterfeit" or "Facsimile." All genuine notes, except the two 50c notes, Type Nos. 301 and 401, have autograph signatures. Better executed counterfeits and facsimiles of the following notes have been found:

Type Nos. 119, 120, 124, 125, 127, 131, 133, 135, 137, 138, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205.

This subject may warrant detail treatment in a later article.

LISTING OF NOTES—KEY

In the following descriptive listing of the notes, the procedures previously described are uniformly followed. These procedures and the arrangement scheme are summarized:—

The type number always is at left margin, followed by the description of the major features, characteristic of the type of note.

The letters identifying design, engraver and printing varieties, and the corresponding descriptions follow in succession below the description of the type. Minor varieties of this class are identified by a digit following the variety letter.

The numbers for paper and watermark varieties (preceded by /), and the corresponding descriptions, follow under the description of the related design, engraver and printing variety.

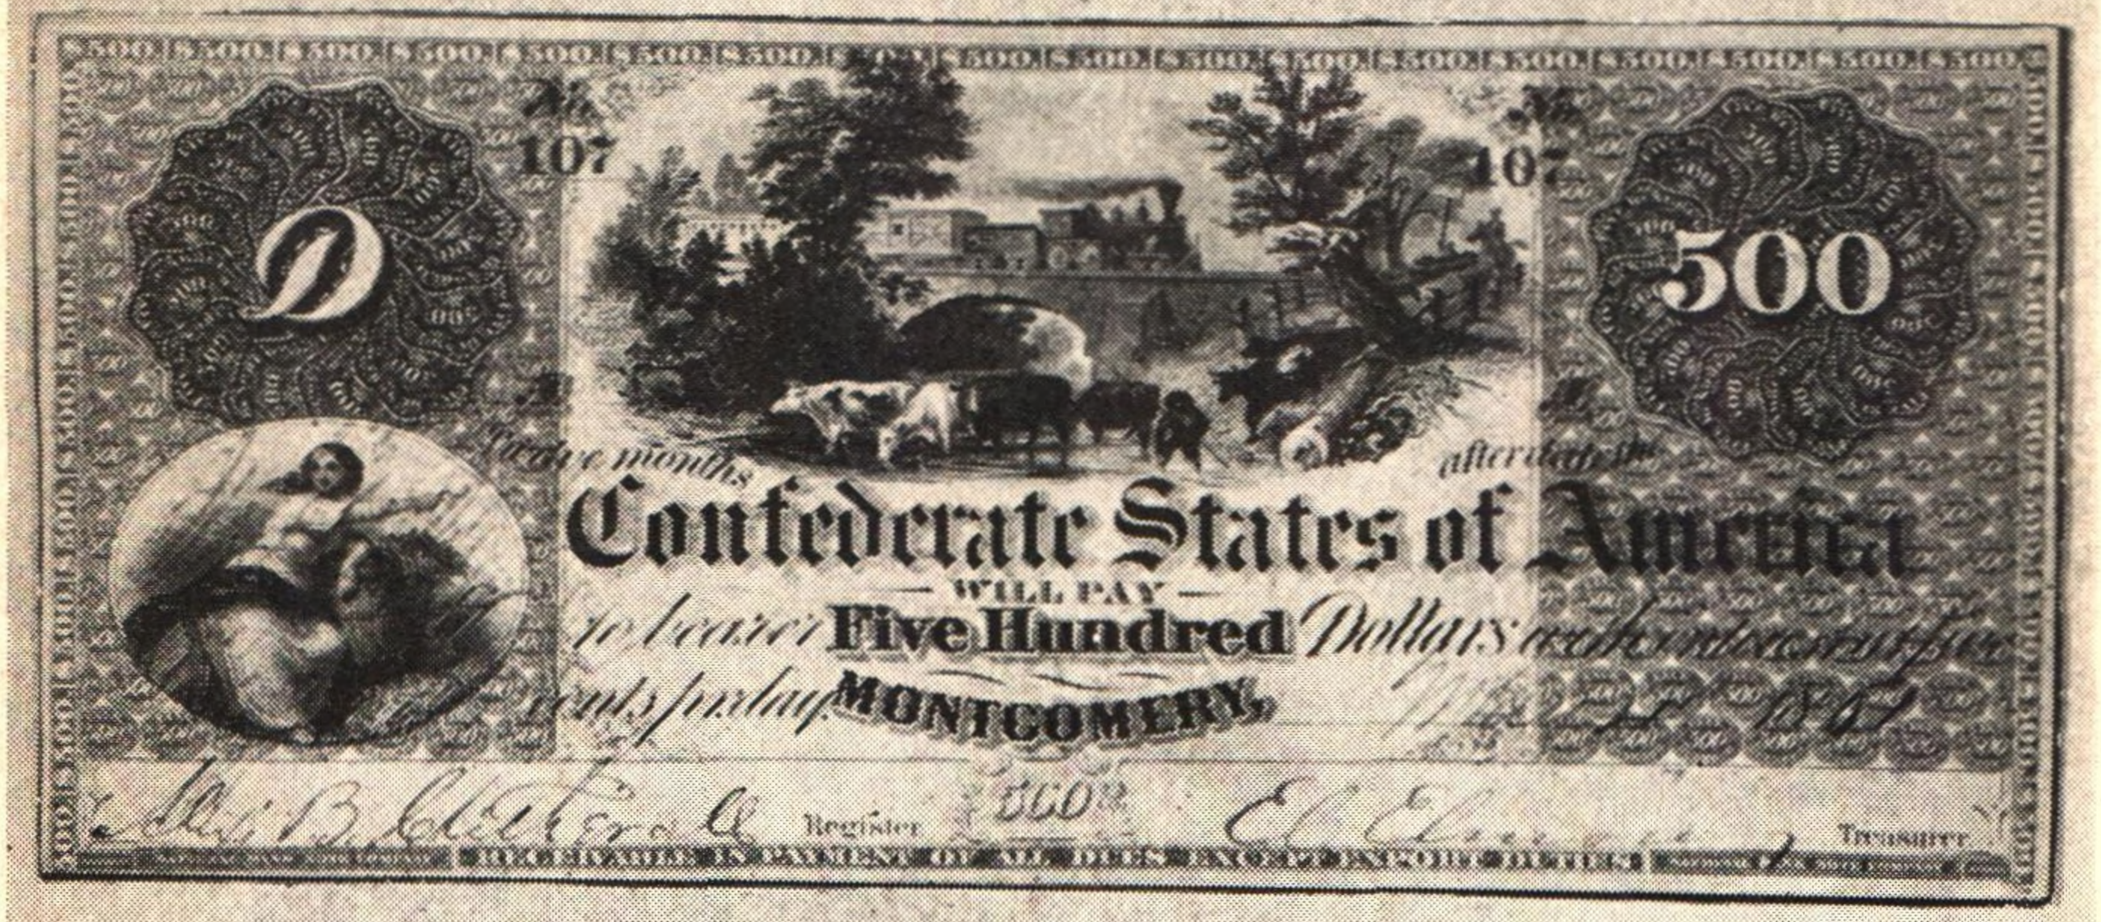

Plate letter-numbers (preceded by :) appear last in the description of the type of note, or of its variety, as applicable. Plate letter-numbers in italics indicate those of greater relative rarity.

AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY HONORS MEMORY OF THE LATE EDWARD T. NEWELL

On Saturday, November 18th, the American Numismatic Society held its regular Fall Meeting at its Museum in New York. The main occasion of the meeting was the opening of an exhibition of choice specimens of ancient Greek coins from the collection bequeathed to the Society by its late President, Mr. Edward T. Newell. Tributes to Mr. Newell as a collector and numismatic scholar were made by Prof. T. Leslie Shear, of Princeton University, Mrs. Agnes B. Brett, the Society's Associate Curator of Ancient Coins, and Prof. Thomas O. Mabbott, Editor of the Numismatic Review. The meeting closed with the presentation of a memorial stone plaque mounted in the rooms occupied by Mr. Newell the latter years of his life and in which the Society's entire collection of Greek, Roman and Byzantine coins is now housed. This plaque, executed by the sculptor Georg Lober, known to numismatists as a designer of medals, reads:

THESE WERE THE WORKROOMS OF
EDWARD T. NEWELL WHOSE EMINENCE AS
UNIVERSALLY RECOG-NIZED BY SCHOLARS AND WHOSE GENEROUS HELPFULNESS ENDEARED
FRIENDS

Mr. Newell served as President of the Society from 1916 until the time of his death in January 1941. As a youth he became interested in coins and was an enthusiastic collector throughout his life. His main field of interest was in the coinages of Alexander the Great and his successors, on which he published numerous articles, monographs and several large volumes. In recognition of his publications he received medals from the French Numismatic Society, the Royal Numismatic Society of England, as well as the Archer M. Huntington medal of the American Numismatic Society. Aside from his studies and publications he was well known among the collecting fraternity for his genial personality and ever-willing helpfulness. Soon after his association with the Society, rooms at its Museum were placed at his disposal in which to keep his collection of ancient coins which became in quality and scope the most important collection of its kind in this country and the equal of many abroad. Mr. Newell bequeathed almost his entire collection to the Society. The coins in the exhibition, which were kept on display for two weeks, represented a selection of his finest pieces, which he had kept in a separate cabinet in order to show them conveniently to visitors.

PAPER SHORTAGE ACUTE

THE NUMISMATIST is limited to a certain number of pages each month. This accounts for the omission of several articles and communications which were to appear in this issue. These contributions will appear at the earliest possible date.—Editor.

FROM THE DESK OF THE GENERAL SECRETARY

The principal activity of the office of the General Secretary during the past month or two has been the collection of dues for 1945. Statements were mailed to each member in November or early December and the response has been particularly gratifying. The General Secretary appreciates the promptness which most of the members have shown in sending in their payments. Membership cards have been mailed out as promptly as possible.

Members will understand that the dues statements were prepared somewhat in advance of the mailing date. Some members were kind enough to send in their dues without waiting for the statement. They may have received the statement after sending in their dues. Such statements should be ignored, of course. It was impossible to prevent the mailing of some of the statements where payments had already been received. Members who may have failed to receive a statement should send payment as soon as convenient, mentioning membership number, and careful attention will be given to it.

Regarding Registrations

It is customary to assume, in absence of notice to the contrary, that all members intend to renew their memberships, so that some indulgence is extended by the Association in continuing to send The Numismatist while awaiting overdue payments. The January and February issues will be mailed to all members in good standing on December 31, 1944 but the March issue will not be mailed to those in arrears on the mailing date for that issue. Members who do not intend to continue their memberships should notify the General Secretary to that effect. Resignations are supposed to be accepted only from members in good standing. They should be accompanied, therefore, with payment for any copies received but not previously paid for.

Changes of Address

One of the most difficult tasks confronting any organization with a large mailing list is that of keeping the mailing list up to date. This involves numerous changes at frequent intervals. Please notify the General Secretary of any change in address as far in advance of the effective date of that change as possible. Any notice received after the 15th of any month cannot be made effective for the regular mailing of the issue of the following month so that you should arrange with the Post Office for forwarding that issue to your new address.

Personal Notes

A great many dues payments were accompanied by personal notes, friendly greetings, and other informal messages. These were carefully noted and are greatly appreciated. The tremendous volume of mail handled during this period has made it impossible for me to acknowledge these notes individually, and it is hoped that this general acknowledgment will be acceptable for the present.

LEWIS M. REAGAN, General Secretary.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

NUMISMATIC REVIEW. (Stacks) for October (quarterly). A good lineup of writers and a well balanced selection of news and views. The lead article, by Alfred R. Bellinger, has to do with the "Bronze Standards of Antiochus III, Selecus IV, and Antiochus IV." Aside from its high numismatic merits, this difficult subject is handled by Dr. Bellinger in a straightforward style that might well be adopted by his contemporaries.

Harold Mattingly has an essay titled "Picture and Symbol in Coin-Types," wherein he is most critical of current coin-designs. "John Rokesmith," (a stranger in these parts) discusses, with much detail, "An Unpublished Gold Triens of the Visigothic King Reccared." The third chapter on the "Quaint and Curious Moneys of Africa," by Howard D. Gibbs, is accompanied by splendid illustrations which will add much to the interest of the readers. Dudley Butler describes an interesting Bread Token of Hildesheim, issued between 1601 and 1660. Carl Wurtzbach discusses Jackson Tokens and describes a little known variety. He deplores, and with good cause, the lack of interest shown in this series. J. Hunt Deacon has a well set up article on "Austrian Mints and Mintmarks." Other contributors are Bruno Kisch, J. P. Derriman, Morton Stack and his brother Joseph.

Thomas Ollive Mabbott, Editor, and Hans Holzer, Associate Editor, have included some useful information. Their most interesting remarks will be found under "Books and Publications," "New Issues from Battlefronts," "From Here and Far," and "Queries and Answers."

The only criticism we have to make is that Plate I pictures the same celluloid medal twice, and "New Issues from Battlefronts," starts off with a minor coin of Brazil, followed by new issues from Colombia, Chile, Ecuador, and one or two other places not exactly in the line of fire. Otherwise it's easy to read.

THE COIN COLLECTOR'S JOURNAL. (Wayte Raymond, Inc.) for September and October. The usual assortment of authoritative and informative articles. Dr. Paul S. Szego concludes his series of essays on the coinage of Syracuse with a study of the issues of the Period of Decline. It is written in a trenchant and pleasing style. The author, a connoisseur if there ever was one, has illustrated his work with 31 coins artistically arranged on two plates. Phares O. Sigler continues his series on the Coins of Colonial America, covering in this chapter the issues of Massachusetts. Mr. Raymond's section on the Coins of the Nineteenth Century, listing, illustrating, and pricing the coins of Portuguese India, is alone worth the cost of a year's subscription.

NUMISMATIC SCRAPBOOK (Hewitt Bros.) for December. Our old friend B. Morgenthau gives the story behind the token issued by the La Crosse City Railway Company, Wisconsin, about 1885. A lot of research condensed in a most readable style. "Early Banks of New Jersey," is a fine article by Raymond J. Walker. Fred R. Marckhoff supplies a list of the first National Banks in all the states. The series on Colonial Coins and Tokens of America, written by R. S. Yeoman, is brought to an end with this issue. Joseph Coffin gives additional notes on the inscriptions on Papal coins, and Emil Di Bella gives two more pages of his "Check-List of Wooden Money."

MEDALS STOLEN FROM COLLECTORS' CLUB

DEALERS ASKED TO BE ON LOOKOUT

Within the last two weeks, a case of medals in the Library of The Collectors' Club has been forced open, and a number of valuable medals all issued for philatelic honors have been removed therefrom. There were a number of valuable gold pieces.

These medals can be distinguished by the fact that in each instance they were given in connection with an award for a stamp exhibit, in many instances the name on the medal will be that of J. Brace Chittenden, or Charles J. Phillips, or A. F. Lichtenstein.

If any medals of this description come to your attention, please notify Mrs. Mitzi Andrews at The Collectors' Club, 22 East 35th Street, New York 16, N. Y. Phone Mu. 3-0559.

NOTES OF THE TRADE

Frank J. Katen announces the opening of a coin shop at 486 State Street, New Haven, Connecticut. Mr. Katen will carry a full line of collector's accessories along with stock of coins that will interest both advanced and new collectors. Several fixed price lists are ready and more are being made up.

Early this year the collection of Wm. A. Knapp of Kansas City, will be catalogued and offered for sale by B. Max Mehl, Fort Worth, Texas. Mr. Mehl reports that the collection is rich in United States coins and promises to be one of the outstanding sales of the year. The catalogue will be announced as soon as it is ready for distribution.

The Nineteenth Catalogue of the New Netherlands Coin Co., of 95 Fifth Avenue, New York, is dated for January 9th. It contains a selection of United States and foreign gold and silver coins as well as an almost complete set of Numismatic Notes and Monographs. Outstanding among the lots are many rare foreign gold coins that have not appeared on the market in recent years.

Henry Grunthal, 200 Haven Avenue, New York City, reports the acquisition of a choice collection of large cents.

Collectors of United States large cents are eagerly awaiting the sale of the collection formed by Howard R. Newcomb. It has been catalogued by Wayte Raymond and James G. MacAllister and will be sold by J. C. Morgenthau & Co., Inc., 1 West 47th Street, New York. The first catalogue will list 500 major and minor varieties of the cents issued from 1793 to 1814 inclusive. Each and every piece is unusual in its splendid state of preservation and many varieties are being offered for the first time.

The editor of the Numismatist will attend this sale and the results will be reported in a future issue.

Edward Gans, the proprietor of Numismatic Fine Arts, has sent us a copy of his Stock Catalogue with Fixed Prices. This is his fourth such catalogue and it contains a fine assortment of ancient, mediaeval, and modern coins. No U. S. coins. Mr. Gans is to be complimented upon the scholarly manner in which he has classified his material. The letterpress is neat and easy to follow.

The Numismatic Gallery, 42 East 50th Street, New York, will offer at public auction on January 20th, the first section of an outstanding collection of United States coins. According to the cataloguers it will require five sessions to dispose of the entire collection. Judging from proofs of the first catalogue, the sale will provide an unusual opportunity to those who collect early United States coins. An exceptional feature of the catalogue is the inclusion of Hazeltine's Type Table of early silver dollars. Considering the popularity of these pieces, this list should be a boon to collectors. A charge of $1 is being made for the catalogue. This includes a list of prices realized.

The Tatham Stamp & Coin Co., Springfield, Mass., has sent us a copy of its 20th Annual Catalogue. It contains an interesting assortment of coins, paper money and accessories. We especially recommend it to collectors interested in inexpensive foreign coins that are becoming increasingly difficult to obtain. The catalogue is well illustrated and a worth while addition to any collector's library.

NO TWO ALIKE

A short time ago, I heard a coin-collector complain, "I don't know what's wrong with the coin-dealers; they all ask different prices. One wants $10 for a certain coin, while another advertises it at $9. They must think collectors are a lot of dupes."

This collector is correct in that dealers' quotations are not all uniform. And let's hope they never are, for such a conspiracy among dealers would bring ruin to coin-collecting and to the coin business as well.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 15th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Business Manager (see above). Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

THE EDITOR'S CORNER

It is doubtful if any other magazine in America can equal the record of The Numismatist by having but six different editors over a period of 57 years. In the beginning it was edited by Dr. George F. Heath, as busy a man who ever lived, yet a man who found it advisable to devote part of his valuable time to avocations. Today the Numismatist is the most popular and widely read coin magazine in the world.

As its seventh editor I propose to guide myself by the ideals perpetuated by my predecessors. Through good times and bad times they carried on their work and never for an instant did they lose sight of their goal. Their aim was simple and direct. It was to publish worthwhile numismatic information in a concise and readable form, and to make the pages of the Numismatist the clearing-house for the opinions and reports of the members of the American Numismatic Association.

THE COIN BUSINESS

Coin-collectors and coin-dealers in the United States can point with much pride and satisfaction to the record they established in the year 1944. Never in the history of coin-collecting has so much money been spent. At auction sales and mail sales well over $1,000,000 worth of numismatic material was sold. It is quite impossible to estimate the amount involved in private transactions. Perhaps another $1,000,000 worth of coins changed hands but that is only a rough guess. The amount of money spent on newspaper, magazine, and direct advertising would, if known, surprise the average collector.

It is sufficient to point out that the coin business must now be regarded as a "big business" and as such must assume the responsibility of a big business. At the moment, it is under no rigid control. There is no association of dealers or established code of ethics to keep the business on a high level. It devolves upon each and every dealer, both large and small, to be fair and honest in the conduct of his business. If he isn't, he injures himself and the coin business in general.

In a highly specialized business, such as coins, any dealer is apt to make an honest mistake. If the mistake is discovered and rectified, no harm is done. If a dealer persists in making "honest mistakes" it is time then to persuade him to reform. If he doesn't, he must of a necessity be referred to the Federal Trade Commission, the Post Office Department, a local Better Business Bureau, and/or the local courts.

Every business, and certainly the coin business is not excepted, has its abuses. But these abuses must be kept at a minimum or the goose that laid the large golden egg will be dead and cold.

Information Wanted—

A list of the medals commemorating the Centennial of George Washington's first inauguration is being compiled for future publication in The Numismatist by Mrs. Damon G. Douglas of 53 Park Ave., Caldwell, N. J. She would greatly appreciate hearing from any collectors of this series who might be interested in sending her data about any of their unusual pieces for inclusion in this list.

"SURROUNDING THREE LEGS"

In a recently issued catalogue by John L. Dooley (who will probably repay me in my own coin) we came across the following description:—

"Lot 2773, 1786 Isle of Mann. Obv. bust of George III, Rev. Whoever is cast down will stand up surrounding three legs. Fine. SCARCE."

THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL

We read that a versatile stamp-collector recently delivered a talk on coins under the title, "Money, the Root of All Evil." The first and last time we saw the original quotation it read: "For the love of money is the root of all evil." (I Timothy, VI, 10.) How would you like it, Mr. Stamp-collector, if one of us coin-collectors went around giving lectures on "Stamps, the Root of All Evil?" You'd get sore, huh!

BELL SALE AVERAGES $122 A LOT, TOTALS $131,717.35

The collection of United States and Pioneer gold coins formed by J. F. Bell, Chicago, was sold in three sessions, December 7th, 8th, and 9th, by Stacks of 12 West 46th Street, New York. Those who were privileged to attend witnessed spirited bidding that established many new records for United States gold coins.

The first session, which included most all the dates and mintmarks of the $1, $2.50, $3 and $4 gold pieces, realized $23,041.35. The second session disposed of the half eagles of all mints and the eagles of the Philadelphia mint. This section realized $41,282. The third and last session realized $67,394. This included the mint-marked eagles, all of the double eagles (with the exception of four issues), 54 different issues of Pioneer and Territorial gold and a complete series of commemorative gold coins.

The auction was conducted by Joseph B. Stack, who was ably assisted by his brother Morton M., and the recorder, Miss Ann Smith. Collectors and dealers from many cities were in attendance. Floor buyers accounted for lots totalling $101,411. Mail bidders from 29 different states were awarded $30,306.35, totalling $131,717.35.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETY FORMED IN MEXICO CITY

Editor NUMISMATIST:

It pleases me to inform you that a new numismatic group was organized in Mexico City on October 20, last. It is the Sociedad Numismática Mexicana. As may be seen by the enclosed clipping its officers are:

President: Manuel Romero de Terreros,
Vice-Pres: General Luciano A. Peralta,
Treasurer: Alfredo A. Porráz,
Secretary: J. Sánchez Garza.

Board of Directors:
Mr. Salvador Illanes,
Prof. Jorge Enciso,
Mr. Fernando Kososky.

The membership includes Mr. Bruno Rosales, Dr. López Ortega, Mr. Cárlos Doring, Mr. Joaquín A. Contreras, Mr. Bilger Sundstroem, Dr. Everardo Landa, Mr. Aurelio F. Hernandez, and Prof. Miguel A. Quintana.

A short biographical sketch may not be amiss. The president is the Marquis of San Francisco, director of the National Pawn Shop, and a graduate of one of England's two largest universities; he is a distinguished historian and numismatist of world renown. For years he had the largest collection of Mexican coins and medals in Mexico City; at present the numismatic cabinets of Mr. Kososky, a Frenchman of nearly 50 years residence in México, and that of Mr. Porráz, a banker and attorney, are about equally as large. General Peralta is one of the youngest commanders of the army. Sánchez Garza is better known for the translation of Wood's work on "The Coinage of the Mexican Revolutionists." Mr. Illanes is a retired engineer who has a beautiful gold collection. And lastly Mr. Enciso, who is the head of the Department of Colonial Monuments; if in the future, numismatists the world over, will be able to order Mexican coins from Mexico, and get them, it will be due entirely to his knowledge of our hobby and the support he has given to the petition requesting that the ban be lifted. Because every member is an enthusiastic collector, one cannot but prophesy great future for the new club.

Should you wish to insert in The Numismatist a good word for our confreres south of the border, it would help towards bringing closer relationship, and if additional information is desired I will be glad to supply it. And may I suggest that you write a letter, sending a complimentary copy of the magazine? Everyone reads English there.

Correspondence should be addressed to the Sociedad Numismática Mexicana, Calle de Hamburgo No. 88, Mexico D. F. Mexico.

Cordially yours,

A. F. PRADEAU, M.D.

Los Angeles, November 13, 1944.

Since receiving the above letter we have learned that the President of the Republic of Mexico, Mr. Avila Camacho was appointed Honorary President of the Sociedad Numismatica Mexicana, and that Dr. A. F. Pradeau has been selected as honorary vice-president.—Editor.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

The displays were of the finest, covering practically everything "Numismatic" in America, plus a display of dollar-sized coins of the world. To list them all would take up more space than permitted here. Mr. Wagner, in charge of displays, did a great job in the planning of it. About forty feet of table space was needed to accommodate the exhibits.

The early part of the evening was taken up in viewing the exhibits, after which came the turkey dinner. President Worth acted as master of ceremonies.

Following the dinner, President Worth called on Paul Fouts for the main talk of the evening. CANADIAN CHARTERED BANK NOTES TO BE WITHDRAWN

By NORMAN B. MASON, Dist. Sec'y. for Ontario

Some coin-collectors do not collect current issues, preferring to wait until they have become "collectors' items." If that is the reason for collectors of paper money not having become interested in Canadian Bank Notes, the reason no longer exists, as from December 31, 1944, Canadian Chartered Banks will no longer pay out their own notes; and eventually only notes of the government-owned Bank of Canada will circulate.

This has been a gradual process since the organization of the Bank of Canada in 1935, but the final elimination of the Chartered Bank Notes as a medium of exchange is due to the regular decennial revision of the Bank Act in 1944.

Prior to 1935 the banks were allowed to circulate their own notes up to the value of their capital stock. Since 1891 the public holding their notes was protected by the banks maintaining a fund into which each bank paid an amount equal to five per cent of its note issue. When a member bank failed, as did the Home Bank of Canada in 1923, this fund was used to redeem its notes.

Events in the 1840's led to the withdrawal from the banks of the right to issue notes under $4 in denomination and since the First Bank Act (1871) they have not done so. Ten years later the $4 note was discontinued and since then the denominations have been $5 and multiples thereof.

Until 1935 the notes were the large size, 3¼ by 7⅛ inches, but were then reduced to 2⅞ by 5⅞ inches.

At the present time the chartered banks are as follows:—

Banque Canadienne Nationale	Barclays Bank (Canada)
Banque Provinciale du Canada	Canadian Bank of Commerce
Bank of Montreal	Dominion Bank
Bank of Nova Scotia	Imperial Bank
Bank of Toronto	Royal Bank

While these banks will no longer pay out their own notes, they may continue to circulate for the next five years, at the end of which time the banks concerned are to pay to the Bank of Canada the value of notes outstanding, the Bank of Canada assuming the liability for their future redemption.

An Important Message From Mehl to You which I have rendered American collectors for the past forty-four years!

This is most palatable food for thought for you.

A RECENT LETTER

East Alton, Illinois
November 20, 1944.

Mr. B. Max Mehl
Mehl Building
Fort Worth, Texas.

Dear Mr. Mehl:-

Your letter of November 17, announcing the total amount realized on the sale of my coins caused a feeling of great elation in the Olsen family in which all members participated joyously.

I want to take this opportunity to state my appreciation of the splendid manner in which you have conducted this entire negotiation. Not only have you met your promise "to leave nothing undone to make the sale a huge success," but you have exercised a diligence and a degree of resourcefulness that was both effective and gratifying.

Several weeks ago, before the sale actually took place, some of my friends asked me why I had entrusted this collection to a dealer in Fort Worth instead of going to one of the eastern cities where an open floor auction might have drawn additional spirited bidding. I explained to them there were two reasons for my course of action. One was that I had made a very careful study of the auction results of the leading numismatic dealers throughout the country and had convinced myself that better prices were secured in your sales. Secondly, my personal contacts with you had developed a feeling of complete confidence in your integrity and competence.

I consider that the manner in which you conducted this sale and the results which you obtained constitute a thorough verification of the conclusions which I had drawn.

Please accept my kindest personal regards and appreciation.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) FRED OLSEN.

AN EARLIER LETTER

Albany, N. Y.
June 20th, 1921.

Mr. B. Max Mehl,
Mehl Building, Fort Worth, Texas.

Dear Mr. Mehl:

At the close of amicable business relations that cover a period of several months, I would be devoid of appreciation if I did not extend to you sincere thanks for all that you have done in my behalf.

My coin and medal collection which was the joy of my boyhood days and the companion of the years that followed, it was a pleasure for me to place in your hands for the purpose of having it offered to the public.

Many friends and brother collectors asked me why I went as far away as Fort Worth, Texas to make a sale that might have been undertaken in the part of the country where I reside. My answer was that the distance did not influence me, for after giving due consideration to conditions that should govern the judgment of one having valuable treasures to sell, I was convinced that I had selected as my representative the best equipped man in the United States. It is a pleasure to say that I made no mistake in choosing you to do for me just what I wanted, for you surpassed my most sanguine expectations.

You are truly a genius in your particular line and words of commendation such as I bestow upon you, you are justly entitled to.

Your straight business-like methods, your knowledge of coins and medals which includes their real market value, your ability to produce not only an attractive catalog from a printer's point of view but one that gives accurate descriptions of what you have to sell, your follow up leaflets and booklets and your prompt thirty day settlement of an account with your patron is what has won for you the great popularity you enjoy.

There is no detail of my sale but what you handled in a masterly way and the prices you obtained for the coins and medals; particularly the rarities such as the King 1804 U. S. dollar, were satisfactory.

May you continue to prosper because ability to do things intelligently and well is entitled to reward.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) JAMES H. MANNING.

The Howard R. Newcomb Collection

UNITED STATES CENTS

ON FEBRUARY 7TH AND 8TH, 1945

We will offer by auction Part I of the magnificent collection of U. S. Cents formed during the past fifty years by Mr. Howard R. Newcomb. This part will comprise the years 1793-1814 and will include nearly 500 major and minor varieties.

Mr. Newcomb needs no introduction, his books on the subject of Cents are the recognized standard works, and his collection excels for quality and completeness any other that has ever come on the market. All the great collections of the past have contributed their gems to this collection of gems. Mickley, Bushnell, M. A. Brown, Mougey, Lambert, Miller, Jackman, Beckwith are but a few of the names of great Cent collections of the past which are here represented.

We are not going to attempt here to call attention to outstanding gems or rarities. We will do that in the catalogue; but some idea of the completeness of the collection may be had from the following general summary:

Seventeen varieties, more than half of which are in mint state.

1794

About sixty specimens, lacking only four of being complete, usually in the highest preservation, many as they left the dies.

1796

About fifty varieties, many rarities, in uncirculated condition.

1797, 1798

Over one hundred specimens. Certainly the most magnificent collection of these years ever reaching the market, and representing a lifetime of intelligent search.

1801, 1802, 1803

Mr. Newcomb's specialty for many years and as would be expected, containing the most remarkable specimens in existence, over a hundred of them.

In nearly every year there are varieties which have never been offered before, and the sale will give present day collectors a genuine opportunity to add distinction and quality to their collections by securing some of the pedigreed coins from this great collection.

Outstanding Public Auction Sale

I AM PLEASED TO ANNOUNCE that the Auction Sale of the first part of the famous United States Paper Currency collection of

was a complete success. Mr. Grinnell has further demonstrated his confidence in me by permitting me to sell at Public Auction the next part of his noteworthy collection, which will consist of California National Gold Bank Notes, Silver Certificates and Gold Certificates.

THESE NOTES ARE ALL OF THE OLD SERIES, secured after many years of painstaking search, and in the finest condition obtainable. These are the actual specimens which have been in Mr. Grinnell's celebrated collection.

THIS COLLECTION WILL CONTAIN all of the popular Silver and Gold Certificates, some very rare sheets, one of the greatest errors ever known, and the largest and finest offering of California Gold Bank Notes ever to be assembled by an individual, including some notes printed on white paper, probably the only specimens known to exist.

THIS SALE WILL BE THE GREATEST the world has ever known, and will take place on or about March 17, 1945, at Hotel Syracuse, Syracuse, New York. Limited space permits the mention of only a very few of the many attractive characteristics of the notes in this famous offering, which contains items of the highest interest to every collector.

BE SURE TO SECURE A CATALOGUE of this outstanding sale. The catalogue will be of the same high quality as the first one held on November 25, 1944. Only a limited number will be printed, and these will be available to all who participated in the first part of Mr. Grinnell's sale, and mailed free. To all others who wish a copy of the March sale, the price is $1.00 in advance for both catalogue and list showing prices realized.

THE PRICE LIST is fifty cents to all who order it before the sale. After the sale the price for the catalogue and price list will be $2.50; the price list alone, $1.00. I think I am safe in saying without fear that another such complete and valuable reference does not exist. Don't miss the golden opportunity of a lifetime. Two great things, the CATALOGUE OF THIS SALE and BONDS FROM UNCLE SAMMY, both are a splendid investment.

"The Nicest People Pass Thru This Door"

SUCH is the inscription on the door of the newest and most beautiful coin shop in New England. Since this door opened on Saturday, December 9th, for a preview showing and reception, the response has been more than gratifying. May I take this opportunity to thank my many friends for their expressions of best wishes.

Admittedly silver walls with bronze trimmings and a numismatic gallery do not make a coin shop successful. There must be other component ingredients, such as fair prices and grading, and a real, sincere desire to further the science of numismatics. The latter must include courtesy and friendliness—even if it means many interruptions to appraise a "rare" 1865 two-cent piece, or to sell several circulated cents at a nickel to a couple of "kids"—these "kids," we must not forget, are our future numismatists.

I hope to expand my present mail order business to include U. S. coins. I have a very nice stock to start with, but do not plan to issue a price list immediately. I should like to receive want lists, and am sure that I can help fill many gaping holes in your coin albums. My foreign coin lists will continue to be issued as usual. It is, from what many collectors have said, the finest and most complete minor coin list ever issued.

Having purchased a large collection of German Notgeld I am offering the following:

Porcelain: Large brown, gold edged or white, each 75c
Medium and small brown, each 50c

Metal: 15 all different $1.00
Brilliant uncirculated, each 15c

Postage and insurance extra on orders under $2.00.

REALIZED AT THE CELEBRATED J. F. BELL AUCTION SALE

EXPERIENCE:

Only actual experience in handling hundreds of important collections and realizing successful returns for the consignees, has made Stack's the OUTSTANDING NUMISMATIC INSTITUTION in AMERICA.

ABILITY:

Our expert opinions in appraising collections are usually within 5% or less of the actual selling prices in our auction sales. In March, 1944, the Col. J. W. Flanagan collection realized in excess of $87,000. Our estimate was $90,000. At the J. F. Bell Sale, we estimated the value below $140,000, and $131,700 was realized.

CONTACTS:

For the outstanding collectors of the United States, we are assembling important coins and collections and, due to this important advantage, we are confident we can realize more for your coins.

5,000 Catalogues are guaranteed to be sent to active buyers. Over 200 collectors from all parts of the Union attended our last sale and bought over $100,000 on the floor. The balance went to mail bidders.

THINK, and think well before submitting your collection for auction elsewhere. Our TERMS for selling your coins are not higher than those of any other firm, but PRICES realized for your collection WILL be higher.

CORRESPONDENCE INVITED.

COUNTERFEITING

by LAURENCE DWIGHT SMITH

THE Secret Service, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and the United States Mint have cooperated with the author to make possible this clear and complete exposition of the making and the counterfeiting of United States currency. An outstanding feature of the book is a genuine engraving shown together with a skilful "counterfeit" of it—comparison provides all the information essential to the detection of fake currency.

TO OUR ADVERTISERS

A number of comments have been received from collectors suggesting that when coins in rolls are offered, the number per roll be stated in every case. This would seem reasonable, especially since not all rolls contain the same number, and also because two different sizes of rolls are used in many banks for the same denomination.

Hereafter, will our advertisers please adopt this suggestion. New collectors especially will appreciate it.

NOTES AND QUERIES

From time to time it has been suggested that THE NUMISMATIST conduct a question and answer box. The Editor is willing to try it and will keep it up providing it is supported by the readers.

So as not to limit its scope we will call our new department Notes and Queries. Thus it will not be confined entirely to questions and answers which at times may be short in quality and quantity.

A question and answer department is not nearly as easy to conduct as most readers imagine. In the first place it is not within the editor's province to appraise a coin nor to pass judgment upon its genuineness. Nor is it possible to identify coins, except in unusual instances. Only questions of general interest can be included and this policy will exclude a large proportion of the average questions.

Eight out of ten questions received are from new collectors who want information readily obtainable in any good catalogue on United States coin. One out of ten is from a specialist who himself knows about all the information obtainable on his subject. The one remaining question is sometimes of genuine interest and it is from this ten per cent that the department will have to depend for material.

If every reader who is interested in this idea would sit right down and send his questions, suggestions and ideas to the Editor, it would be a big help.

Answers in Brief—

Write Ted Hammer—

The A. N. A. Librarian would be glad to suggest a list of the most useful books on Canadian coins. The books he recommends will answer all the questions contained in your letter.

?. ?. Detroit—

You forgot to sign your name. The U. S. Mint discontinued striking proof coins in 1942. You will have to buy the ones you need from a dealer. The Editor doesn't know if they will go up or down. War Bonds are a good investment too!

No Cents Coined in 1815—

With apologies to the director of your local museum, there were no cents coined in 1815. Why not suggest to him that THE NUMISMATIST be on the shelves in the museum's reading-room. Cost, $3 a year.

Entered as Second Class Matter at the Federalsburg, Md., Post Office under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Wooden Nickels—

A number of our advertisers occasionally advertise wooden nickels for sale. The Chase Bank Money Exhibit has a fine collection of them. Pay no attention to what your friends say. Take all the wooden nickels you like.

Send it Back—

Return the coin to the dealer. His ads have appeared in THE NUMISMATIST for many years and we know he will make a satisfactory adjustment. Mistakes will happen.

The War and Numismatics—

Sir:

"I'm too old to fight in this war, in fact I was too old to fight in World War I. But I'm trying to do my part, and at the time of the second War Bond Drive, I sold all my German coins and put the proceeds into War Bonds. I think that's the least every decent American collector could do. For myself, I'll never have another German coin, of any kind, in my collection."

—J. S., An Old Timer.

The above letter is typical of a number received by the Editor. The "Old Timer's" patriotism cannot be denied, but his attitude in regard to German coins is, in our opinion, ill-considered. We trust he received a good price for his German coins, and that their new owners consider them as metallic records of the past rather than symbols of Nazism.

—Editor.

Portrait of Edward VIII—

There are no portrait coins of Edward VIII. Coins bearing his name were issued for Fiji, New Guinea, East Africa and British West Africa. There are various mint-marks of some of these issues. Several are scarce. If you must have a numismatic portrait of Edward VIII you will find it on a Canadian bank note as well as on many medals.

Use the Library—

The 13 questions you ask cannot be answered here. The answers to them will be found in the 1945 Edition of the Standard Catalogue of U. S. Coins. You can borrow a copy from the A. N. A. Library.

No License Needed—

You do not need a license to deal in coins. The A. N. A. has no "stamp of approval." Your collecting experience does not necessarily qualify you as a dealer anymore than drinking martinis would qualify you to be a bartender. Good luck to you and be sure to get your advertising copy to Mr. Saxton before the 10th of the month.

The A. N. A. and A. N. S.—

The American Numismatic Association is not connected with the American Numismatic Society. The address of the latter is 156th Street & Broadway, New York City. Suggest that you visit their museum next time you are in New York.

Standard Classifications—

Harold L. Bowen, manager of the Detroit Coin Company, believes that something should be done about the classification of condition. He suggests that each dealer state his idea of "condition," and that an effort be made to standardize the classifications.

Hobby Program on Wireless—

William Brimelow of Elkhart, Indiana, reports that on December 1st, 6th, and 9th, he conducted radio programs on hobbies between four Elkhart high school students and four students living in the British Isles.

The programs were carried by short wave over the net works of the British Broadcasting Corporation, London, England.

Mr. Brimelow, who is known to his listeners as "Bill the Coin Man," is to be congratulated upon the keen interest he shows in educational hobbies.

CITY OF TORONTO CURRENCY AND CENTENNIAL MEDAL

By NORMAN B. MASON, District Secretary A. N. A., Toronto, Canada

It may seem strange that currency issued by the City of Toronto in 1845 should be linked in the same article with a medal issued in 1934. But it happened like this.

At a recent meeting of the Toronto Coin Club, one of the members, Jack Sharpe, displayed a medal struck in silver, issued to commemorate the centennial of the City of Toronto in 1934.

The writer, having participated in the commemoration, was especially interested, and in checking over the official Centennial Book for information concerning it (which he did not find), did come across an illustration and some data regarding notes issued by the City. While not being a collector of paper money, as District Secretary he felt it to be his duty to make further enquiries, which revealed the fact that notes were issued by the City of Toronto for approximately the period of 1837-1851. At first only the $1 denomination was used, but in six months' time this was followed by twos, and later by fours.

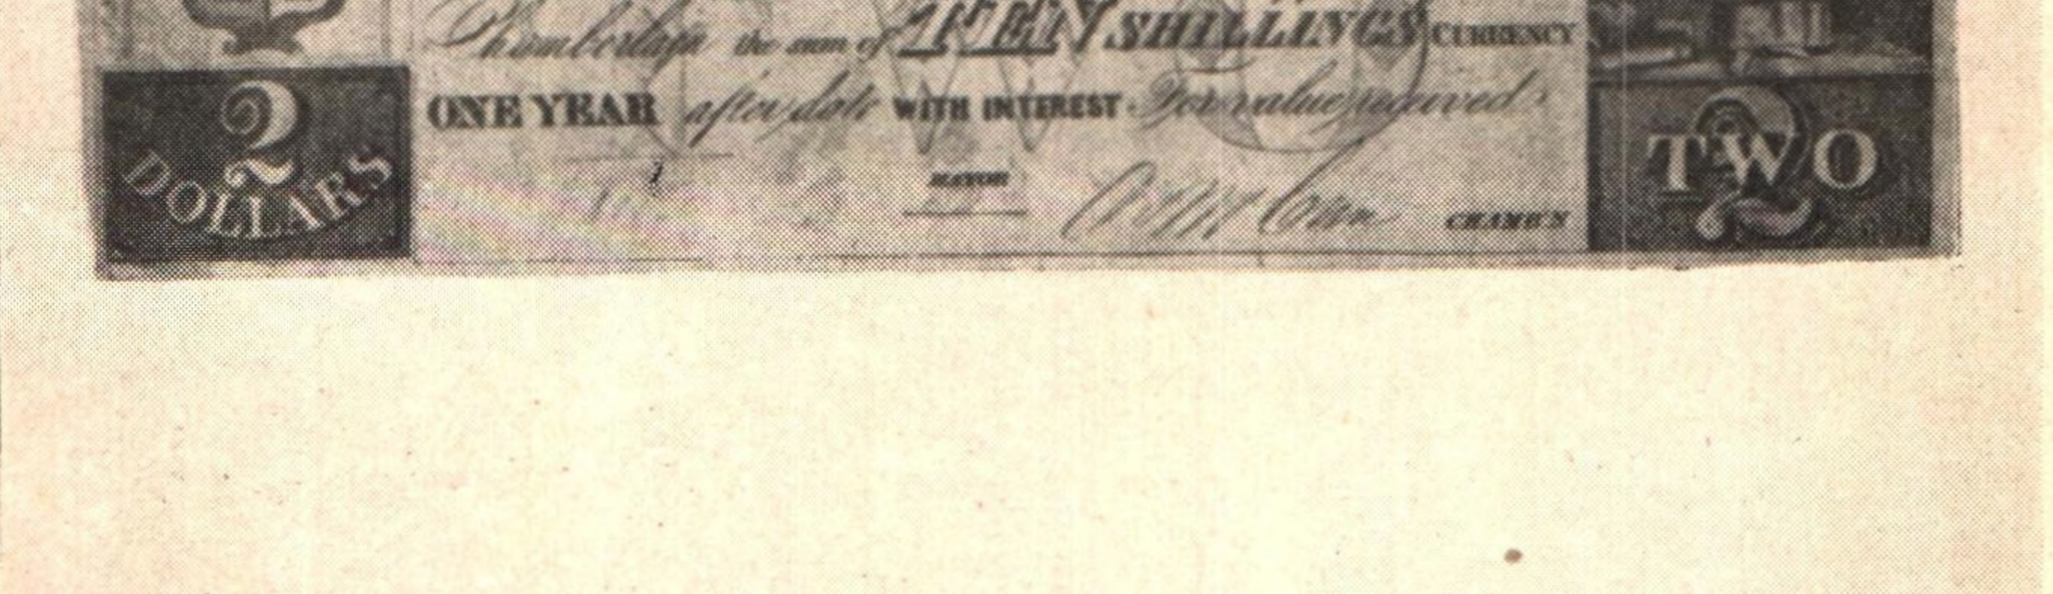

One of the $2 notes is in the City's "Treasure Room," but is faded and wrinkled. The Canadian Bank of Commerce, Toronto, from whom the photographs were obtained, has seven of the notes in its collection, three ones, three twos, and one four—all from different plates.

In describing the City's specimen the Centennial Book states: "It is engraved like an ordinary bank-note, a blank being left for the name of the person to whom issued, and is decorated by the Canadian (City's?) Arms and by a female figure which may be Bellona or Industry, or Diana or Boadicea or Britannia, or any other fabulous lady of especial charm. On the top left hand corner and thrice elsewhere appear the words 'Two Dollars,' the value of ten shillings, Halifax Currency."

The number and date of issue were also filled in by hand with pen and ink. They were engraved by John Ellis & Co., Bank Note Engravers, 8 King St. West, Toronto.

The notes were for a term of one year and were interest bearing, but the rate is not shown and this information does not now seem to be available. In 1851 £14,403 had been redeemed and £19,632 were outstanding, but the actual quantity issued is unknown. No further mention of the notes is made in the records after 1851, so it is presumed the redemption was speedy. This would probably be so, as the notes were for a definite term and undoubtedly interest would cease at maturity.

Reverting to the medal: the buildings on the obverse are the City Hall, flanked on the left by the Royal York Hotel, the largest in the British Empire, and on the right by the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The coat of arms is that of the City.

The central figure on the reverse is that of the Mace taken by U. S. forces during the war of 1812, and returned during the Centennial. In the four quarters are scenes of the old Fort. That in the first quarter is a cairn erected in 1934; second quarter, old Block House 1812; third quarter, old Fort gate, and fourth quarter, old cannon.

The young lady in the accompanying photograph was in a ballroom scene, and the writer is pictured as one of the early Indians, at a pageant which was given during the Centennial Celebration.

FEATURE ARTICLE BY O. P. EKLUND

Under preparation is an illustrated article on the Copper Coins of Denmark and her Possessions by O. P. Eklund of Spokane, Washington. This is a much needed catalogue and should prove of real value to collectors throughout the entire world. Mr. Eklund is one of the outstanding authorities on the minor coins of the world and THE NUMISMATIST is indeed fortunate in having him as a contributor.

The Crest

The crest was originally used to distinguish a leader in battle. In order that his followers could recognize him instantly, he would attach some object to his helmet, a small branch of a tree, a knot of ribbon, a feather, or a piece of colored cloth. Anything would do so long as it was easily recognizable at a distance. At first, the leader would probably use anything that was handy, but later it became permanent. This was the real beginning of heraldry and the device or coat of arms upon a shield was not used until a much later date.

The right of bearing a crest was considered even more honorable than the coat of arms, for to the latter a noble would succeed by birth, but to obtain the former he must have been a knight in actual service of the king.

The earliest recorded royal concession of a crest was by Edward III, who, in 1335, conferred upon William de Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, an eagle, and, "that he might the more decently preserve the honor of the said Crest" the king bestowed upon him, at the same time, the Manors of Wodeton, Frome, Whitfield, Mershwode, Worth, and Pole.

Toward the end of the 13th century, the crest was often affixed to the head of the charger in addition to the helmet of the knight, thus making both horse and rider more conspicuous.

The crest belonged essentially to the person of a military commander and it necessarily follows that ladies were not allowed to display them over their coats of arms, which prohibition still obtains. A maiden lady has no right whatever to use the crest of her family. Further than this, she has no right to use the coat of arms except on a "lozenge" or diamond shaped shield.

The question is sometimes asked, in the case of a married couple having no children, the wife dies first, can the husband continue to use the arms of his late wife? Yes, he may use them for his life time. In the event of marrying again and having children by his second wife, they, of course, have no right to them whatever.

I have frequently had a man say to me "I have the right to use six crests," to which my reply has been "You might just as well tell me that you had six heads, it would make just as much sense." His answer has always been that the crest of such and such ancestors were thus and so and that, of course, he had the right to use them all. Now, naturally, some of these ancestors were women and he was helping himself to their family crests, a thing which he had no right whatever to do. These ladies, not having the right to use a crest themselves, had no right to pass on to another the thing that they themselves did not possess.

If a man's name is Talbot, he can use the Talbot crest and that alone, no matter how many quarterings he may have. There are a very few exceptions where the College of Heralds allowed a family to use two crests, for some very special reason, but these exceptions are so rare that they may be discounted. As I stated in the former article, this rule is not followed on the Continent of Europe, and we show a picture of a coin of Saxony which shows almost as many crests as quarterings. True, this is a coin of a principality but private families did exactly the same thing.

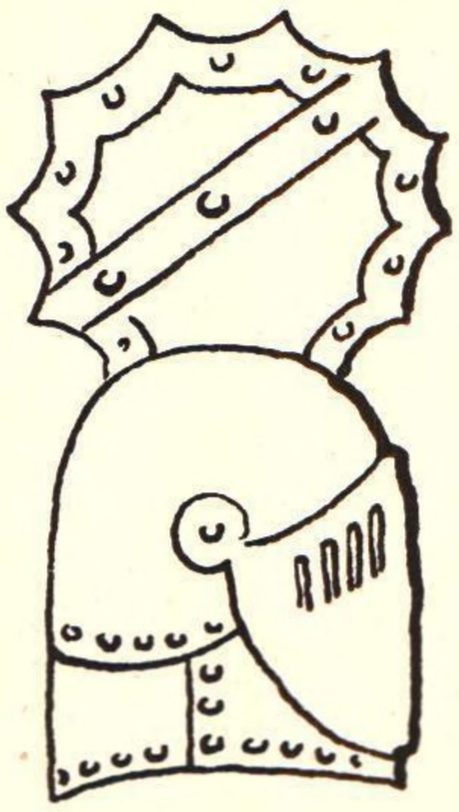

The crest being originally worn on a helmet, it continues to be so placed in depicting a coat of arms.

Helmets

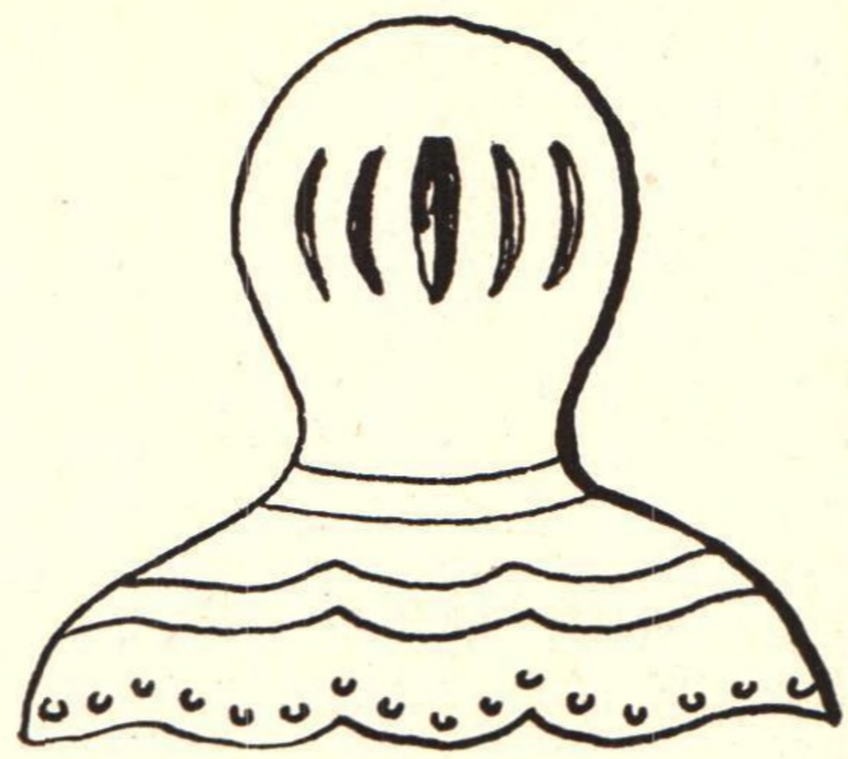

Now these helmets are not of the same design, they vary according to the degree of nobility to which the bearer belongs. The royal helmet is of gold. It stands "affronte," that is, full face. The helmet of dukes and marquesses is also "affronte," but is made of steel with five gold bars over the face opening. The helmets of earls, viscounts, and barons are silver, garnished with gold. They are represented in profile. Baronets and knights have their helmets of steel garnished with silver. They also are placed "affronte." The helmets of esquires and gentlemen are of plain steel and presented in profile.

Wreath

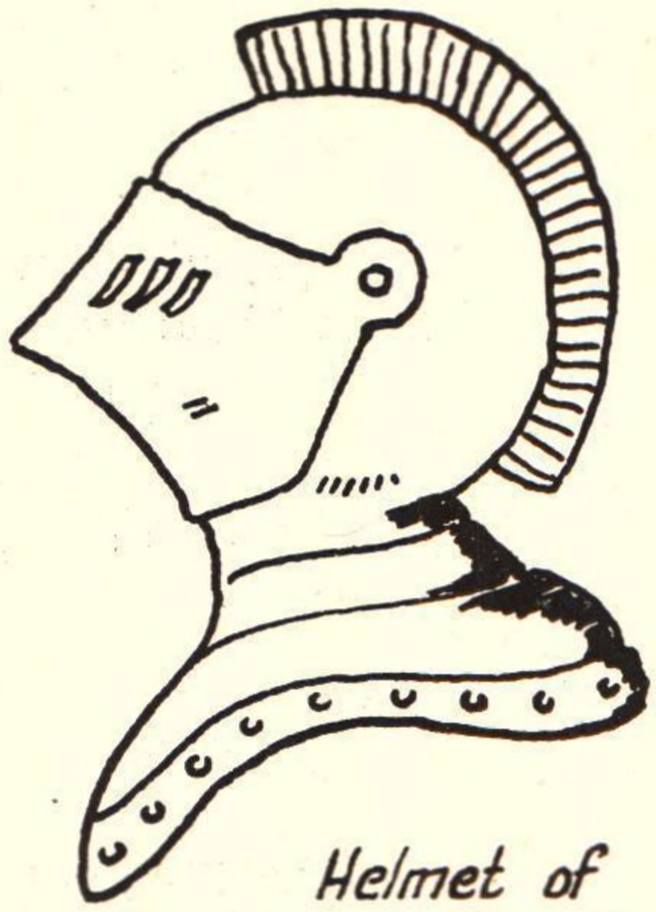

The helmet was formerly encircled with a wreath, which was composed of two strands of twisted silk on which the crest appeared to be supported, and is so represented in modern heraldry. The wreath or bandeau was probably adopted from the Saracens by the Crusaders, who found that it afforded an additional defense for the head from the heat of the sun, as well as from the blows of the enemy. The colors are obtained from the principal colors on the shield. Thus, if the principal colors on the shield were red and silver, the colors of the wreath would be red and white.

Supporters

Supporters are the figures of men, beasts, birds and so forth, who stand on either side of the shield and appear to support it. Of their origin and period of their introduction there exist no authentic records. They probably date from about the time of Edward the Third. Some authorities incline to the belief that they originated from the shields of knights being supported at tournaments by servants grotesquely habited, so as to represent Saracens, lions, dragons and so forth. Except for the nobility, they may be used only by special grant from the crown.

Mottoes

The motto is an expressive word or a short pithy sentence which accompanies the crest or coat of arms. It usually embodies some sentiment of a religious, war like or patriotic import, such as "Pro rege et patria." Some of them seem most extraordinary, as for example, the motto of the Martins of Gloucestershire, "If you look at Martins' ape, Martins' ape will look at you." Another example is that of Baron Fermoy whose family name is Roche and their crest is a sea-eagle standing on a rock holding a rock in its claw with the motto, "Mon Dieu est ma roche."

Mantling

The mantling, lambrequin, or cointise is the ornamental accessory which generally appears behind and around the escutcheon. It was probably devised to protect the helmet from the rain and sun, in the same manner that the surcoat protected the armor. Their colors are derived in the same way as those of the wreath; namely from the principal colors of the shield.

Hatchments

Hatchments are hardly ever used at the present time, but it may not be amiss to give a short history of their use and the rules which governed them. A hatchment is a lozenge-shaped frame charged with a shield of arms and usually affixed to the front of a house on the death of one of its principal inmates. In the execution of hatchments, certain rules are observed, by which it is clearly indicated whether the deceased person were single or married, a widower or a widow, and also the rank to which he or she was entitled.

If the deceased person were a bachelor, the whole of the field on which the shield is placed should be black and all the accessories, such as coronet, but, supporters, and so forth, should appear in the composition. But in place of the family motto, some legend of a religious tendency was commonly inscribed on the motto scroll. If the deceased were an unmarried lady, her arms would be charged upon a lozenge, but both crest and motto would be omitted. There are still further rules governing this practice.

Coronets

Each order of nobility was entitled to a crown and these crowns varied according to the rank of the noble. The duke's coronet is composed of a circle of richly chased gold resting upon ermine and having on the rim eight strawberry leaves. The coronet of a marquis has four strawberry leaves, with as many pearls set upon points. The earl's coronet has eight pearls set on as many lofty rays or spikes alternating with small strawberry leaves. The coronet of a viscount contains 14 or 16 pearls. The baron's coronet is practically the same as that of the viscount except that it has but six pearls.

Flags

The custom of depicting heraldic devices upon flags has been practised from the remotest period of antiquity. Indeed, (as I have before remarked), flags were probably charged with certain distinctive figures ages before such devices were borne upon shields. In the Bayeux tapestry, some of the Normans appear bearing lances to which are attached small flags bearing a cross. This can scarcely be considered a Norman heraldic charge, for the cross was universally adopted as a symbol by all Christian nations, and was impressed on Saxon coins long before the Norman conquest.

The present British flag or Union Jack devised in 1606 would, in heraldic language, be described as follows: "Azure; The saltires of St. Patrick and St. Andrew, quarterly per saltire, counter changed, argent and gules. The latter fimbriated by the second; surmounted by the cross of St. George of the third, fimbriated as the last." I include this description merely as a sample of blazoning, about the most difficult I have ever seen. The Union Jack is not to be confused with the Royal Standard, consisting of the quartered arms of the United Kingdom, which is of a much earlier date.

Before closing this article, I would like to return for just a moment to Continental heraldry. In France in 1789, amongst the general annihilation of all aristocratic distinctions, the office of "Juge d'armes" corresponding to the College of Heralds, was abrogated. It was restored under Napoleon, to be again extinguished in 1848. A law was passed in 1856, forbidding the unlawful assumption of surnames, but no mention was made of armorial bearings, hence it follows that in France at the present time, any one is at liberty to devise and bear whatever arms his inclination dictates. The same situation occurred in Germany after the first World War together with many other countries.

[This is the second of three articles on heraldry. The third will appear in a later issue.]

FROM THE DESK OF THE GENERAL SECRETARY

During the past two months the General Secretary has had to give most of his attention to the recording and acknowledgment of membership dues. They have been entered to record as fast as received but there has been a slight delay in some cases in mailing out the membership cards. Members are reminded that the March issue of THE NUMISMATIST will not be sent to those in arrears for dues. Please send payment promptly even if statement failed to reach you.

Changes of address are not acknowledged but will be published in the second issue of THE NUMISMATIST following their receipt. Please check on this and be sure that the correction has been made properly. To conserve space in THE NUMISMATIST, the publication of a change of address will hereafter not include the old address. This may usually be found by those interested by reference to the Directory. Minor corrections in address such as the addition of postal zone numbers, changes of rank for those in the armed forces, etc. will not be published as changes of address but correction will be made on the mailing list of THE NUMISMATIST.

The General Secretary hereby acknowledges receipt of communications for several Clubs in connection with the resolution regarding the publication of a numismatic encyclopedia. These will be referred to the Executive Board and official comment and action will be announced in due time by that Board. It is probable that no action can be taken before the next annual convention of the Association.

The General Secretary has received numerous requests for information about the regulations for collecting gold by collectors. A complete copy of the regulations is being published in THE NUMISMATIST as a guide for collectors.

From time to time the General Secretary receives complaints from collectors and dealers with regard to various private transactions between themselves. It is impossible to undertake a complete investigation or act as judge in attempting to settle these matters. Most of these complaints are the result of misunderstanding, unavoidable delays, unintentional errors, and the like. They are quickly adjusted, for nearly everyone intends to be honest. Cases of fraud or suspicion of fraud are legal matters and should be reported to the Post Office. Matters having to do with advertisements appearing in THE NUMISMATIST should be reported to the Business Manager.

Notice to District Secretaries

Supplies of stationery, application blanks, extra copies of THE NUMISMATIST, and other needed items may be obtained from the General Secretary on request. District Secretaries are requested to notify the General Secretary of any special news items pertaining to members in their districts, and in particular, to notify the General Secretary of the death of any member in their district. In recommending any applicant for membership, please be sure that such applicant meets the membership requirements, especially with regard to minimum age requirements. Also be sure that address includes postal zone number if there is one.

Some Special Membership Requirements

Junior Membership. This class of membership is open to persons between the ages of 18 and 21. Membership dues and privileges are same as for regular membership (except Junior members are not eligible to hold office in the Association). Application must be signed by a parent or guardian of the applicant in addition to proposal by a member. Membership numbers are from same sequence as those for regular members but preceded by letter "J." This prefix is automatically dropped when member reaches the age of 21.

Associate Membership. This class of membership is open to close relatives of regular or life members, living at same address. Dues are $1.00 per year and include all privileges of membership except THE NUMISMATIST. Applications for Associate Membership must be proposed by the holder of the regular or life membership with which it is associated. No other vouchers or references are required.

Life Membership. This class of membership is open to regular or associate members who have been members of the Association for at least five years. Fee is $50. Applications must be proposed by a life member or elected officer of the Association. A regular application blank may be used. Corporate Life Membership has been discontinued, except for those already in this class.

Honorary Membership. Election to Honorary Membership is by Resolution only, passed by the Association assembled in annual convention. Regular or Life members who are elected to Honorary Membership retain all the rights and privileges of the regular membership, but they do not pay regular membership dues.

Subscription Transfers. Non-member subscribers to THE NUMISMATIST may apply for membership, and if accepted, the unexpired portion of their subscriptions is credited to membership dues. It is necessary to pay only the balance of the dues for the current calendar year at time application is made.

Mid-year applications. Applications received between January 1 and July 1 and which are accompanied by the annual dues of $3 are entered for the calendar year and the full volume of THE NUMISMATIST is furnished if available. It often happens that certain back numbers are not available. In this case, credit is given on dues for following year for any issues not available. If back numbers are not desired, subscription may begin with current issue and dues payment for balance of the calendar year is at rate of 25c per month. After July 1, membership dues for the balance of the calendar year are $1.50, including six-month subscription from July. Any available back numbers may be obtained for 25c each additional.

In the next issue of THE NUMISMATIST this page will be devoted partly to the answers to certain specific questions that have been received in the mail.

FLYING EAGLE CENTS OF 1856 INCREASING IN VALUE

"One of the most remarkable instances of the increase in fictitious value, in the United States, of a single coin, applies to the little nickel-cent of the year 1856. When the old copper cents were about to be dispensed with, as a legal tender, experiments were made to introduce a smaller and more convenient one-cent coin; hence, in 1855, experiments were made in nickel, and after repeated trials with large and small Eagles (so-called "Buzzards," and "Crooked Necks,") the nickel-cent, with flying eagle of date 1856, was produced and sent on its course in small sums throughout the United States. At that time any person could walk into the mint and get a hundred of the new coins. Now comes the sequel, showing fluctuations."

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Buffalo, N. Y.

VIII. ITALY

J. Naples and Sicily

The dynasties of southern Italy and the island off the toe of the boot have always been of foreign origin. In the Middle Ages Norman rulers were succeeded by members of the House of Hohenstaufen and the House of Anjou. Spanish rule lasted from 1443-1707 (1713 in Sicily), and after five years of the Savoy dynasty came thirteen years of Austrian rule. In 1733 the territory was conquered by Don Carlos of Bourbon, son of Philip V of Spain, who become king in 1738, Spain renouncing all claims. Don Carlos succeeded to the Spanish throne in 1759 and abdicated his Italian one in favor of his eight year old son Ferdinand. Ferdinand's reign, though hectic and interrupted, was a long one: 1759-1825. He married a daughter of Maria Theresa, Maria Carolina, a determined and forceful woman.

After the death of her sister on the guillotine, the queen naturally used all her powerful influence to oppose France, and Naples went to war in 1798 only to have the French capture the city of Naples in January of 1799. The court fled to Palermo, the capital of Sicily. The Parthenopaean Republic, which was set up on the mainland, fell before Cardinal Ruffo with the aid of Lord Nelson, and Ferdinand moved back to Naples to institute his own reign of terror against the liberals. Reestablished officially by the Peace of Amiens in 1802, Ferdinand played a double game until he exhausted Napoleon's patience in 1805 and was again obliged to retire to Sicily, where for nine years he enjoyed the protection of the British navy and the sound advice of Lord William Bentinck. Two coinages of different denominations and designs had been issued, one for Naples and one for Sicily. They are readily distinguishable by the shield on the Naples' reverse and the eagle on the Sicilian, as well as by the fact that Ferdinand was the IV of Naples but only the III of Sicily as the coins indicate. This phase of Ferdinand's coinage came to an end in Naples in 1805 and in Sicily in 1810.

In the meantime Napoleon had installed his eldest brother Joseph as King of Naples. This well-meaning but not overly gifted man found himself faced with constant royalist uprisings and a rather restricted sphere of influence. With the removal of the Spanish royal family, Joseph, after only two years in Italy, was transferred to Madrid as King of Spain.

To replace Joseph, Napoleon turned to another member of his family, his sister Caroline's husband, Joachim Murat. This son of an innkeeper was one of the Empire's most able generals and one of Napoleon's most devoted followers. He continued to work with Napoleon on the battlefields of Europe, but in Naples his innate intelligence soon showed him a cleavage between Napoleon's plan for Europe and the good of his subjects. A break between the two came in 1814, but when Napoleon returned from Elba, Murat rushed loyally to his aid. A foolish raid into Calabria in 1815 in the hope of regaining his Naples throne put him into the hands of his enemies, and he was court-martialed and shot.

Ferdinand had returned with his court to Naples. In 1816 he welded the two parts of his country into a single state and assumed the title Ferdinand I, King of the Two Sicilies. The reforms forced upon him previously were abrogated, and in 1820 a revolt broke out, put down with Austrian aid. Autocracy was reestablished in the midst of a series of horrible state trials in which many of the best citizens of the realm were imprisoned or executed.

Francis I succeeded to the throne upon his father's death in 1825. An unbridled libertine, he instituted a reign distinguished as one of the most corrupt in modern times. He died, ungrieved, in 1830.

When Ferdinand II succeeded his father, hope was revived for the nation. The death of his first wife and his second marriage to Maria Theresa of Austria produced, however, a reactionary regime. Conspiracies, rebellions, arrests, and executions culminated in the Revolution of 1848. Ferdinand was forced to grant a constitution, which he rescinded as soon as possible. The war against Austria in aid of Savoy, undertaken by popular demand, he stopped before it was hardly started. The 1850's saw savage battling in Sicily as the island tried to throw off the Bourbon influence. Ferdinand acquired the derisive epithet of "Bomba" from having ordered the bombardment of the principal cities of the realm in the hope of reducing them to obedience. His death in 1859 brought an almost universal sigh of relief.

Francis II, the last King of the Two Sicilies, followed his father for a brief reign of two years. Garibaldi had seized Sicily. In 1860 the mainland defenses were breached and Naples fell. A few strongholds of the royalists held out until March of 1861, when the country was amalgamated into the new Kingdom of Italy.

CORRECTIONS AND ADDITIONS WANTED

As interest seems to warrant it and as the author hopes to produce this material in book form after the war, he will complete the European series, which will continue to appear under the new editor of the Numismatist. Any additional material or any corrections to what has appeared or will appear will be greatly appreciated. With the completion of the Italian series next month, Russia and Poland will be treated, followed by Switzerland, Austria and Hungary, Spain, and the remaining countries. While the data on the coins of the German states is about complete, it is not intended to include it in the present series.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 10th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Business Manager (see above). Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

NATIONAL COIN WEEK

April 21-29, 1945

A. N. A. president Martin F. Kortjohn announced at the 1944 convention in Chicago that our Association will observe National Coin Week, April 21 to 29 this year.

The committee together with all club and individual participants will benefit from this selection of dates because Coin Week activities will not conflict with those of Eastertime and will allow greater freedom for placing displays particularly in local stores.

The theme appropriate to this year's Coin Week celebration is—

"The Sesquicentennial of the Eagle and Half Eagle"

The March issue of THE NUMISMATIST will present more about this theme and suggestions for club and individual activities, radio and newspaper publicity and other means of bringing the educational and pleasure values of our hobby to the attention of the general public throughout America.

Prizes, as in the past, will be awarded to local clubs and individual members. Club officers should start now to formulate their plans. It is not too early to organize local Coin Week committees and make arrangements for exhibit space and newspaper publicity.

Appointments to the various activity committees and other announcements will be found in the March issue. Meanwhile, for information or assistance write to—

Notice to Advertisers

It is believed that setting back the deadline for advertising copy from the familiar 15th of the month to the 10th, an observance of the change would result in earlier mailing of the magazine—a desirable thing to advertisers and readers alike.

The main cause of delayed delivery for over two years has been and still remains in the postal service. Several thousand experienced members of the Department are in the Armed Forces, and replacements have been difficult. The publishing business has likewise had its severe problems.

This leeway of five days will be of great help to our printers, the J. W. Stowell Company, and should meet with no serious objection from our advertisers. It is entirely a war measure, to be erased as soon as conditions permit.

Will our advertisers therefore send in their copy to the Business Manager by March 10 for the April issue, and remain on that schedule until further notice. Their cooperation will be sincerely appreciated.

THE EDITOR'S CORNER

THE EDITOR TAKES A POLL

In line with the institutions devoted to discovering public opinion, your editor conducted one in interest of coin-collecting. We asked ten coin-collecting citizens to estimate the number of coin-collectors in the United States. Here are the results; one, 1,000,000; two, 100,000; two, 50,000; four, 10,000; one, no idea whatsoever.

In return for the information, we had to answer a lot of questions concerning our definition of a collector. Can a schoolboy who is working on a pennyboard be considered a collector? Would a speculator owning $50,000 worth of commemorative coins come under our classification? How about the medal and token collectors? Our answers were "No," "No," and "Yes." We have no objections to the first two calling themselves collectors, but did not want them included in the poll. The answers received showed a wide difference of opinion, too wide in fact to allow even a rough estimate. A more accurate estimate could be arrived at if the dealers, club secretaries, and district secretaries could be canvassed. The opinions of all readers would be highly appreciated.

MERITORIOUS AWARDS

There is a brisk demand nowadays for military decorations and awards. The stocks of New York dealers have been quite depleted and prices are reaching new high levels.

This state of affairs is caused by vanity. Not satisfied with "V" pins and similar patriotic emblems, women have taken to wearing military decorations. They show an utter disregard of propriety being more interested in the color of the ribbon than in "distinguished service."

At a nearby table the other night we saw a dowager wearing a medal and bar given to those who in 1860, took part in the relief of Lucknow. On second thought, she may have been there at that.

MARIA THERESA THALERS

The Maria Theresa thaler, that is mentioned elsewhere in this issue, has a peculiar status in that it cannot be considered as the official coinage of any single government. It is valued by those who accept it because of its silver content, its handsome design, and its splendid reputation.

According to press reports from abroad it is yet a popular coin and shows no sign of losing its unusual and enviable position. Considering all this, it is strange that one of the Allied Nations has not taken up the "monopoly" to strike these pieces for the use of armies stationed in countries where they are so readily accepted.

Answers in Brief—

Letters received and contents noted. Thanks for the bouquets and brickbats. THE NUMISMATIST is behind time because the printer is short-handed and the mails are unusually slow. J. W. Stowell, who has been printing THE NUMISMATIST for more than a quarter of a century, would appreciate receiving the copy a few days in advance of the usual date. So until conditions return to normal the dead-line will be on the 10th of each month instead of the 15th. Advertisers and club secretaries please note.

Space is tight, advertising is heavy, the subscription list is large and our allotment of paper is limited. On top of this, our typewriter has been out of order for the last week and the repair man "has to send to the factory for parts." You don't believe it! O. K. for you, pal. But Saxton has been a real pal. He anticipated all my difficulties and helped me avoid them. Without his help my work would be much more difficult.

Worthwhile awards will be given to the outstanding contributors to THE NUMISMATIST during 1945. Shortly there will be published a list of suggestions as well as a style sheet for the use of contributors. It's all ready and only awaits space. Two medals and $500 cash will be distributed.

ADDITIONAL NOTES ON THE MARIA THERESA THALER

In the January 1944 issue of THE NUMISMATIST, J. Hunt Deacon asks twenty-one questions in regard to the Levant or Maria Theresa thalers. Three of the questions have to do with the coinage monopoly of these pieces. In particular, Mr. Deacon asks, "What is the authority for the statement that the Italian government purchased the dies and privilege from Austria?"

Through the kindness and industry of Sawyer McA. Mosser, Librarian of the American Society, we are able to reprint free translations of items, from several foreign publications, and an extract from the London Mint Report, all having a direct bearing on the question.

Additional information exists but the following quotations appear to answer Mr. Deacon's question in a conclusive manner.

"Several Italian newspapers have referred to an item appearing in the Austrian Nachtausgabe according to which Austria has ceded to Italy the right of coining Maria Theresa thalers, which, it is said, will in the future be struck at the mint of Rome. As a result, the government of Addis Abbaba will be dependent on Italy from now on for its metallic currency."
From Rassegna Numismatica, Vol. 32, No. 11-12 (Nov.-Dec. 1935) p. 416.

"The Austrian newspaper Reichspost carries an article which bears light on the recent controversy over the supposed relinquishment of Austria's monopoly of coinage of the Maria Theresa thalers to Italy. The paper asserts that the Vienna mint has not coined any Maria Theresa thalers since the beginning of hostilities in East Africa. The contract for Maria Theresa thalers concluded in 1933 with the silver firm of Johnson Matthey & Co., and which expired in the Spring of 1935, was not renewed. Then the Italians attempted to get thalers struck at Vienna but this failed because it was impossible to get a supply of the necessary silver elsewhere than in the London market, and at that time Italy wished to avoid London purchases for political reasons. Austria, therefore, ceased coinage of the Maria Theresa thalers and the Reichspost believes that Italy will now begin the coinage herself and use silver obtained through recall of silver lira coinage."
From Blätter für Münzfreunde, Jhg. 71, No. 1-2 (Jan.-Feb. 1936), p. 405.

"From the customary anti-Fascist sources propaganda has been circulating abroad to discredit the Maria Theresa thalers coined at the mint of Rome since the relinquishing of the coinage rights of these pieces by the mint of Vienna. According to these persistent slanderers the Italian thalers are said to be of inferior quality and therefore not well received. Such propaganda which aims to place trust in other thalers illegitimately made deserves a denial, since it is well known that the Maria Theresa thalers, struck on the original Austrian dies, correspond perfectly with the original full weight of 28.0668 grams and a fineness of 833.333 millesimi."
From Numismatica (published by Santamaria), Vol. 4, 1938, p. 46.

"The only 'trade dollar' which now survives is therefore the well known Maria Theresa Thaler. This handsome coin, which bears on the obverse the effigy of the Empress Maria Theresa, on the reverse her Imperial Arms with the date 1780, and in raised letters around the rim the inscription "IUSTITIA ET CLEMENTIA," is not legal tender by the enactment of any of the territories in which it circulates—which include the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, the Colony of Aden and the Arab territories along the Red Sea. Nevertheless, it persists by long custom as the principal coin of commerce in that quarter of the globe, and there has recently sprung up a strong demand for fresh supplies. Owing to political circumstances, upon the nature of which it is beyond my province to comment, these thalers are no longer obtainable as they used to be by British firms bringing silver to be converted into coin at the Vienna Mint. In order to meet the resulting embarrassment and dislocation to British Trade, I received authority in 1936 to mint supplies in London and during that year some 150,000 of these handsome coins were struck at the Royal Mint. The supply is proceeding at a greatly accelerated rate during the current year, but owing to the extreme congestion to which I have already alluded, I have hitherto been far from able to meet all demands, and the problem of allotment to the traders who are pressing for supplies has presented some difficulty. It is not easy to understand why exactly there is such a demand for these thalers; sooner or later the territories concerned will no doubt reach saturation point, particularly as some of the Continental Mints are now following our example. But, during the past year—though considerable quantities of the same coin are being struck at the Roman Mint to the order of the Italian Government for use in Abyssinia—the demand has greatly exceeded supplies and the coins have consequently stood at a considerable premium in the territories in which they circulate."

Under the heading, "The following new dies were made in 1936:"

"Trade token, Maria Theresa Thaler.—Obverse and reverse matrices and punches for these coins were made following the old design, together with steel segments for impressing the raised letters on the edge of the piece."

From Report of the Deputy Master of the Royal Mint for 1935-36, pp. 18-19, 52.

JAPANESE INVASION NOTES FOR DUTCH NEW GUINEA

By Flying Officer S. V. HAGLEY, Royal Australian Air Force in the Pacific

The following set of notes are being found in large quantities in Hollandia, Biak, Noemfoor and other Dutch New Guinea territories. There are seven varieties in the series, 10, 5, 1 and ½ Guilders and 10, 5 and 1 Cents.

In the three lower values the inscription, in three lines is DE JAPANSCHE REGEERING EEN, VIJF, and TIEN CENTS, respectively. The printing is apparently lithographic and the quality of the paper is poor.

A small seal or cartouche of Japanese characters occurs on the obverse of all of the notes together with an inscription in Japanese.

DEATH OF HOWARD R. NEWCOMB

Howard R. Newcomb died suddenly at his home in Los Angeles, California, on January 7th, 1945.

Mr. Newcomb joined the Association in 1893 and held membership number 91. His greatest numismatic interest was in large cents of which he formed one of the finest known collections.

In 1925 he published a treatise on the cents of 1801-2-3, which remains the recognized work on the subject. Only last year his monumental work on the cents from 1816 to 1857 was published.

AMONG US A PRINCE HAS FALLEN

A Tribute to the Late Lamented Howard R. Newcomb

By CARL WURTZBACH, Past President of the A. N. A.

The news that Howard R. Newcomb had passed away came as a distinct shock with profound regret to the entire coin collecting fraternity while to the few remaining associates going back to the early days of Howard's interest in coins the shock was augmented by a feeling of deep sorrow and personal loss. So vibrant was his personality and so prominent was he in our science it seems impossible to realize that he is gone. It is too early to appraise the final place history will accord him in the history of United States Numismatics but of this we can be certain it will be high and so far as our large cent series is concerned near the top. A member of the great triumvirate—Clapp-Hines-Newcomb, the result of whose collaboration and unceasing efforts in research and attribution produced the volumes describing the series mentioned will forever remain as a monument to their achievements. Space forbids recording his various activities or references to personal associations. However, I do wish to say I was privileged an intimate friendship enhanced by a like interest in his favorite series for nearly fifty years, a rich heritage indeed. To Howard's scholarly attainments were added a great personal charm, integrity of character and capacity to form lasting friendships. To him the younger members especially of our fraternity owe a debt that never can be paid excepting by the way he himself would indicate. Study, that you may know and come to love as I did our United States Coinage of Cents 1793-1857. To his family so sadly bereft we extend our deep heartfelt sympathy.

On the monument of one of England's greatest are inscribed these words, "O rare Ben Jonson." How appropriately we can say and feel, O rare Howard Newcomb, what more can we say.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

THE COIN COLLECTORS' JOURNAL (Raymond Inc.) November-December. Under the title, "The Lima pieces of George II of England," Robert I. Nesmith has produced an authoritative numismatic article as well as a highly interesting account of "the Saga of Comm. Anson and the Centurian." Mr. Nesmith employs contemporary newspaper, magazine, and eye-witness accounts to form the basis of his story, much of which is written in narrative style. The quaint old diary records make delightful reading, for the "King's Men" recorded their activities and impressions in a crisp, salty style. The article is illustrated with four unusual prints from the author's collection of pirate lore.

Phares O. Sigler continues with his popular series on the coins of Colonial America, covering in this, the 4th chapter, the early issues of Maryland. Other articles discuss the future of numismatic literature, the coin market, and Confederate currency.

SECOND CENTENNIAL OF THE CHILEAN MINT

By JOAQUIN MARCO

Superintendencia de la Casa de Moneda y Especies Valoradas

The Mint of Santiago de Chile (Casa de Moneda) founded by Philip V, King of Spain and Emperor of the West Indies, in the year 1743, is one of the oldest established mints in America; only the mints of Mexico, Potosí, Lima and Santa Fe de Nueva Granada were in operation before.

The Royal Order signed on the 1st. day of October 1743, appointed Don Francisco García de Huidobro perpetual Treasurer of the Mint, the post to be retained by his heirs and successors, with all the honors and perquisites that those employments enjoyed at that time. It was stipulated that all expenses in manufacturing, and the salaries of operators and employees of the Mint, were to be paid by said Don Francisco García de Huidobro and he was likewise allowed to perceive all profits derived from the meltings or operations. In fact, the mentioned act of the King gave special privileges to Don Francisco García de Huidobro, not only in the coining of money but also in the monopoly of the metals and in unlimited intervention over the mines in exploitation. The original document is kept in the Manuscript Section of the National Library at Santiago.

The first coin issued by the Mint is the gold "half onza" with the effigy of Ferdinandus VI, year 1749; but the first coins struck, as a trial, were six pieces of gold: three "onzas" and three "half onzas" with the head of Philip V, year 1744.

All the coinage bear the mint mark "S" with an "o" on top; abbreviation of Santiago. The fineness, weight, stamp, etc. of the early coins were specified by the Royal Order of the 9th of June, 1728 for all the mints of Spain and America.

The Mint was operated as a private enterprise of the Huidobro family until 1772 when the Crown of Spain took it over. Chile became independent in 1810, but the coinage produced during the following years shows the head of Ferdinandus VII, King of Spain, because the unsettlement of the epoch made it impossible to engrave new designs.

The first coin with the inscription of the Republic was the silver peso of 1817. The first gold onza with the new die has the date 1818. The decimal system of money was established in 1851.

The Chilean Mint and the Bank Note Plant (Talleres de Especies Valoradas) were reorganized in 1930 under the name Superintendencia de la Casa de Moneda y Especies Valoradas. The buildings and equipment are quite modern and with capacity to supply the currency, stamps, bonds and other printed matter issued by the Government.

During 1942 and 1943, working 16 and 24 hours the Mint maintained a daily production of 350,000 pieces. No gold coins have been struck since 1932; copper alloy coins for Chile made most of the production; but in addition to these there were executed for the Republic of Uruguay 19,720,000 silver pieces with a total value of 9,008,000 pesos. (One peso of Uruguay is equivalent to 60 cents U. S. A.).

To commemorate its Second Centennial the Superintendencia de la Casa de Moneda y Especies Valoradas de Chile has issued a medal and will publish a book with historical notes and a list of coins and medals produced since 1743. It is known that some of the pieces which have circulated in Chile are very rare now, and it is feared that it will be impossible to obtain a reproduction of all of them from the public and private collections in the country.

HISTORY TEACHING WITH COINS

By HARVEY L. SHERWOOD, Instructor of World History

Kalamazoo (Michigan) Central High School

Had you available a really representative collection of coins and medallic art dating from the Sixth Century B. C. to the present time, could you make your teaching of English Literature or World History any more realistic and enjoyable to your pupils? Could you resist using your collection of the best known (available) portrait coins of the rulers of Ancient Egypt, Ancient Greece, Ancient Rome, Mediaeval and Modern Europe, America and Asia? As for the chronological development of dress, customs, religious symbols and figures, authentic sculpture and engraving, architecture, biographical data, scenes from war and peace—when you have such original sources of history for comparisons and contrasts—would you not find it difficult to keep your hobby in miserliness?

It would seem one might become mindful of Ruskin's observation, "How many pages of doubtful record might we not often spare for a few stones left one upon another." Young America might be jerked out of intellectual coma into reality were it actually shown, for example, that in the Roman depression Diocletian did not actually effect coinage reform, when this spade mark shows the base metal underneath his silver denarius, nor did Elizabeth of England—for here is her silver coin which has badly rusted; and why should New York University photograph this gold aureus of Nero but for a newly revealed architecture of a Roman temple door?

"This is how and why history may be re-written," one may teach, "for here is the reason Athenian coinage art stood fixed, while the Greek colonial moved higher, and there is the influence of Holbein on Tudor coins, and again Van Dyk's influence on the Stuart." Such orientation becomes possible with visual education.

Though the writer has used for illustration in class photography, prehistoric man's tools, historic firearms, even the now century-old stamp which but portrays the history the coins have actually made, he has found nothing quite so visually effectual for geography, economics, government, architecture, sculpture, etc., as the coins which he has collected for twenty-five years and which for twenty-six centuries have been the passion back of man's history.

Picture the coinage possibilties of the following originals: A quite representative set of Ancient Egyptian, Persian, Greek, and Roman ruler portrait coins . . . . Oriental and Occidental . . . . the Byzantine group . . . . Mediaeval knights . . . . kings in armour . . . . city views . . . . fortifications . . . . heroes . . . . legends . . . . cathedral interiors and exteriors . . . . the Renaissance group . . . . the great European ruler-portraits and proof medallic art . . . . Colonial wampums and cents . . . . pioneer and later American—all denominations . . . . Modern Oriental . . . . every English monarch's portrait in silver from 1461 (Edward IV) to George VI . . . . and the romance of paper money. The writer has used these for years.

An interesting project was worked out in one class when pupils rearranged chronologically the loosely recorded coin accumulations, mimeographed and bound forty copies for class-study of associated historical categories, and the instructor supported them with historical narratives. Results show that this whole concept is not merely "front window stuff," for even the retarded insisted the coins gave him a picture the book failed to do. Aside from a world-map coin talk, the most successful method is that of projecting the actual coin images on the screen by means of an opaque projector, which occasion is greeted by a large non-compulsory class attendance after school, previously baited only by occasional coins used in class to introduce each historical period. A certain almost-professional experience with the coins has insured confidence in the presentation.

For the instructor—and he hopes, for the student—the philosophy of the numismatic method reveals in the end the transitoriness of human existence, the passing parade, which man can but rent for his lifetime despite his "ownership" of the coins.

Note: Mr. Bluestone informs us that a limited number of Catalogues with Price Lists are still available.

A. French, Troy, New York, conducted a mail sale of coins and paper money on January 20th.

Norman Shultz of Salt Lake City, has issued an Illustrated Fixed Price List of United States coins, medals and paper money. It's a neat little pocket-size booklet and contains a lot of useful information, written in a clear style. Costs 25 cents and well worth it.

M. H. Bolender's 161st Sale will take place on February 6th. The catalogue containing 1968 lots offers a wide variety of numismatic material, including ancient, foreign and United States coins, medals and paper money.

The Celina Coin Company (T. & C. Brandts of Celina, Ohio) will conduct a Mail Sale on February 5th. The 2645 lots include an unusually nice selection of rarities of many countries and periods. Serious collectors would do well to get a copy of this catalogue. (Note to Ted and Carl: It was Barber, not Morgan, who designed the dimes, quarter dollars and half dollars along about 1892.)

George J. Bauer conducted a successful sale at the Hotel Seneca, Rochester, New York, on January 20th. The sale was well attended and the bidding was spirited. Mr. Bauer is A. N. A. life member No. 4, and owns one of the finest collections of Greek and Roman coins in this country. Good cheer, old timer, and may you long be with us.

Barney Bluestone will conduct a public auction at the Hotel Syracuse, Syracuse, New York, on February 2nd and 3rd. This is Barney's 86th sale and the catalogue runs to 2317 lots. Aside from the usual offering of fine United States coins it contains an unusual collection of Fractional Currency.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ALBANY NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 156th meeting was held on January 11th, with President Reynolds in the chair. Eighteen members and three guests were present.

Mr. McKinney announced the death of member Ralph S. Sibley, which took place on December 25th.

Mr. Burgess was unanimously elected to full membership.

The proposal of the Oregon Numismatic Society that the A. N. A. initiate the compilation of a Numismatic Encyclopaedia after the war was brought up for further consideration. After some discussion, President Reynolds appointed a committee to consider the matter and suggest action at the next meeting. The committee was composed of Messrs. Mackay, Kurth, and Sherwood.

There was considerable discussion on Mr. Sherwood's suggestion that our society sponsor a junior coin club. A committee composed of Messrs. Corrie, Sherwood and Schermerhorn was appointed to investigate the matter further.

Mr. Kurth announced donations to the library by Mr. Sherwood, including many issues of the NUMISMATIST between 1921 and 1935.

Mr. Corrie offered to give a talk at the next meeting on his experiences as both a numismatist and a bank official.

The feature entertainment of the evening was a Numismatic Quiz conducted by Dr. Sartoris. Proceeds consisting of ten cent penalties for questions not correctly answered were divided evenly between the winning member and the club treasury, each receiving $2.30.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—What was perhaps the most successful annual banquet in the long history of this organization, took place at the Ruth Clark Tea Room on the evening of January 9, 1945, when seventy-five members and guests sat down to a generous repast not only of food but of wit, humor and intellectual sustenance. As in past years, President Adolph Larson, Jr., officiated in the capacity of master of ceremonies, and as usual his program presented a variety of mysterious and world shaking addresses, the subjects of which were entirely unknown to the speakers either before or after their responses.

After the singing of "America," President Larson welcomed the large group of numismatists and their friends, who then sat down to a dinner of "Mint Condition Turkey!" Charles Newell Soule, whose singing has become an institution with the Club, rendered several beautiful solos accompanied by Pres. Larson.

For several years past the installation of officers of the Orange County Coin Club as well as the California Coin Club, has taken place at the annual banquet, and this practice was again followed. After presenting and thanking the outgoing officers for their services, President Larson with fitting ceremony installed the officers for 1945 as follows: Robert Efker, president of Orange County Coin Club; C. L. Emmons, M. D., vice president; C. G. Curtis, M. D. and L. A. Gowdy, respectively secretary and treasurer. The officers of the California Coin Club were likewise installed, namely, Adolph Larson, Jr., president; Holger Jorgenson, vice president; Earle K. Stanton, secretary and C. L. Hawley, treasurer.

The mysterious addresses heretofore referred to, were as follows: "How I ruled with an iron hand," by Herbert Bergen; "Make your coins friendly,—know them," a particularly interesting discourse by Holger Jorgenson; "Properly diagnosing coin values," by Dr. Emmons; "My photographic gift to coinography," by Dr. Curtis; "The Legal standing of modern gold-diggers," by Earle K. Stanton; "The geological genesis sub-stratum of coinitus," by Prof. Wallace Todd; "Minting coins from our battle wagons when peace comes," by Robert G. Efker; "Should shades be drawn on coins in glass houses," C. L. Hawley; "How I attained the million dollar smile," by Dr. Earl T. Johnston. In addition to this imposing list of speakers, L. A. Gowdy, Harold L. Budd and Jack New were called upon for what the program described as "Impromptues and Ad Lib," and J. B. Stack of New York City, a guest of Past President Koeppel, expressed the opinion that this banquet was one of the most interesting meetings of the many which he had attended. Not to be forgotten was the mass singing of Pres. Larson's famous "Ode to Numismatology" in several spasms, which he composed in 1929.

Announcements by the secretaries of the two clubs and an "Adios" by the Chairman, closed an unusually pleasant and instructive evening.

DAVENPORT NUMISMATIC CLUB — On Thursday evening the regular meeting was held in the Blackhawk Hotel in Davenport, Iowa. Following the dinner, the President, W. H. Fisher called the meeting to order. There were 16 members and two guests present.

After the usual business matters were disposed of, Mr. Fisher introduced the speaker, Dr. B. H. Sherrard of Rock Island, Illinois. His subject was "Transportation Tokens." He gave us a very instructive and educational talk. He said the token was introduced during the stage coach days before the Civil War and the reason they were issued was to save the people from handling so much money at that time. Tokens were made from four different kinds of metal, namely: Zinc, copper, brass and steel, and also from rubber and fiber. There are about 3000 different tokens and Dr. Sherrard has collected between 1800 and 2000 of them. He said the center of the token identified the token and he also mentioned the fact that they were hard to mount because they were all different sizes, shapes and thicknesses.

Following the talk Mr. Fisher introduced his guest, Mr. Carl Horneck of Moline, Illinois. One new member was added to our list, Mr. Delbert Swanson of Orion, Illinois. The speaker for our next regular meeting will be our Vice-President, Mr. Loyd Gettys who will speak on "Legal Tender."

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting was held January 8th, at the Benson Hotel, Portland, with 36 members and guests present. President Mrs. Essie Cohon conducted the meeting.

Our former president, Joseph V. LaMoreof, gave an interesting talk on the "Welfare of Clubs."

Mrs. Cohon announced that the Club would have a membership drive, a prize to be given to the member who showed the best results.

Donald Miller and Mrs. Mary Buckie were elected to membership.

Exhibits were as follows—

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—The 115th meeting was called to order by President Hoober at eight P. M., January 11th in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. There were 35 members and guests present.

Roscoe F. Ballard reported for his committee on papers and offered suggestions for the preparation of papers to be presented to the club such as the length to be from 2,000 to 5,000 words, a complete bibliography is to accompany each paper, etc. A certificate of merit will be awarded at our October meeting for the best paper of the year.

The exhibits of the evening follow:

Roscoe F. Ballard: Five of the six varieties of the 1807 cent all in excellent condition.

Scott Brodie: An uncirculated 1812 half dollar with a die break. An 1826 half dollar in semi-proof condition.

Wm. A. Schick, Jr.: A split 1921 silver dollar with very little milling.

Lewis M. Reagan the General Secretary of the A. N. A., spoke to us on numismatic experiences.

He expressed the hope that the Treasury Dept. in Washington would clarify for the collector the rules regarding the collection of gold.

He discussed the makings of a coin club and its successful continuation as being dependent on one primary quality, that being fellowship.

To all of us he suggested that we broaden our interests in numismatics by selecting some field such as coins of famous women or those with Roman numerals, etc.

Richard T. Hoober read an amusing list of cataloguers descriptions and classifications of coins.

—ARTHUR SIPE, Secretary.

PHOENIX COIN CLUB—The regular meeting was held on Tuesday night, Jan. 9th at eight o'clock in the Arizona room of the Adams Hotel, with 25 members present. The meeting was called to order by President James W. L. Lee. Visitors were introduced and each member was called upon to introduce himself and tell what he was interested in collecting.

A paper on the Indian Head cent was read by H. K. Conrad which was highly informative and interesting. This article was published in 1906 in the Philadelphia papers and was written by a descendant of Longacre who was the designer of the Indian head cent.

Four new members were admitted to membership. An auction was held and many pieces of interest were sold.

This Club has made a very nice progress; starting with eight members in October of last year we now have a membership of 34 and hope to continue to grow.

We wish to now invite any coin collector who may be visiting Arizona to drop in and visit with us. Our meeting is the second Tuesday of each month at eight o'clock at the historic Adams Hotel.

—A. V. VON RHEIN, Sec. & Treasurer.

RICHMOND COIN CLUB—The 46th regular meeting was held on Wednesday, Januarv 10th, at the Byrd Park Club House with President O. L. Lewis in the chair. There were four members present. The absence of several members was due to sickness or bad weather.

Since the members elected for officers for 1945 were all re-elections save for the vice presidency,

Mr. Lewis installed Mr. W. C. Mallory in that office.

Mr. Mallory displayed his type sets of U. S. minor coins and Mr. Lewis displayed his type set of U. S. dollars in silver as well as complete sets of U. S. large and small cents, half cents and two cent pieces.

Mr. Lewis gave a most interesting talk on types explaining the differences between types and varieties and the major differences in the types for each of the U. S. coins. While this talk was informal, we received from it much information and help.

—MRS. HELEN G. LEWIS, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB—The regular meeting was held on December 20th at the Ali Ghan Shrine Club. Dinner was served to the 22 members and ladies who were present.

The meeting was called to order by President Funkhouser. The secretary read a letter from Damon G. Douglas which invited all Club members to contribute articles for The Numismatist and advising that some highly attractive prizes were offered by the A. N. A. for the best articles contributed.

This meeting was in special honor of the past presidents of the Club, and President Funkhouser secured a very beautiful medal on which he had engraved each of the past presidents' initials and the year during which he was president of the Club, and presented these medals to the respective past presidents along with a short talk giving the highlights of the Club's activities during each of these past years.

Announcement was then made of the special features which have already been planned for the Club's January and February meetings.

—M. L. JOHNSON, Secretary.

WESTERN RESERVE NUMISMATIC CLUB—The 286th meeting was held Wednesday, January 10th, at the Carter Hotel, with 29 members and guests present.

Mrs. Winifred Kopetch and Fred Maskey were elected members.

A proposition was submitted by the Secretary, regarding prizes to be awarded during the coming year, to those members who contribute most to the numismatic interest of our meetings by means of papers, talks and exhibits. Several members spoke commending this idea, and upon motion of Dr. Law, the proposed plan was adopted, and a committee appointed to handle the details.

Dr. Law read a prepared paper pertaining to the Indian Head cents, and Edgar G. Bell spoke briefly about one of the coins in the auction, a rupee of India during the reign of Akbar.

Two prizes were awarded for the best exhibits made at the meeting, and the following exhibits were made and briefly described by their owners:

Otto C. Budde: Complete set of 12 notes of the Massachusetts Colony, printed October 16, 1778, in uncirculated condition.

Harley L. Freeman: 2, 5, 10, 50, 100, 500 and 1000 franc notes issued for use in France by the Allied Military Commission.

After an auction of 40 lots the meeting adjourned.

—HARLEY L. FREEMAN, Secretary.

WILKES BARRE COIN CLUB—The Club started its second year auspiciously on Jan. 11th, with 26 members and three guests present. One new member was elected.

After a brief session, Pres. Williams spoke briefly on American Colonial coppers and Alfred Grotz spoke feelingly of his specialty—the coinage of Malta and exhibited some of the coins of the Grand Masters.

A lively auction with Boyd and Ridall in charge unearthed some 70 lots of coins and yielded the club treasury a nice profit.

—GEORGE P. WILLIAMS, Pres.

AN OVER DATE OF THE SAINT-GAUDENS' $20

"Overstruck dates are those where the die of one year has been altered to do service for the succeeding one. The last figure in the date is usually gouged out and replaced by the new one, but seldom is this operation conducted so skillfully that traces of it are not left. Of course, the reason for this is to save money in the making of the dies, and the practice has by no means been abandoned altogether, for careful scrutiny of the Saint-Gaudens $20 piece of 1909 will reveal traces of what seems to have been the alteration of the figure 8 to 9."

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY PROPOSES UNIVERSAL NUMISMATIC ENCYCLOPEDIA

(A letter sent to various members and the officers of the A. N. A.)

Dear Fellow Collectors:

No doubt you have had experience similar to that of our own members in finding it very difficult to obtain desirable literature on the particular branches of numismatics in which you are interested.

This need has been so extensive among our membership that we have been prompted to adopt a resolution, a copy of which is enclosed herewith.

We know that there is a general demand for an universal numismatic encyclopedia. This may be too large an undertaking for any of our dealers, but we believe that it is entirely feasible as a project of the American Numismatic Association. Surely our national organization could in no other way render so great a service to the advancement of numismatics.

As you probably know from reading the annual reports, there is a large and growing surplus in the American Numismatic Association treasury (presently about $43,000) that is not being utilized to any numismatic purpose.

Not only has the Association the financial means to publish this work, but undoubtedly within its membership are persons competent to compile information on every branch of numismatics.

That you may have a better idea of the nature of the encyclopedia which we have in mind; it is our thought that the work might well be divided into volumes on a geographical and period basis. The volumes should deal thoroughly with the particular subject and should contain such information as will be useful to the average collector. But the material should be sufficiently succinct to make a volume of compact form and reasonable price.

The plan is intended to afford the collector the opportunity, should he prefer, to acquire only those volumes which meet his particular needs.

The initial expense would be borne by the American Numismatic Association, who would offer the volumes for sale to collectors, organizations, libraries, etc., throughout the world. We believe that the project would be self-liquidating, even though the initial expense might be considerable.

This proposal, we realize, will require earnest effort, and can be achieved only by whole-hearted cooperation of coin collectors throughout the country. With this cooperation, we have no doubt, that all difficulties can be overcome and that success will be assured.

If you will give this matter your serious consideration, and if you agree with our objective, we suggest that you make known your wishes to the American Numismatic Association by means of a resolution similar to the enclosed.

And please advise us of your action in this matter.

Numismatically yours,

HOWARD F. HUGHES,
Chairman Resolution Committee
Oregon Numismatic Society.

November 22, 1944, Address:
Howard F. Hughes, Hillsboro, Oregon.

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, the coin collectors throughout the English speaking world recognize an urgent need for an universal numismatic encyclopedia, to enable them to attribute their coins, and

WHEREAS, the literature now available to collectors for this purpose is wholly inadequate, and

WHEREAS, it is deemed feasible to have such a work published under the management and sponsorship of the American Numismatic Association,

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that we, a member organization of the American Numismatic Association, propose such an undertaking to them, as a post-war project.

WE FURTHER suggest that all other member organizations who share our views take such steps as they deem advisable to bring about favorable action upon this RESOLUTION.

THE OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

PROPOSES NEW COIN DESIGNS TO HONOR STATES

Editor NUMISMATIST:

Dear Sir:

Many years ago, I first became interested in numismatics by taking note, while studying the German language in Germany, that each component state of the Reich portrayed the head of its ruler on a certain number of the Imperial thalers. Even the features of the rulers of the smallest states, such as Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, or Reuss-Greiz, were thus depicted. The reverse of the thaler in each case was the standard Imperial one. If this procedure could be followed in a practically autocratic country, why could it not be initiated here in the United States, the home of democratic expression!

Why should not, say, a proportion of the current half dollar pieces carry the portraits of the governors of each of the forty-eight states in place of the figure of Liberty? The number of 50-cent pieces so coined for each state would be allocated at the mint on any suitable basis, such as population, or amount of federal income taxes paid. The identity of the state and the governor would be inserted in the obverse legend.

Such a procedure would go far, both to increase interest in the national coinage, and to maintain (what already nearly amounts to a fiction!) the dignity of state independence, in addition to affording both a personal satisfaction to, and a permanent memento of, the distinguished individuals who relieve each other every four years in their respective communities.

There appears to be nothing in the Constitution to prevent such a course. ARTICLE I, Section 10, Clause 1, merely lays down that no state shall coin money. The above relates only to the Federal coinage.

If, further, it should be thought proper that the head of the President at the time should appear, it might, it is suggested, be placed on half of the total number of pieces coined. Striking of the present design, both the obverse and the reverse, might be limited to the District of Columbia's proportionate share, or an appropriate obverse design might be formulated for this purpose, leaving the eagle on the reverse.

If the dollar piece were substituted for the 50-cent piece, with the resulting improved portraits, such a move would greatly increase the public interest in this beautiful coin.

Faithfully,

L. M. GOODHART.

MISCELLANEOUS NUMISMATIC NOTES

Collecting the Hard Way—

Nearly every soldier who returns from abroad brings with him a few coins of the different countries he has visited. While such little collections have small cash value, they are of real interest to their owners, and should not be sneered at by more experienced collectors. A sailor, hardly more than a kid, showed us a set of Russian minor coins from one to 50 kopecks. He was just as proud of the little set as any stay-at-home collector might be over his tray full of $50 slugs.

"I didn't," he explained, "get the 15 kopecks until I made my third trip to Murmansk."

Do we hear anyone saying that sailor isn't a COIN-COLLECTOR!

Price Lists Won't Fit—

Theodore G. Kaufman of Baton Rouge, La., doesn't mind paying dealers for their catalogues nor for the lists of prices realized, but he protests against dealers who issue them in different sizes.

We believe that other collectors will agree with Mr. Kaufman. It is annoying to buy a catalogue and order a price list only to find that when the latter arrives it is about three inches too wide to insert in the catalogue.

When cataloguers sell a price list, they should remember that the collector is buying it to accompany the catalogue, and not to read and then throw in the waste paper basket.

Catch As Catch Can—

"Another case is the matter of sending high priced catalogues to collectors who did not write for them and then sending them bills for same. Under the rules of the Post Office, this is considered as unsolicited merchandise and a collector is not required to pay for same."

From a letter written by

Arlie Slabaugh,
Oakland, Maryland.

Signs Coins Illegally—

John H. Hansan, proprietor of Hansan's Coin Shop, Kansas City, Mo., reports that he has been offered a small lot of Lincoln cents, 1909 S, V.D.B., that had been faked. Says Mr. Hansan: "The V.D.B. had been added and at first glance would deceive the unsuspecting collector, for it was a fairly neat job. Collectors should be on the lookout for such fakes and report the fakers to the proper authorities."

A Curious Circumstance—

The so-called "broken die" cent of 1922 brings several times as much as a perfect specimen. This is because it has been included in several popular makes of coin-boards. Actually a cent of 1922 that does not plainly show the "D" mint-mark is not nearly as desirable as one struck from a sharp die. This applies to all mint-marked cents. Weak and partly obliterated mint-marks reduce the value of coins.

We know of a collector-dealer who has quite a nice stock of 1922 cents. He can always supply the so-called "broken die" variety and recently we came across one of these pieces which we have reason to believe he sold at a good price. Some one had flattened out the "D" mintmark and, as Mr. Hanson puts it: "at first glance it would deceive the unsuspecting collector."

This is to let this low-lifer know that he is on-the-spot. Please check with the editor in the event you have been sold defective cents of 1922.

COINED 62 CENTS A SECOND IN 1944

According to the Mint Report for the fiscal year ending June 30, the three mints turned out a record total of 1,918,653,670 cents. That's slightly better than 62 each second. The average in 1939 was ten cents every second. The high speed of the coining presses probably accounts for the large number of mis-struck pieces that have been found in circulation.

Outstanding Public Auction Sale

I AM PLEASED TO ANNOUNCE that the Auction Sale of the first part of the famous United States Paper Currency collection of

was a complete success. Mr. Grinnell has further demonstrated his confidence in me by permitting me to sell at Public Auction the next part of his noteworthy collection, which will consist of California National Gold Bank Notes, Silver Certificates and Gold Certificates.

THESE NOTES ARE ALL OF THE OLD SERIES, secured after many years of painstaking search, and in the finest condition obtainable. These are the actual specimens which have been in Mr. Grinnell's celebrated collection.

THIS COLLECTION WILL CONTAIN all of the popular Silver and Gold Certificates, some very rare sheets, one of the greatest errors ever known, and the largest and finest offering of California Gold Bank Notes ever to be assembled by an individual, including some notes printed on white paper, probably the only specimens known to exist.

THIS SALE WILL BE THE GREATEST the world has ever known, and will take place on or about March 17, 1945, at Hotel Syracuse, Syracuse, New York. Limited space permits the mention of only a very few of the many attractive characteristics of the notes in this famous offering, which contains items of the highest interest to every collector.

BE SURE TO SECURE A CATALOGUE of this outstanding sale. The catalogue will be of the same high quality as the first one held on November 25, 1944. Only a limited number will be printed, and these will be available to all who participated in the first part of Mr. Grinnell's sale, and mailed free. To all others who wish a copy of the March sale, the price is $1.00 in advance for both catalogue and list showing prices realized.

THE PRICE LIST is fifty cents to all who order it before the sale. After the sale the price for the catalogue and price list will be $2.50; the price list alone, $1.00. I think I am safe in saying without fear that another such complete and valuable reference does not exist. Don't miss the golden opportunity of a lifetime. Two great things, the CATALOGUE OF THIS SALE and BONDS FROM UNCLE SAMMY, both are a splendid investment.

An Announcement

We wish to announce as an expansion program we are about to enter the auction field. In so doing, we hope to render a service that will be modern and streamlined to show every improvement possible in this line of selling which will benefit the collector or estate interested in liquidating their collections or duplicates.

OUR STAFF

We now have a staff of more than thirty which is the largest of any numismatic establishment in America. Our staff includes some of the best informed experts in the field and we offer you the best of facilities in cataloguing and selling your collection at auction.

MAILING LIST

During our fifteen years of phenomenal progress, we have acquired a mailing list of more than 10,000 collectors which is, no doubt, the largest ever assembled. It is unnecessary for us to go into any great detail to explain the possibilities and advantages that you will experience in placing your coins with us for disposal, with this tremendous mailing list of individuals who now, according to economic statistics, hold more liquid cash and purchasing power than ever before in our country's history.

SECURITY

Every employee of our organization is bonded just as the employees at your bank in which you place your money for safe keeping. Furthermore, we have just completed construction of two large fireproof vaults, electrically protected against burglary aggregating an area of 250 square feet of storage space where even the largest collections may be stored conveniently and yet arranged, classified, and catalogued intelligently for the most efficient auction disposal methods.

RELIABILITY

When submitting your coins to the Tatham Stamp & Coin Company, to be sold at auction, you have more than fifteeen years of progress and experience in numismatics placed at your disposal. We are members in good standing of all leading national and international philatelic and numismatic societies.

FINANCIAL RESOURCES

We are able at the present time to handle collections of any value. We have financial resources to cover the largest collections that may be available, offering liberal cash advances when desired on the material you wish to sell.

TYPE OF MATERIAL DESIRED

We especially desire consignments of better grade material, and, with our large following, offer the greatest sales possibilities.

Consignments Solicited

If you wish to be represented in our early sales, send in your consignments NOW! Closing date for first sale, March 5, 1945.

U. S. CURRENCY–CRISP, UNC.

The Old Large U. S. Notes are beautiful masterpieces of art and engraving. Contrary to the belief of many collectors, a Complete Type Collection of $1.00, $2.00 and $5.00 Notes can be acquired at a very moderate cost. MAIL BID AUCTION–MARCH FIFTH

Having just purchased a personal collection of 3,500 coins, I am offering many choice duplicates. As I do not collect foreign coins, I am selling that part of the collection as one lot (No. 1), graded as to size only. There are 797 pieces, which will average fine or better. None is badly worn, mutilated or holed. Nearly every country of the world is well represented, all old issues, of the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries, with a few ancient Roman and Greek. In this condition, this lot would cost a considerable sum if purchased singly today. PLEASE BID BY THE LOT.

TO OUR ADVERTISERS

A number of comments have been received from collectors suggesting that when coins in rolls are offered, the number per roll be stated in every case. This would seem reasonable, especially since not all rolls contain the same number, and also because two different sizes of rolls are used in many banks for the same denomination.

Hereafter, will our advertisers please adopt this suggestion. New collectors especially will appreciate it.

COUNTERFEITING

by LAURENCE DWIGHT SMITH

THE Secret Service, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and the United States Mint have cooperated with the author to make possible this clear and complete exposition of the making and the counterfeiting of United States currency. An outstanding feature of the book is a genuine engraving shown together with a skilful "counterfeit" of it—comparison provides all the information essential to the detection of fake currency.

FIFTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

NOTES AND QUERIES

How Did it Happen?—

Lt. P. K. Anderson is the owner of a curious counterfeit of a Spanish 50 centimos.

It is stamped FALSA (counterfeit) and bears an additional mark of the Manila Mint—MANILA, Ca N1 Ma.

The counterfeit mark is as neat as any counter-mark ever put on a coin. It is difficult to understand why a false coin should be stamped with such care, and then allowed to get out of the mint.

Lt. Anderson would like to know if any collector has information as to how it happened.

Rolls of Coins—

Inquire at your local bank for rolls of new coins. For issues of branch mints write to a fellow-member living close to the place of issue. Perhaps he will be willing to trade roll for roll. Neither the United States Mint nor the A. N. A. has facilities for selling rolls of coins.

Cabinet Friction—

A collector writes, "What, may I ask, is cabinet friction? I've never heard the term defined and would appreciate some information on the subject."

The Editor is not aware of the exact definition of the term. The old-time cataloguers used it to describe proof and uncirculated coins that showed slight signs of abrasion especially in the field. Some present day cataloguers use it to describe coins that are somewhat worn.

Perhaps one of our old-time members will come forward with the proper definition. In the meantime I suggest you write to the cataloguers who use the term in an effort to learn their interpretations.

Likes Them French Fried—

Sir:

"It may interest other numismatists to learn of the method I used to clean and color large copper cents. After trying various methods without satisfactory results I boiled them in olive oil. I then wiped them and held them over the gas flame for a few seconds. This system might not be advisable for rare dates but it sure made my collection look a 100% better.

—M. H., "A Rabid Numismatist."

(Editor's note: What, no tomato catsup!)

Entered as Second Class Matter at the Federalsburg, Md., Post Office under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Ask a Specialist—

The editor cannot undertake to attribute the coins you list. Suggest you get in touch with one of our contributors who specializes in Austrian coins.

"No Dice"—

Ration Tokens are of some interest but there is no reason why the publisher of any standard coin catalogue should list them unless he cares to do so. They are not coins, despite the fact that you shoot dice for them. Why not write direct to the publisher? Perhaps he will fade you.

Editor wants 37 Cents—

There are genuine and false Washington half dollars. THE NUMISMATIST does not pass judgment on such pieces. The piece is being returned to you by registered mail. You can send the cost of return postage, 37 cents, in stamps.

German Copper Coins—

An illustrated list of the monograms on German copper coins will be found in the April, 1935 issue of THE NUMISMATIST, accompanying O. P. Eklund's splendid work on this series. It would not be feasible to reprint this list at this time. You can borrow back copies of THE NUMISMATIST from our Library.

What is It?—

The piece illustrated has been shown to many collectors but none has been able to identify it.

Apparently it is in base silver and struck by hand rather than in a press. the die-sinker made his 9 with the same punch as he made his 6. The illustration is actual size.

Perhaps one of our readers would be kind enough to identify this interesting item.

"As Is"—

A new member wants to know what a dealer means when he advertises a coin "as is."

Generally this term is used by cataloguers when they offer for sale coins they believe to be false. It is sometimes supposed that there is no recourse for the buyer in the event the coins are false. This is not so, as a dealer is supposed to know what he is selling and is reprehensible if he sells a false coin under the subterfuge "AS IS." [It's a law.]

FALSE COINS

"It is absolutely impossible to give strict rules by which to recognize forged or falsified coins. Nothing but experience of long practice confirmed by some mistakes, paid for in good money, can enable one to attain by degrees the eye of an expert, which without much reasoning recognizes by intuition the authenticity or falseness of a coin. However, one should always bear in mind as a certain rule that rare coins ought not to differ in the least from common ones in their appearance. Many times on the other hand, or rather in most instances, the rare coins have a special appearance, a something indescribable in the metal, in the letters, in the patina. Placed among a thousand common coins they will be found to have something which distinguishes them. Why? Certainly not because they are rare, but because they are false. One of the very best lessons we could have would be to examine a collection of false, and then another of authentic coins side by side. And with this view in cabinets formed for the purpose of study the section of false coins is of the greatest use."

From Roman Coins, by Cav. Francesco Gnecchi, London 1903, page 21.

THE UNITED STATES EAGLE AND HALF-EAGLE

By RICHARD S. YEOMAN, Racine, Wisconsin

The year 1945 marks the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the ten-dollar gold piece or eagle, and its companion, the five-dollar gold piece or half-eagle.

The American Numismatic Association in observing National Coin Week from April 21st to 29th, this year will direct particular attention to the sesquicentennial of our first official gold coins.

The eagle came by its name honestly enough, for that part of the law establishing the mint regarding devices on the new United States coins provided that all gold and silver coins must carry the figure of an eagle on the reverse side. This noble bird selected as a symbol of the new republic, provided a fitting name for our standard gold coin. The great seal of the United States, as we all know, has as its central and dominant device, an American eagle in heraldic form.

At first both the eagle and half-eagle bore a naturalistic eagle on the reverse side. Standing on a palm branch with outstretched wings, it holds a laurel wreath aloft in its bill. A second reverse type of the 1795 half-eagle presented, with slight differences the Great Seal device, which numismatists refer to as the large eagle or heraldic eagle type. The eagle did not, however, change its reverse type to the heraldic eagle until 1797.

The half-eagle denomination, strangely enough, was coined with either the small or large eagle device until 1798. Starting in 1799 and until 1807, the large, heraldic form was used exclusively on this coin. The ten dollar piece, on the other hand, used only the small eagle for the 1795 and 1796 issues. In 1797 both small and large eagles were used, and starting in 1798 the large eagle alone was employed until coinage of this denomination was suspended in 1804.

The arrows and olive branch, which are held in the eagle's right and left claws respectively on the heraldic eagle device, were exactly reversed from the positions appearing on the Great Seal. It has been supposed that this interchange was unintentional and was possibly a result of misinterpretation of instructions by the engraver who confused the eagle's "right" with the spectator's right.

It should be noted that on the succeeding types of both gold and silver coins, starting in 1807, the laurel and arrows were rearranged so that thenceforth the arrows are held in the eagle's left talon. This arrangement is correct, heraldically speaking, in that the emblem of war (the arrows) held in the left claw expresses a preference for peace. Another departure from the great seal design is in the number of stars in the field above the eagle. The seal has thirteen stars, whereas the 1795 and 1797 half-eagles display sixteen stars. (In 1796 the half-eagle was struck with the small eagle only.) In 1798 the number of stars on the reverse was reduced to thirteen. The ten-dollar piece, which employed the heraldic eagle for the first time in 1797, has thirteen stars in the field in that and succeeding years. The coinage of eagles was discontinued in 1804 because the value in terms of silver made exportation and reduction to bullion profitable. These abuses drove the ten-dollar pieces from circulation, and they were rarely seen thereafter in the channels of trade.

Several interesting variations on the obverses are found of the early gold issues. The first type is described generally as follows: Draped bust of Liberty facing right with long, loose hair, and wearing a liberty cap. Above, LIBERTY and date below. Reeded edge.

Half-eagles had fifteen stars around the border of the obverse in the years 1795, 1796 and 1797. Another obverse die of 1797 was engraved and struck with sixteen stars. The number of stars corresponded in each case to the number of states, a procedure also followed for the reverse design. The large number of stars soon to be required as new states entered the Union, discouraged this practice, which brought about the use of thirteen stars to represent only the original thirteen states, after 1797.

The eagle had fifteen stars on the obverse in 1795 and sixteen stars on the 1796 and 1797 issues. In 1798 the position of the word LIBERTY and the number of stars before and behind the Liberty head varied. In one instance the word LIBERTY is placed well to the right of the head, and there are nine stars behind and four stars before the head of Liberty. The other variety shows the word LIBERTY centered above the head, and the stars are grouped seven and six. The latter is the scarcest of the first type United States eagle.

The first issue of the gold eagle was composed of 247.5 grains of pure gold combined with 22.5 grains of alloy, totalling 270 grains of standard gold .916-7/10 fine. The half-eagle and quarter-eagle (coinage commenced in 1796) were in proportion.

Thomas Jefferson wrote President George Washington on December 30, 1793, regarding the employment of artists. Albion Coxe had been engaged from London and was made assayer of the mint. Jefferson also mentioned that since it was impossible to secure the services of a chief coiner abroad, he recommended the appointment of Henry Voight, who was temporarily in that position. Jefferson stated that the coinage of the precious metals was being delayed because the two men had failed to provide the required $10,000 security, an amount which neither party was able to furnish. He recommended that the amounts be reduced, and in order that the mint might not be entirely idle, the coinage of copper had been proceeding. The above will help to explain why the striking of gold coins was delayed for over two years after the mint was established.

David Rittenhouse, the first director of the mint, reported October 28, 1794, that a beginning had been made in the coining of the precious metals. In this instance he referred only to silver coins.

The first deposit of gold bullion for coinage was made by Moses Brown, a Boston merchant, on February 12, 1795, in the form of ingots worth $2,276.12 for which he was paid in silver coins.

Declining health compelled Mr. Rittenhouse to resign in June, 1795.

TYPES OF UNITED STATES HALF-EAGLES

Henry W. Desaussure, a lawyer, was appointed as second Director of the mint by Washington on July 8, 1795. During his short term the first gold coins were struck and turned over to the Treasury. On July 31, 1795, 744 half-eagles were delivered. The first return of eagles was made September 22 of the same year and consisted of four hundred pieces. Desaussure resigned in October, to be succeeded by Elias Boudinot on October 28, 1795, who occupied the office for eleven years.

The half-eagle changed type in 1807. The obverse shows the head of Liberty facing left, draped bust, and wearing a turban shaped cap with band inscribed LIBERTY, thirteen stars arranged at sides with date below. The reverse has an eagle as a central device with the United States shield on its breast, an olive branch and three arrows in the talons; above, a scroll inscribed E. PLURIBUS UNUM. Legend, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA 5. D.

In 1813 the head of Liberty was redesigned. The head is larger and shoulders are omitted.

The act of June 28, 1834, brought about changes in the eagle and half-eagle. The weight of the eagle was changed to 258 grains and the half-eagle to 129 grains. Fineness was established at .899-225/1000 for all gold coins. At this time coinage of the eagle had not yet been resumed, but the half-eagle had been issued every year with the exception of 1801, 1816 and 1817. The years 1815 to 1834 are represented by very few specimens of half-eagles today. The reduction in weight in 1834 caused many of the older pieces to be melted down for their greater bullion value. The 1822 half-eagle is considered one of the rarest United States coins. Only three specimens are known.

The new type of 1834 half-eagle has no motto, and the coin is smaller in size than its predecessors. The hair is wavy on the Liberty head which no longer is covered with a cap.

Fineness of gold coins was changed by the Act of January 18, 1837, to .900, and the eagle again entered the United States family of coins in smaller and modified design the following year.

The Liberty head now faces left on the obverse side and the hair is knotted behind with a cord of pearls. A coronet is inscribed LIBERTY. There are the usual thirteen stars with date below. The reverse follows the same general design as the half-eagle.

The half-eagle has a smaller Liberty head with a more pronounced coronet, and smaller eagle in 1839 and is generally speaking of the same type as the eagle of 1838.

Except for the addition of the motto IN GOD WE TRUST added above the eagle's head in the year 1866, no major changes occurred in the two gold pieces concerned until 1907 when the beautiful St. Gaudens type appeared.

The Indian head, by St. Gaudens, characterizes the eagle, and the standing Liberty device was employed for the double-eagle in that year.

A different style Indian head design by Bela L. Pratt graces the half-eagle of 1908. The last coins of this denomination were coined in 1929, while the coinage of the eagle continued until 1933, when the Gold Surrender Executive order spelled the end of these two famous issues,

Thousands of our gold coins now repose in the form of shiny bars in such places of safety as Fort Knox. Other thousands remain in collections and are more than ever treasured for their significance in the monetary history of our great nation. With the passing of our gold coin series from circulation we have said goodbye to our last intrinsic value coins.

The United States has for many years enjoyed a world-wide confidence in its money and monetary policies. Faith in our money makes an intrinsic value coin unnecessary. We accept both our subsidiary or token coins and our paper money without question because our government is strong, and the value of its money in terms of what it will buy is sound and reasonably stable.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA PAPER MONEY: CLASSIFICATION AND LISTING

By P. H. CHASE, A. N. A. 4286, Philadelphia

PART IV

September 2, 1861 Issue

Act of August 19, 1861. Authorized $100,000,000. Act of December 24, 1861 authorized $50,000,000. Fundable in eight per cent stock or bonds. Payable "six months after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States." The date "September 2, 1861" is printed.

There are six denominations: The $2 in one type; the $5 in seven types by six engravers; the $10 in nine types by four engravers; the $20 in five types by five engravers; the $50 in three types by three engravers; and the $100 in one type. The large number of types, varieties and engravers, and the widely varying quality of engraving, printing and papers, are eloquent of the difficulties encountered in producing this currency.

Commencing with this issue, watermarked papers of the seven varieties (cf. THE NUMISMATIST, p. 1120, Nov. 1944) make their appearance. The most extensive, and almost exclusive, use was by one engraver, Leggett, Keatinge & Ball and their successors, Keatinge & Ball.

113 $ 2—CONFEDERACY STRIKING DOWN THE UNION. BUST OF J. P. BENJAMIN, SECRETARY OF WAR, LATER SECRETARY OF STATE, LEFT. (B. Duncan) : 1 to 10, 1-10

This note is the $2 note of the June 2, 1862 Issue (No. 205), erroneously dated September 2, 1861. Dr. William Lee's book states: "No authority for the issue of this note can be found among the statutes of the Confederate Congress. It was not prepared at the same time with the remainder of the Issue, but was executed about June 12, 1862, and the number issued was probably not very great. June 17, 1862, some 35,000 were changed to date June 2, 1862."

ON SELECTING A TOPIC

"To me it is better that a series which interests me and would help me in my work should be published in my lifetime rather than a hundred years hence. It seems to me therefore that in cataloguing a great collection of coins those series should be first attacked which have been hitherto neglected, and on which no modern or tolerable monograph exists especially in English."

From Supplement to British Imperial Copper and Bronze Coinage, by Henry Garside, London 1925, page 2.

THE PLEASURES OF NUMISMATIC SCIENCE

"He who possesses a cabinet of coins, holds within a small compass an encyclopedia of the world's progress. He has there its history, its geography, architecture, ethnology, linguistic chronology, natural history, and indeed there is scarcely any science relating to this mundane sphere and its inhabitants, which may not receive some accession of knowledge from a numismatic collection studied out and appreciated."

By Henry Phillips, Jr., in Collecting & Hobbies, The Elder Numismatic Press, New York 1917. Page 48.

CALL TO SCULPTORS–ARTISTS–DESIGNERS

The Executive Committee of the American Numismatic Association has approved the recommendation of the Committee appointed a year ago to study a medallic award for the outstanding contributions to THE NUMISMATIST. A medal in silver and one in bronze are to be awarded annually. The details of the award will be separately announced.

The American Numismatic Association is offering three prizes—1st, $200, 2nd, $75 and 3rd, $50 for the three best designs submitted for the obverse and reverse of the medal. On the obverse of the medal should appear the legend "For the Advancement of Numismatic Knowledge." On the reverse should appear the name "American Numismatic Association," and a suitable tablet on which the recipient's name and the year of the award is to be engraved.

The Committee consists of Henri Ripstra, 5 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago 3, Illinois; J. Douglas Ferguson, Rock Island, Quebec; and Harry J. Stein, 501 Fifth Avenue, New York 17, New York. Mr. Stein will act as Secretary of the Committee, and all designs are to be submitted to him no later than June 30, 1945.

All designs submitted become the property of the American Numismatic Association without obligation.

The decisions of the judges appointed by the officers of the American Numismatic Association will be final. Each contestant must submit an obverse and reverse design.

Awards will be made from submitted designs, and the winner of the 1st prize, in order to collect the same, will be required, within two months after notification, to furnish plaster models that will be suitable, to the personal satisfaction of the Committee, for a die cutting machine pattern.

Changes in the Organization Directory

Because of the lack of space the Organization Directory will be published occasionally rather than monthly. Only important changes such as that of corresponding secretaries, meeting dates and places will be listed each month.

Boston Numismatic Society—Business meeting at 7 p. m. last Monday of each month (summer excepted) at Burroughs Foundation, 10 Somerset St., Boston. Herman J. Heide, Secretary, 46 Cornhill, Boston 8, Mass.

Milwaukee Numismatic Society—Meets third Friday of each month at the Plankinton House. Walter J. Boeyer, Secretary, 3873 No. 37th St., Milwaukee 10, Wis.

Seattle Coin Club—Meets last Thursday of the month at the Y. M. C. A. Clubrooms, 909-4th Ave., G. W. Woods, Secretary, 7329 Seward Park Ave., Seattle 8, Wash.

FROM THE DESK OF THE GENERAL SECRETARY

The General Secretary takes this opportunity of thanking the members who have responded so promptly to annual dues statements mailed in November and December and to those members who very kindly sent in their payments without waiting for the statement.

Second notices have been sent as reminders to those who have overlooked or neglected their dues payments. With some payments being received each day, these second notices will reach a few members who have sent payments but which had not been recorded at the time the notices were sent. In these cases, the second notice should be ignored, of course. If you have made payment and have not received an acknowledgment with proper membership card within a reasonable length of time, please notify this office. While great care has been exercised in recording and acknowledging these payments, in handling such a large volume of mail and with some office assistance inexperienced in this particular kind of work, it would be vain to expect that no errors have been made. They will be promptly corrected if called to my attention.

The General Secretary receives numerous notices of change of address, some supposed to take effect immediately. The mailing list of THE NUMISMATIST is corrected monthly, about the 15th, and all changes reported during the preceding month are entered at that time. Those received after the 15th must wait until the next correction date. Duplicate copies of THE NUMISMATIST are not sent to the new address unless first one is returned by the Post Office. You should send notice of change of address far enough in advance so that you won't miss any copies or else arrange with your Postmaster to forward the last one sent to the old address. This has become quite a problem, with often more than 200 changes of address reported in a single month.

Note to Canadian Members

When you pay your dues with bank check without indicating that it is payable in United States currency, the discount and bank exchange brings the net amount of cash received by the Association to about $2.60 on a $3 check. It costs the Association extra postage to mail your copies of THE NUMISMATIST and the full amount of your dues should be collectible. After the date of the publication of this note, the General Secretary respectfully requests (and insists) that all instruments sent in payment of dues be negotiable in New York for the full amount in United States currency of the obligation they are intended to cover. Any other policy would be unfair to members in the United States and to the great majority of Canadian members who have provided for this.

Note to Club Secretaries

Please send the reports of your monthly meetings to the Editor; not the General Secretary. Mail which pertains to the duties of other officers of the Association is forwarded, but the extra time required to reach the proper office may result in missing the closing deadline and prevent publication. Any change to be made in your listing in the Organizational Directory should likewise be sent to the Editor, but any change of address affecting the mailing of THE NUMISMATIST should be sent to the General Secretary and need not be reported to any other office.

Regarding Complaints

In previous issues of THE NUMISMATIST this page has included some remarks and comments about various complaints received from members and dealers with regard to certain transactions between themselves. It is impossible to properly judge or attempt to adjust these complaints without a full investigation. The General Secretary regrets that it is impossible for him to undertake this service. Complaints will be placed on file but no action will be taken on them unless of sufficient seriousness to warrant an accompanying formal charge against a member of the Association, in which case the matter will be referred to the Executive Board.

The answering of specific inquiries, intended to be included in this issue, has had to be postponed. Important and urgent inquiries have been answered directly.

LEWIS M. REAGAN, General Secretary.

HERALDRY

By DUDLEY BUTLER

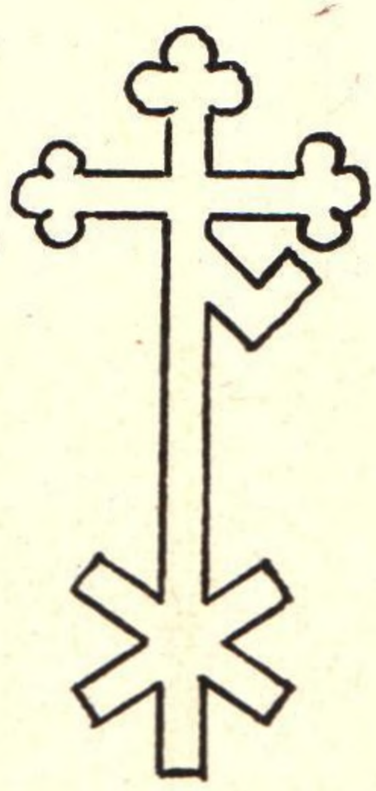

Installment III

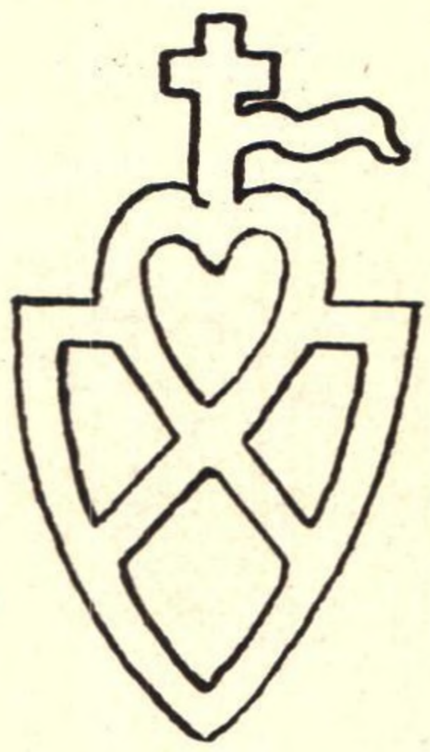

Knots, Badges, and Merchants' Marks

Knots of silk cord entwined in various manners were adopted as armorial bearings at a very early date. As far back as the fifteenth year of the reign of Edward the Third, we read of the Stafford knot being the badge of the Duke of Buckingham.

Badges were devices adopted by great families as certain distinctive marks, which cannot be strictly regarded as armorial bearings (although they were to some extent employed as such), but rather as subsidiary arms. They were intended to be borne on military equipment and caparisons and also on the breasts of common soldiers, attendants, and household servants.

As the bearing of crests was restricted solely to their individual possessors, and as the coats of arms were frequently of too elaborate a description to be embroidered on the garments of retainers, these badges consisting of a single figure, were employed to designate the family to which such dependents belonged. It also served as identification in battle.

Merchants' Marks

Another class of badge, of great antiquity, is commonly known as "merchants marks." When the right of bearing arms was restricted exclusively to nobles, and any infringement of this rule was visited by severe punishments and heavy fines, citizens were permitted to adopt certain devices, which were placed upon their merchandise. These were not strictly armorial, but almost so, and corresponded exactly to our "trade marks" of today, and were just as strictly protected by the government.

It is, of course, true that many of these merchants amassed great fortunes and became extremely prominent. Many of these rendered services to the Crown and were granted arms of their own, but they always held their merchant's mark in the greatest respect, and in many cases had a higher regard for their mark than for their arms. The V.O.C. of the Dutch East India Company is well known to collectors.

Another example is the three little horse shoes used by the mint masters of Augsburg to denote one of their products, and you would know at once any coin so marked was a product of the Augsburg mint, no matter for what city the coin was struck.

As time went on and these successful merchants formed guilds, the Crown granted arms to the guilds themselves, and a few years ago the so-called "Great Companies" of London, of which there were twelve, all had their own coats of arms granted by the Crown.

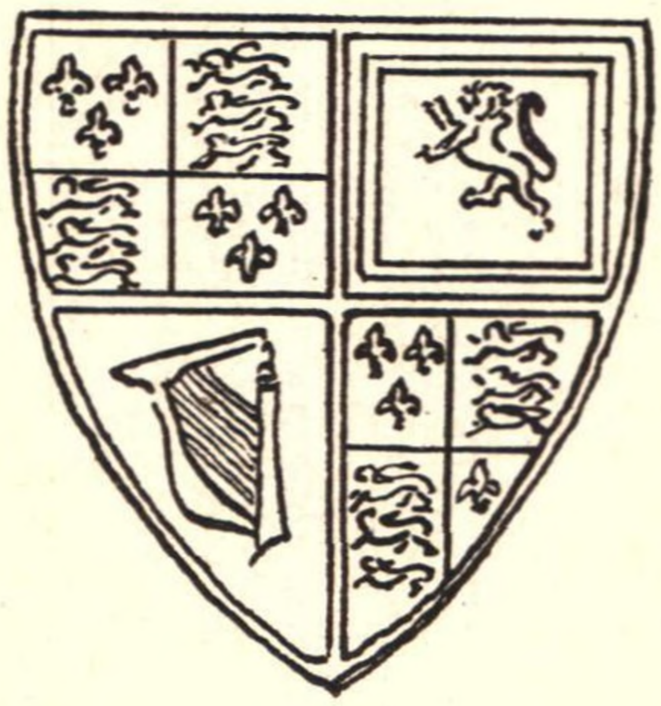

Regal Armory

There is probably no branch of the science of heraldry more interesting and instructive than that which relates to the history of a country; much of which history is indelibly written, and plainly to be read, on the arms of that nation.

As I stated in a former article, heraldry, as we know it, was unknown during the reign of William the Conqueror, but succeeding generations have always insisted on stating that he bore for his coat of arms; "Gules; two lions passant-guardant in pale, or." I strongly doubt if he ever saw them. Passing on to the reign of Henry the Second, he did bear "Gules; three lions passant-guardant in pale, or," commonly known as "The Lions of England." He added the third lion for his wife Eleanor of Aquitaine, whose arms were "Gules; a lion passant-guardant or."

Little or no change occurred in the Royal arms until the reign of Edward III.

In the year 1340, consequent upon the claim of Edward to the Crown of France, the arms of that country first appeared upon the shield of England as per the illustration.

On the accession of the Stuarts to the throne, the arms of Scotland and Ireland were combined with those of France and England in the following manner: "Quarterly of four; 1 and 4 grand quarters, France and England quarterly 2. Or; a lion rampant, within a Bordure fleury-counterfleury, gules, for Scotland 3 azure; a harp or, stringed argent; for Ireland." See illustration.

In passing, I might say that the fleurs-de-lys have been omitted from the arms of France since the reign of Louis Philippe.

The arms of the Commonwealth, although hardly coming under the denomination of regal heraldry, demand a passing notice in this place. On the Great Seal, which was adopted within ten days of the execution of Charles, appears a shield blazoned as follows: "Quarterly of four; 1 and 4 The Cross of St. George; 2 The Saltire of St. Andrew 3 The harp of Ireland; Over all, on an Inescutcheon sable, a lion rampant-guardant argent" which were Cromwell's paternal arms. Beneath the shield was the motto "PAX QUAERITUR BELLO."

You will notice that Cromwell, while always posing as "the Great Commoner" thought enough of the arms of his family to place them on the great seal of England. He further embellished the seal with the motto "OLIVARIUS DEI:GRA:REIPUB: ANGLIAE SCOTIAE ET HIBERNIAE, PROTECTOR" and all the insignia of royalty. So that, to quote from an old proverb, "Your point of view all depends on where you sit."

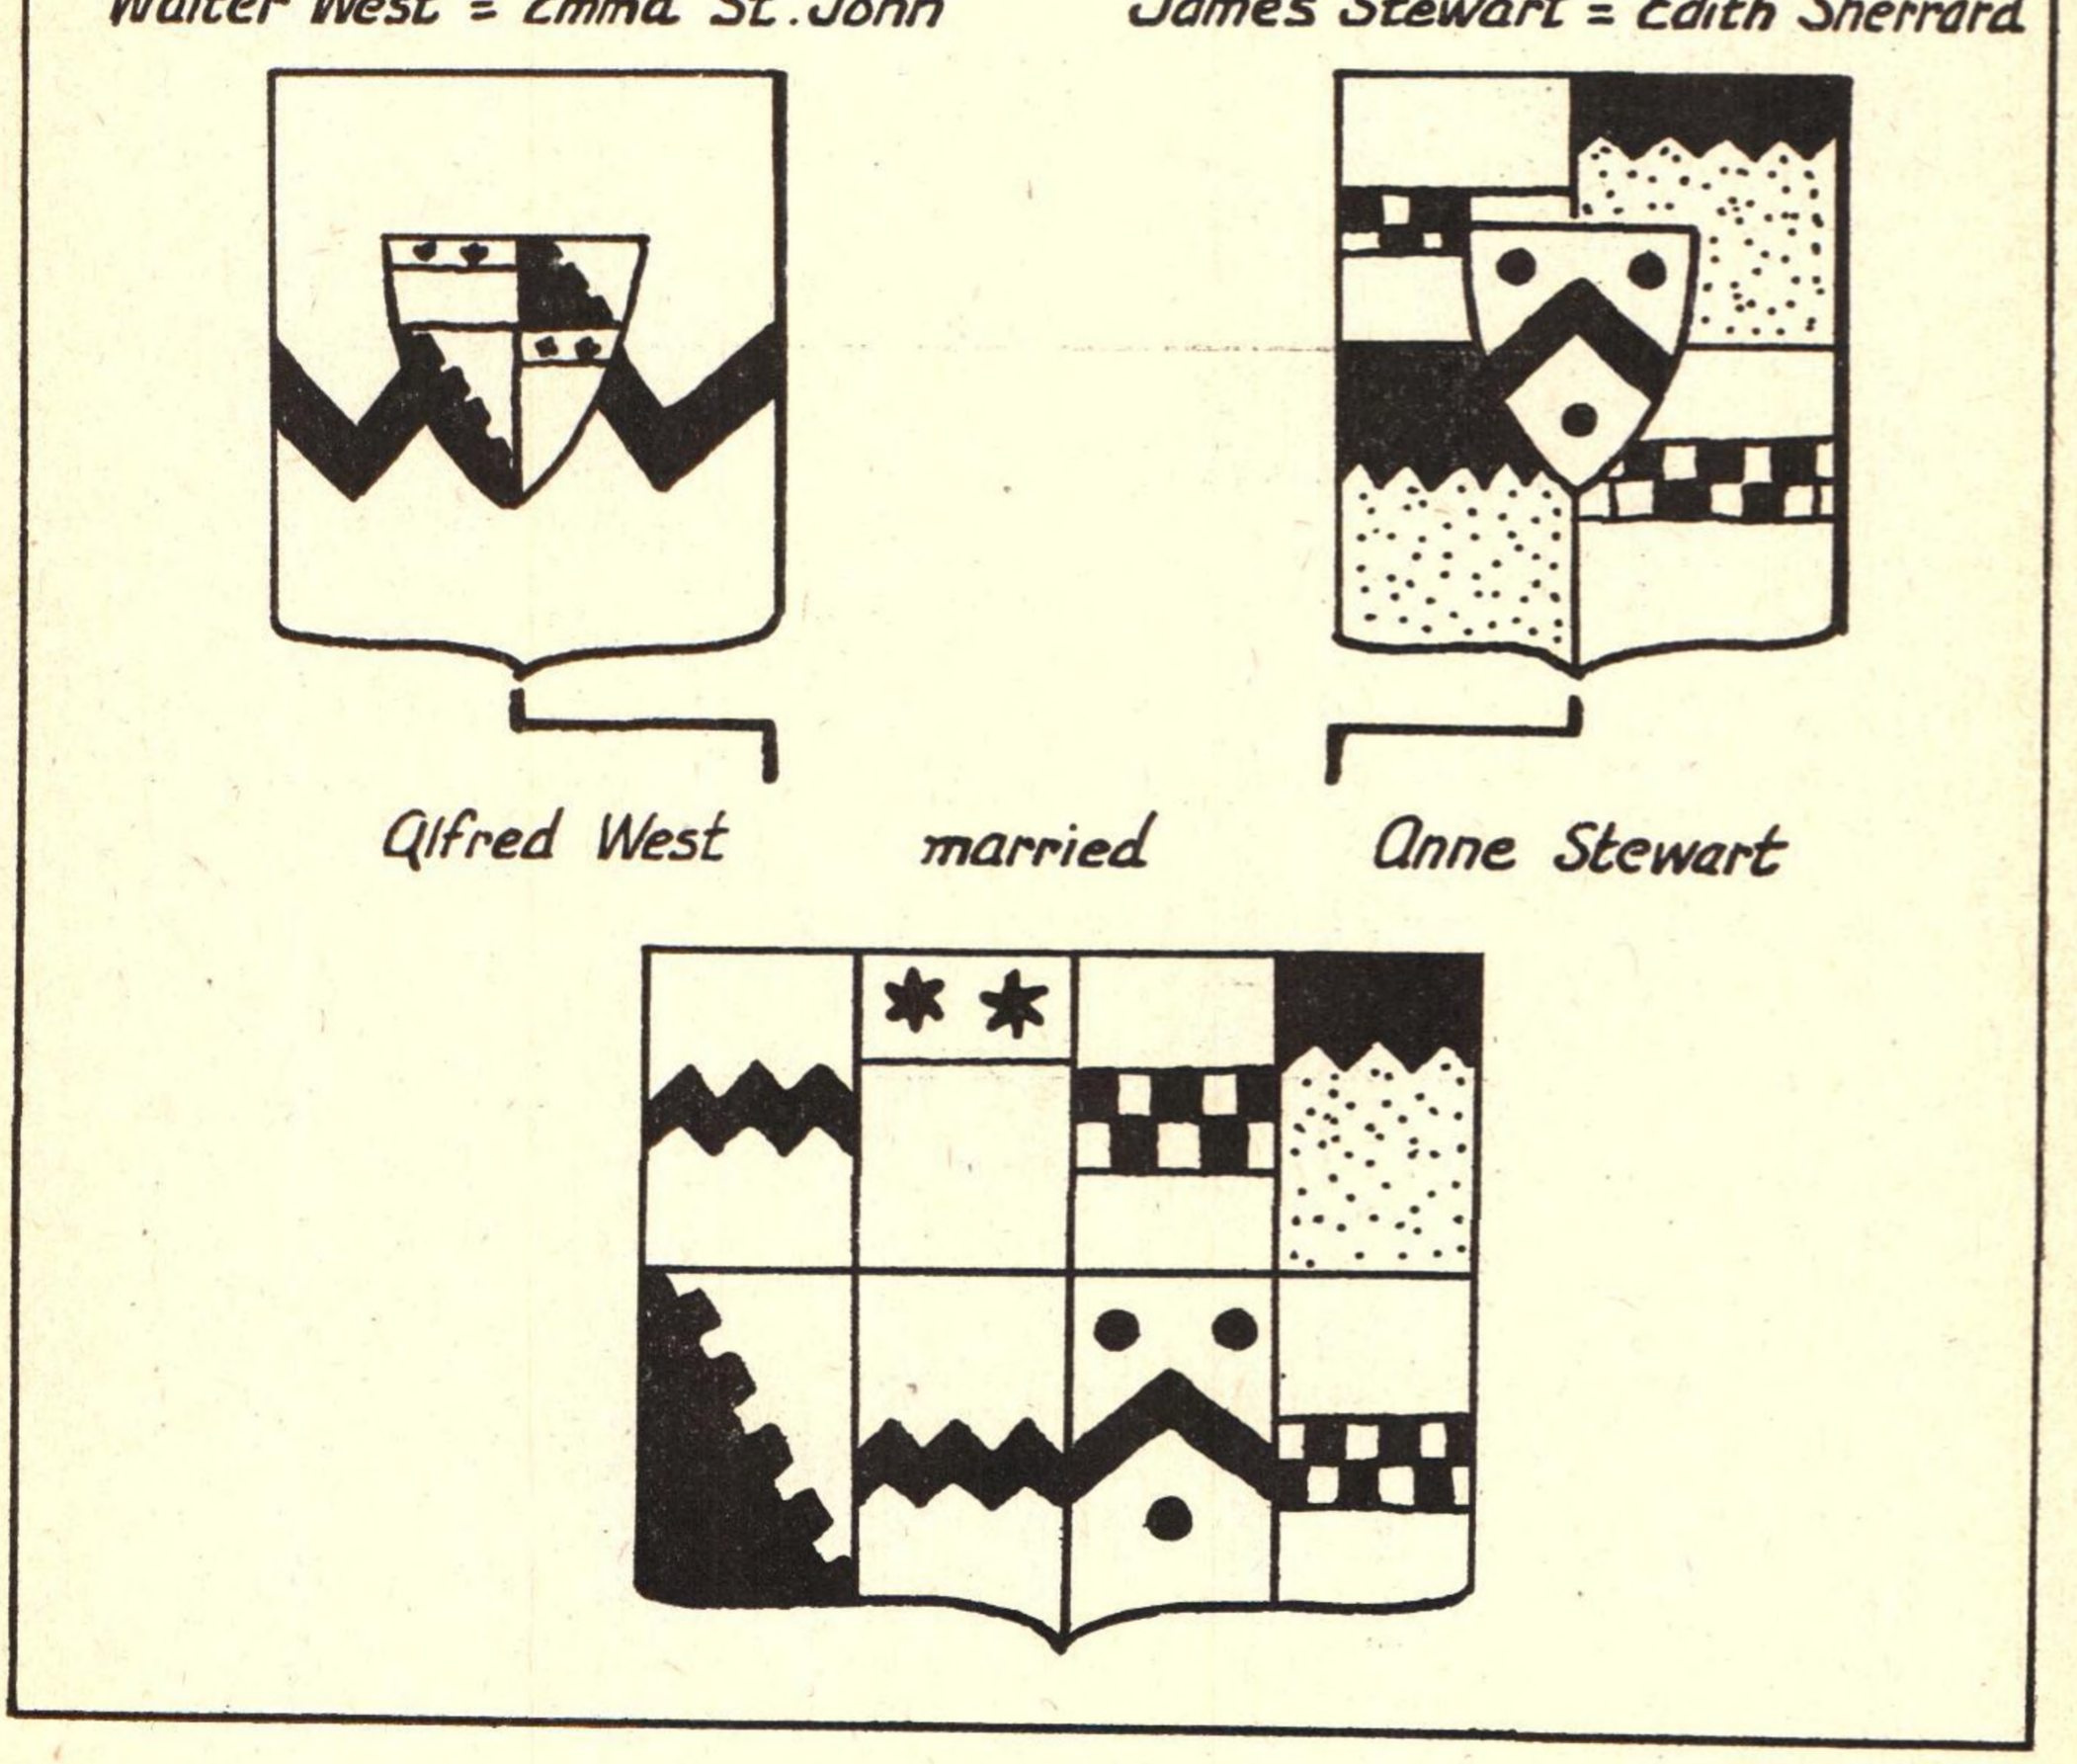

In these three short papers which I have written on heraldry, I have tried to pick out the highlights and not to go too deeply into any one of the various divisions or branches into which this subject can be divided. The subject is really almost a science and many books have been written about it, some more and some less accurate. Some of the rules may seem absurd at the present time, but at the period in which they were promulgated they performed a real service. Then, too, the subject of heraldry is, for the greater part, connected with war and its accompanying romance.

I will close this article with a description of what I consider the most unusual coat of arms and given for the most unusual reason of any one that I have ever seen.

These armorial bearings were granted to the Tetlow family of Lancaster in 1760. They are blazoned as follows: "Azure; on a fess argent, five musical lines, sable, thereon a rose gules, between two escallops of the third; in chief a nag's head erased of the second, between two Crosses crosslet or; and in base a harp of the last." Crest "On a book erect gules, clasped and ornamented or, a silver penny on which is written the Lord's Prayer; on the top of the book, a dove proper, holding in the beak a crow quill pin sable.'' Motto ''PRAEMIUM VIRTUTIS HONOR.'' This heraldic curiosity was granted because a member of the family had engraved the Lord's Prayer on a silver penny. See illustration.

The Shield of Pretence

In a former article, I explained the "Impaling" the arms of a husband and wife is placing them side by side on the same shield. I did not explain the marshalling of the arms of husband and wife by means of a shield of pretence. This is only done in the case of a woman being an "heiress."

An "heiress" is not necessarily a person of means, she may not have a penny, but the term "heiress" from a heraldic stand point is "the sole issue of any gentleman bearing arms."

In the case of a man marrying an heiress, he would, after her father's death, impose her armorial bearings upon his own shield, charged on an Inescutcheon, or shield of pretence, thereby intimating that he has a "pretence" to her hereditaments. This he can not do, unless his wife has actually succeeded to her inheritance. During her father's life time, or while there is a possibility of a male heir being born, however remote the possibility may be, her husband only impales her arms.

The diagram will illustrate this point.

DEATH OF C. A. MATHIS

Word has been received of the death of C. A. Mathis, 89, of Greenwood, Nebraska. He was one of the oldest living members of the A. N. A. holding membership No. 13.

Aside from having a life long interest in coins Mr. Mathis collected postage stamps and other objects of interest.

GOVERNMENT PLAYS SAFE

"Know Your Money," said a sign on a display in the window of the Franklin Society for Home Building and Savings at 217 Broadway. The display showed a comparison of real and very poor counterfeit bills, side by side, in denominations of $1 to $100, totaling $156 in each column. Early yesterday, an earnest student of currency smashed the window and took the display away for closer study. What he learned was this: The "real" money, furnished by the government for such purposes, carried serial numbers in zeros—and was printed on only one side.

THE COINS OF EUROPE

"A study of continental money of the mediaeval and more modern eras admits us to an insight into innumerable points connected with political vicissitudes and changes, religious aspirations and peculiarities, and social episodes, for which we might vainly look elsewhere. The historian, the artist, the philosopher, and the portrayer of sentiments and usages, possess here a field of research even now very imperfectly explored and utilized. We ought to be thankful for the light which is shed on features of bygone life throughout an entire continent by thousands on thousands of these monuments, each in its portrait, its legend, its motto, its name, its very shape and material, telling some story of the ages."

THE SILVER CERTIFICATES

SERIES 1878 AND 1880

By LOYD B. GETTYS, Davenport, Iowa
Member of the Board of Governors of the A. N. A.

Under an Act of Congress February 28, 1878, holders of silver dollars could deposit them with the Treasurer or Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in sums of not less than ten dollars, and receive certificates of not less than ten dollars each, to correspond with the denomination of United States notes. The Act also provided that the coin deposited representing the certificates should be held in the treasury for payment of the certificates on demand, and that the certificates were receivable for customs, taxes, and all public dues. Their reissue was also authorized.

There was much opposition to this Act. John Jay Knox in 1884 said that the law "provides for the forced coinage of silver dollars at the expense of gold in the Treasury; and the various efforts to repeal the law have been fruitless. If not repealed the result will be, not long hence, the demonetization of the gold coin which is now the standard, and the substitution of the silver dollar in place thereof."

The denominations of the silver certificates series 1878 and 1880, both issued under the Act of 1878, were $10, $20, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. Only the first four denominations are discussed in this article.

On the obverse the certificates bear the inscription, "CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT," and the statement, "THIS CERTIFIES THAT THERE HAVE BEEN DEPOSITED WITH THE TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES AT WASHINGTON, D. C., PAYABLE AT HIS OFFICE TO THE BEARER, ON DEMAND, ——— SILVER DOLLARS."

Some of the 1878 and 1880 issues called for payment of silver deposited with the Assistant Treasurer in New York. These were countersigned by him, and the inscription was altered to meet this condition.

I have seen one certificate payable through the Assistant Treasurer at San Francisco, California: a 100-dollar denomination note, series 1878, having a large red seal with rays, signed by Scofield and Gilfillan and countersigned by Anthony.

On the obverse of the $10 certificate appears the portrait of Robert Morris, a great American. He was born at Liverpool, England, in 1734 and came to America at the age of 14. As a Philadelphia merchant he amassed a large fortune; he was a member of the Continental Congress and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. In 1781 he was appointed Superintendent of Finance, and when failing to get public support he borrowed on his personal credit to provide funds for the Army.

In 1781 Robert Morris founded the Bank of North America, which aided in financing the American revolution. Incidentally, it is the only National Bank without the word National in its title. Mr. Morris, as Superintendent of Finance, announced this approval by Congress and stated the prudence and necessity of the measure. In part he said: "The exigencies of the United States require an anticipation of our revenue, while, at the same time, there is not such confidence established as will call out, for that purpose, the funds of individual citizens. The use, then, of a bank is to aid the government by their moneys and credit, for which they will have every proper reward and security, to gain from individuals that credit which property, abilities, and integrity never failed to command—and to give a new spring to commerce, in the moment when, on the removal of all its restriction, the citizens of America shall enjoy and possess that freedom for which they contend."

In 1787 Robert Morris nominated George Washington for the Presidency.

On the $20 denomination appears the portrait of Stephen Decatur, one of the most daring officers in the American Navy during the early period of its history. He enlisted as a midshipman in 1798. In 1803, during the war with Tripoli, he took command of the Enterprise of the Mediterranean squadron. In 1813 he was given honorary title of Commodore and placed in command of the squadron in New York Harbor. Stephen Decatur's "Toast," given in April 1816, is famous to this day: "Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations, may she always be right; but, our country, right or wrong."

The $50 certificate is imprinted with the portrait of Edward Everett, one of the foremost orators of his time. He was born at Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1794. He served as a member of Congress, Governor of Massachusetts, and from 1841 to 1845 he was Minister to England. He was President of Harvard from 1846 to 1849, Secretary of State in 1852, and in 1853 was elected to the United States Senate. Mr. Everett with his oration on George Washington earned nearly $100,000 which he gave to the purchase of Mt. Vernon. The last of his great orations was delivered at Gettysburg in 1863 at the time of Lincoln's immortal speech. He died at Boston in 1865.

James Monroe's portrait appears on the $100 certificate. Mr. Monroe served as fifth President of the United States. He was educated at William and Mary College. He was elected to the United States Senate in 1790. In 1816 James Monroe was elected President of the United States. The acquisition of Florida from Spain, and the settlement of the question respecting the extension of slavery by the Missouri Compromise helped to reelect him almost unanimously in 1820.

President Monroe's most noteworthy acts included the recognition of the independence of Mexico and of the South American republics, and the enunciation of the Monroe Doctrine. President Monroe died on July 4, 1831.

The reverses of these series of notes are printed in black. They are extremely beautiful in design, with the word "SILVER" in large letters extending across the entire certificate. The reverse bears this inscription: "THIS CERTIFICATE IS RECEIVABLE FOR CUSTOMS, TAXES AND ALL PUBLIC DUES AND WHEN SO RECEIVED MAY BE REISSUED."

The collector in acquiring the silver certificates series 1878 and 1880 has choice items in his album. Their beauty of design and interesting historical character are enhanced by their degree of rarity, particularly the series of 1878. Of course the $100 certificate payable at San Francisco is so rare that it is probably unique. Furthermore, the 1880 series in uncirculated condition is believed to be as scarce as the Demand Notes.

SENDS MONTHLY NEWS-SHEET TO MEN IN SERVICE

Editor NUMISMATIST:

I am enclosing a copy of the News-Sheet which the Philadelphia Coin Club sends monthly to its members in the service and to those unable to attend meetings. There are others on the mailing list too, such as the officers and certain others, selected for one reason or another.

I do not need to say that it has been more than successful in keeping our disabled and service members in touch with us, and it has been especially welcome to those who are sick, giving them something to think about.

You may be interested to learn of the official action we of the Philadelphia Coin Club are taking in forming our own committee on papers with a certificate of merit to be presented for the best paper of the year. This committee will in turn work with the committee of the A. N. A. We, of the committee, have not as yet had our meeting to draw up a set of rules as to these papers. These need not be hard and fixed, but it seems to me that some guide as to length, illustration, and possibly some rough suggestions as to form, might be in order. I would appreciate any information you, or the A. N. A. committee on papers has to offer.

Yours truly,

—ROSCOE F. BALLARD.

Chester, Penna., November 20, 1944.

ON THE CONDITION OF A COIN

"Even condition is a relative term. The auctioneer tells you that a piece is "fine for the coin:" and this is apt to be most true when a coin has been struck on impure material by an unskilful moneyer, or when, as in so many of the colonial coins of all countries, siege-pieces, or currency of troubled and insecure reigns, the flan is too small for the die. At any rate, condition has of late commanded more general respect in England, France, and the United States; and when one reflects that a private cabinet can be little more than a selection of specimens, it would appear to be very possible to reject examples which are undesirable on this account, if the object is simply to bring together a representative assemblage of productions agreeable to the eye and taste."

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 10th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

LOYD B. GETTYS SUGGESTS READERS BE PATIENT

Mr. Lewis M. Reagan
G. P. O. Box 103
Brooklyn 1, New York

Dear Lew:

Just got your monthly report and note reference to continuous complaints about the arrival of THE NUMISMATIST.

Now, all of this delay is not due to the printing schedule. A good share, in fact the larger per cent of the blame is in the Post Office Department. As you know, we have a lot to do with the mails, Waterloo, Iowa, from Davenport is on direct route, about a five hour trip, and on several occasions it has taken mail four days to be delivered to my Waterloo office. These post offices are short of help the same as anyone else. I have another office at Fairfield, Iowa, 100 miles from Davenport, on the main line of the Rock Island, several trains a day go through. Sometimes it is three days before mail is delivered to my office.

If I were you I would tell some of the lads that are all the time complaining to keep their shirts on. It can't be helped; the post offices do not have the manpower and delays are unavoidable.

Sincerely yours,

LOYD B. GETTYS.

Davenport, Iowa,
February 6, 1945.

Notice to Advertisers

It is believed that setting back the deadline for advertising copy from the familiar 15th of the month to the 10th, an observance of the change would result in earlier mailing of the magazine—a desirable thing to advertisers and readers alike.

The main cause of delayed delivery for over two years has been and still remains in the postal service. Several thousand experienced members of the Department are in the Armed Forces, and replacements have been difficult. The publishing business has likewise had its severe problems.

This leeway of five days will be of great help to our printers, the J. W. Stowell Company, and should meet with no serious objection from our advertisers. It is entirely a war measure, to be erased as soon as conditions permit.

Will our advertisers therefore send in their copy to the Business Manager by the 10th of the month for the following month's issue, and remain on this schedule until further notice. Their cooperation will be sincerely appreciated.

A CORRECTION

In the advertisement of Murray Heiserman on page 199 of the February issue, the African Gold Seal notes and the Hawaiian overprints were listed as "crisp, Unc." These should have been described as "fine," except in the case of the $20 Hawaiian, which graded "Ex. F." Our sincere apologies to Mr. Heiserman.

THE EDITOR'S CORNER

TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Here it is the 15th of the month and the copy for THE NUMISMATIST is all ready for Mr. Stowell, the printer, with the exception of "The Editor's Corner." We have enough material on hand to fill a dozen pages but it's not exactly what we want for this particular issue.

During the last three months we have received letters from readers all over the U. S. and a number from foreign countries as well. I have them all here before me and there is not a single one that I do not appreciate. The complimentary ones are heartening; the critical ones discouraging; the constructive ones by far the most useful.

Frank G. Duffield who was Editor of THE NUMISMATIST for a quarter of a century, writes: "No hobby magazine ever comes up to the editor's hopes and expectations. There are too many other hands taking part in its production to call it a one-man affair. I believe the most successful magazine is the one that gives the readers what they want."

Other letters have to do with various phases of coin collecting and the coin business.

The rapid growth of the A. N. A. during the last several years has brought about a serious shortage of worthwhile numismatic information. New collectors are demanding information as never before and it would seem that THE NUMISMATIST will soon be forced to reprint numismatic lore long familiar to experienced collectors.

The subject matter of letters having to do with the coin business occupies the next place of importance. Many of the letters are in the form of complaints from collectors. This is to be expected considering the large number of new dealers now engaged in the coin business. Misrepresentation of condition seems to be "the bone of contention." There is a real demand for a standard system of classification, or at least an honest interpretation of the system now in use.

A surprising, if not alarming, number of letters notify us that the senders have discovered die breaks on recently issued coins. Generally they want the coins to be listed as "new varieties." This unusual interpretation of the meaning of the word "variety" is something that demands immediate attention. Even a few years ago every collector understood that a die break served only to identify a variety, not to make one.

A goodly number of the letters suggest methods of improving THE NUMISMATIST. Some of the suggestions have been of real value and are already in effect. Others will have to wait until the end of the paper shortage. Such letters are of much value as they indicate the likes and dislikes of readers, and give the Editor information that is unobtainable elsewhere.

While all letters received have been answered, we wish, at this time, to express our sincere appreciation to our various correspondents. The motto on our coins, E. PLURIBUS UNUM might well be applied to THE NUMISMATIST.

COIN MOTTOES IN LATIN

Since 1930 the Editor has been compiling a list of Coin Mottoes and Their Translations. So far, over 3,000 have been collected and most of them have been translated. If sufficient interest is shown in this list it will be published in serial form in THE NUMISMATIST.

In the meantime, collectors are invited to submit Latin mottoes for translation and comparison.

CONDITION COLLECTORS

Recent years have developed a surprisingly large number of "condition collectors," who demand that a coin be perfectly struck, in perfect condition, and having the original brilliant coloring. To them a bronze that is patinated an even olive green is "discolored." A silver coin that is even delicately toned is "tarnished." If the same silver coin is expertly restored to its original color it has been "cleaned," and they will not accept "cleaned" coins.

Such collectors should not be hastily regarded as "cranks." If it is their hobby to collect perfect coins, and if they are willing to pay the high premium that such coins command, they are entitled to the respect of their fellow collectors.

Communique—

Excerpt from an ex-coin dealer now with the American Army, Somewhere in Europe.

"Most of the fellows in our unit are coin-collectors. They don't go in for it in a big way, the general idea being to get enough foreign coins to make a dingle-dangle bracelet for their sweethearts back in the U. S. A.

My two foxhole pals kept me awake half the night discussing the "best way to put a hole in a coin." If they had held the coins they wanted holed a few inches above the top of our foxhole, the enemy snipers across the way in a clump of woods, would have done a neat job for them. Money doesn't mean much here, but a few cakes of scented soap will buy about anything you want."

SANTA CLAUS ON A BANKNOTE

Our favorite numismatic Christmas card of 1944 is one received from Charles W. Foster, ex-librarian of the A. N. A. It is a reproduction of a $5 note issued in 1833 by the Howard Banking Co. of Boston, showing an early picture of Santa Claus and his eight tiny reindeer.

We say "early" for the American Santa Claus as pictured on this note, took form around 1822, the year Clement Moore wrote the popular poem commencing, " 'Twas the night before Christmas."

Occasionally we pass by the grave of Moore which is in the Trinity Church Cemetery, close by the Museum of the American Numismatic Society at 155th Street and Broadway, New York City. Among other notables buried there are Robert Chanler, the artist; John James Audubon, the naturalist; and Philip Livingston, a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Coming Attractions—

Several of the articles underway but not yet completed have to do with "The Kettle Tokens," "Silver Dollars of 1851 and 1852," "Notes on U. S. Proof Coins," and "Coins of Siam and Cambodia."

Only Coin News—

Sorry, but THE NUMISMATIST does not publish information on foreign stamps. Any stamp magazine would be glad to consider your article.

Stop the Press—

A club secretary writes "As usual I'm a few days late with the monthly report of our Club. I had to write it in a hurry and hope that you can make it out. And another thing, can't something be done about getting THE NUMISMATIST out on time?"

The new deadline is the 10th of each month instead of the 15th. This change should expedite the publishing of THE NUMISMATIST. It will also make a lot of club reports three weeks earlier instead of a week late. Don't worry about the Editor being able to "make out" your report. Confusing information can be edited with straight lines. Have, as our favorite mayor (LaGuardia) advises, "patience and fortitude."—Editor.

Junk Collector—

A contemptuous term applied by supercilious persons to those who collect coins of an inferior quality and sometimes of minor interest.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTIONS WANTED

Occasionally it is suggested to collectors that they write up the results of their studies so that others might benefit by them. Too often the reply is, "I'm not a writer and I wouldn't know how to begin." This is an unreasonable attitude. The lack of experience in writing for publication should deter no one from giving others the benefit of his knowledge.

Much of the continued success of THE NUMISMATIST is due to the fact that it is written almost entirely by members of the American Numismatic Association. Thus we have a continual flow of articles from collectors having divers interests and methods of treatment, yet few of them are professional writers.

Another alibi is the familiar "I don't know what to write about." This excuse is no longer necessary.

We have recently completed a survey of numismatic literature in order to discover phases that have not been receiving proper attention.

While this list of neglected subjects includes the opinions of various collectors, it makes no pretense of being complete, and does certainly not prevent our contributors from choosing a subject we have omitted.

Some of these subjects would have to be published in serial form. Others can be presented in the form of short articles, (200 to 2000 words) by various writers at various times. As an example, History of Coining, should be a well-co-ordinated article covering the subject in a general manner. Early American Scrip could best be treated by a series of articles independent of each other.

It frequently happens that two or more writers will work on the same subject independently of each other. To avoid this duplication of effort and results we suggest that you use THE NUMISMATIST as a writers' clearing house.

Your contemplated work will be announced and your fellow-collectors will be in a position to give you any help within their ability.

If you are in need of a bibliography of research sources, the editorial board will be only too glad to supply it.

SUGGESTIONS TO CONTRIBUTORS

By STUART MOSHER

1. Type your copy double-spaced and allow ample margins. This is important. It is easier for the editor and printer to read and allows space for editing. Indent each paragraph. Write on one side of the paper only. Write your name in the upper left hand corner of the page. Number the pages. Use special care in writing names and figures. Never correct by back-spacing and writing over the name or figure. Cross out and rewrite. Every word, every letter, should be plainly written.

2. Plan your article along well-defined lines. Prepare a draft before you begin, and if in doubt as to content and continuity, consult the editor. Avoid generalities and be careful to distinguish between opinion and fact.

3. Remember when writing for THE NUMISMATIST that you are writing for your fellow collectors and not for the general public. Articles designed to interest non-collectors should be offered to newspapers and hobby magazines.

4. Use short sentences. Strive to convey the entire thought in as few words as possible. Remember that the length of an article has nothing to do with its merits. Don't make the reader wander through a maze of words to get a few simple facts. It is well to bear in mind that the story of Creation, the greatest event ever chronicled in written form, is told in 400 words.

5. The shortest word that will express an idea is preferred. Longer words may be used as synonyms. Never use two words where one will do; thus: "burned," instead of "destroyed by fire."

6. Avoid overworked phrases and titles such as "Money, the root of all evil," "Adventures in Numismatics," "The mystery of coins," "The hobby of kings and the king of hobbies," et cetera.

7. The heading should emphasize the content of an article. Its importance is sometimes overrated and it is generally best made up after the article is written. If in doubt, let the editor suggest a title.

8. Be definite and direct. Don't say "It is rumored that a well-known collector . . ." State the source of information and the collector's name.

ABBREVIATIONS—

Use abbreviations sparingly. Abbreviate "number" when followed by numerals; as, A. N. A. No. 3660. Abbreviate Sr. and Jr. after names. Put commas on each side; thus "John Smith, Jr., also attended."

Use no period after a word shortened by the use of the apostrophe to denote omitted letters, as ass'n for association. Never use a "short and" (&) in straight reading matter or club reports.

In club reports and catalogue listing, some numismatic terms may be abbreviated. Thus: unc. for uncirculated; ex. f. for extremely fine; v. f. for very fine; insc. for inscription; stdg. for standing; r. for right; l. for left; obv. for obverse; rev. for reverse. Never use Rx. for "Reverse." It is illogical and confusing.

CAPITALIZATION—

Capitalize important events; as, Golden Jubilee, World War, International Monetary Conference, Sede Vacante, et cetera.

Capitalize Pope, Caesar, Czar, Kaiser, King, etc., when preceding the name, but lower case when not used with the name of a specified person; as, King George III, the Russian czars, etc.

Capitalize the names of associations, clubs, societies, commissions and political parties. Watch improper nouns following names; as J. Jones, secretary; J. Jones, numismatist; South African government, Liberal party, etc.

When describing a coin in straight copy never capitalize the denomination, metal, condition or rarity.

Always begin a quoted sentence with a capital. For an exception to this, see rules for quoting part of a sentence under Quotation Marks.

Capitalize the names of magazines, books, titles, etc.

Do not use capitals, except in unusual instances, to emphasize words.

COMPOUNDS AND THE HYPHEN—

Never use the hyphen except for compound words, or in dividing syllables at the end of a line. In general, avoid the hyphen and use the oblique space or dash, /—.

If two one-syllable words are to be combined, make them one word save where two vowels or two like consonants come together, when the hyphen is to be used.

Numbers, from twenty-one to ninety-nine, when spelled out should be compounded.

Compounds of half or quarter should be written with a hyphen: half-dollar, half-crown, quarter-dollar, quarter-eagle, etc.

Watch foreign prefixes such as demi, semi, bi, tri, inter, super, anti, etc. They do not require a hyphen except when followed by the same vowel as that in which they end; followed by a proper name; or, when a hyphen is needed to distinguish the word.

If in doubt on the compounding or division of words, consult a standard dictionary.

FIGURES—

If numerals occur only occasionally in the running text of an article it is best to spell them out. This does not apply to dates which should be expressed in Arabic figures.

Club reports are written in a slightly different style. (Club secretaries please note.)

When numbers less than ten are used, spell them out. Write; Attendance, 45 members and nine guests (not 9 guests).

Exceptions: J. Jones exhibited four 2-cent pieces, five 5-cent pieces and 12 silver dollars.

Ciphers (00000) are not used in run-in matter where only dollars are given. Instead of $1.00, $2.50, $5.00, $10.00, write $1, $2.50, $5 and $10.

Spell out all numbers beginning a sentence. If this makes the sentence cumbersome, rewrite it. Examples: 1877 dates are scarce; 101 members were present. Say: Those dated 1877 are scarce; In attendance were 101 members.

QUOTATION MARKS—

Excerpts from the works of other writers should be enclosed in "quotes." Be sure to end quoted matter with a quotation mark.

When quoting part of a sentence, use quotes at the beginning or end as the case may be: "This coin is rare . . ." or ". . . this coin is rare." Note the capitalization which should be consistent with the original sentence.

Use single 'marks' to enclose a quotation within a quotation.

The title of an article (quoted) should be enclosed with quotation marks. The titles of books and periodicals should be italicized. Thus: Dudley Butler in his article "Heraidry," THE NUMISMATIST, January, 1945, states . . ."

In titles include the as part of the quotation.

Do not use quotes when writing the inscriptions found on coins or medals. Use capitals: as; IN GOD WE TRUST: not; "In God We Trust."

TITLES—

Never use Mr. when the Christian name or initials are given. The surname should be given alone in subsequent uses. Run list of officers thus: President, Martin F. Kortjohn; first vice president, V. Leon Belt; general secretary, Lewis M. Reagan.

Do not make titles as Lawyer J. Jones, Barber Smith, Fireman Brown. Write, J. Jones, lawyer, etc.

THE PERIOD—

Declarative and imperative sentences should be terminated with a period.

Use no period after per cent, ass'n (association), or after Roman numerals, Vol. IV, Louis XIV, etc.

Use three periods, double spaced, to denote an omitted passage. Thus: "The first thing to understand . . ."

Use the period to set off decimal parts from whole numbers.

THE COMMA—

No comma between name and residence where "of" is used, as "John Smith of Chicago."

Avoid involved constructions requiring the use of parentheses or dashes. Commas, semicolons and periods are the only marks of punctuation necessary in clear sentences.

Use a comma to indicate the omission of important words in a sentence; as, "Will write tomorrow; if not, next week."

Punctuate inside quotes. Study following sentence.

Use a comma after "whereas," "resolve," etc., and follow with a lower case letter. "Resolved, that we, the members of . . ."

Use a comma to separate month and year, as March, 1945.

THE COLON AND THE SEMICOLON—

Short sentences are preferred to a too liberal use of the semicolon or colon. Avoid complex constructions.

Use the colon and semicolon when listing exhibits, thus: John Smith: English tokens; French paper money, coins and tokens; coins of Belgium.

No rules can be absolute. These rules are for guidance, but it must be recognized that there may possibly be exceptions.

LIBRARY NOTES

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian and Curator, Burlington, Iowa

For some reason beyond the comprehension of the librarian, there are more delays in returning books than any time the last three and a half years. It requires more time for books to reach destinations, but we have made allowance for this. In one instance last fall, it took twelve days for a parcel to reach the west coast. This however, was at the time servicemen's mail was going overseas. There were other delays during December when Christmas parcels clogged the mails.

But that is no excuse for keeping books two or three months ! ! !

One of our close friends in a neighboring state is an offender. After sending three or four warning postal cards, we send a personal letter and always get the books back. But in the meantime, it makes our back-order department look rather sick, especially after other members wait for weeks and frequently a month or more for books.

For the first few months after a new library list appears, there are many back orders. Then after some book is mentioned in a magazine, several members will ask for the work and the last to write in have to wait the longest.

We have two copies of several of the most popular works. Yet, in the past few months we have used our personal volumes in order to prevent as many delays as possible. We are not going to mention the dozen books constantly on waiting lists for fear others will get the fever and write for them. Another thing which causes back orders is a magazine article on a specific specialty. When we read an article in THE NUMISMATIST we know will have a wide appeal, we find that within a few days, requests for books on the subject will start coming in. We haven't missed yet. Just as the Joseph Barnet series stimulated interest in Civil War tokens, other articles on half-dollars have given us back orders recently. There are several back order cards on file now for works on half-dollars. Too often, a member will write, "Send us everything you have on half dollars." We recently sent a member four books and learned in a letter he had three of them. Best method is to use the book list which all members should receive, yet about one-fifth of our correspondents merely ask for general works without consulting the library list.

If this sounds like one long gripe, we slipped up some place. What we had hoped to do was impress upon members the importance of returning books promptly. And to make it clear we are not at fault when books are not received promptly.

If you missed the October 9, 1944, issue of Life containing the illustrations on invasion money of the axis and allies, it now is in the A. N. A. library. In our next report, we'll try to list, briefly, several recent acquisitions and some of the old favorites which haven't been in circulation lately.

The monetary unit of the Republic of Panama is the "balboa" named after the great explorer of the 16th Century.

MAKING A RUBBING OF A COIN

A very decent rubbing can be made of a coin by placing it under a piece of paper, holding it firmly in place and rubbing the paper lightly with a lead pencil. With a little practice you will became an expert.

An impression of a coin is also very easy to make. Cut paper, almost any weight will do, into rectangular pieces so that it can be folded over the coin, leaving a margin of at least half an inch. The paper should be dampened slightly then folded and the coin placed in it in proper position so that the impression will show the obverse to the left and the reverse to the right. Press the paper firmly on the coin and place it in a coin-press. A good press can be bought for five dollars or less. If you do not have a press, you can utilize other forms of pressure. But first you will need two pads of felt about a half inch thick and two inches square. You can make these from an old felt hat if you have difficulty in obtaining upholsterer's felt.

Next to each side of paper covering the coin, place several thicknesses of blotting paper. Then place the felt pads on either side, snap a rubber band around it and apply pressure by placing it under the leg of a table, heavy desk, or chair. When you remove it, after a half hour or so, you will find the dampened paper impressed to the coin and this should not be disturbed until the next step or the rubbing process has been completed.

Rub some graphite (the lead of a pencil) on the tip of your finger and apply it lightly to the impression. That's about all there is to making an impression.

If you want to preserve the high relief of the impression, apply a coat of shellac or nail polish to the concave side. Now it's ready to paste in your catalogue or for any other purpose you may wish to use it.

NOTES OF THE TRADE

On February 10th, the old-time dealer Horace M. Grant of Providence, Rhode Island, conducted a mail bid sale of 1154 lots. Included was a decent collection of U. S. copper and silver coins. No report has been received as yet as to the prices realized, but generally Mr. Grant's sales are highly successful.

Collectors visiting Providence should make it a point to visit Mr. Grant at 109 Empire Street, close by the main business district of the city. Aside from being a district secretary of the A. N. A., he is one of the oldest established dealers in the United States.

James Kelly of Dayton, Ohio, has issued his 20th Fixed Price List. It contains a fine selection of U. S. and foreign coins. A copy will be sent without charge to any collector who writes for it.

Walter F. Webb of Rochester, New York, conducted his 54th Sale on February 10th. Any collector who finds nothing to interest him in the 1597 lots offered can consider himself practically retired. We like Mr. Webb's Numismatic Chatter which is a regular feature in his catalogues. It's strange why he has never offered his entertaining observations to THE NUMISMATIST.

Mr. Webb is perhaps the best known conchologist in the entire world. The information contained in his price-lists and catalogues is accepted as gospel by the most advanced shell collectors.

A Price List of U. S. Coins has been received from Ben's Stamp & Coin Company, Chicago. It contains an interesting assortment of coins from half cents to silver dollars.

It does a man good to see the name of Charles H. Fisher, Cleveland, among our advertisers once again. For years he has been a popular figure in the coin world and has done much to promote the A. N. A.

On March 3rd, the Numismatic Gallery, New York City, will offer for public sale the second section of an extensive collection of United States silver coins.

This sale will dispose of the quarter dollars and twenty cent pieces. Most all of the rare dates and mint marks are included and many of the pieces are outstanding for their unusual state of preservation.

The catalogue is unusual in that it contains a complete description of the early quarter dollars as arranged and listed by A. W. Browning.

According to the cataloguers, the disposal of the entire collection will require five sections. After the last section is sold, a special edition of the catalogues will be printed in a limited edition. This will show the prices realized and should prove highly valuable as a reference on United States silver coins.

The second part of the collection of large cents formed by the late Howard R. Newcomb, will be sold by public auction at the galleries of the J. C. Morgenthau & Co., New York City. This sale will include the dates and varieties from 1816 to 1857. Date of sale will be announced later.

The February Bulletin of Frank Causey Wilson of Chicago contains United States coins in retail and wholesale quantities. He expects to issue this Bulletin regularly and invites those not on his mailing list to write for a copy.

Stack's of New York conducted a public auction of numismatic material on February 3rd. The sale was unusually well attended and bidding was highly competitive. Stacks have another sale coming up in the near future. Watch their ads and write for a catalogue if you are not on their mailing-list.

Part II of the Grinnell collection of paper money will be offered for public sale by Barney Bluestone, Syracuse, on March 10th. The catalogue just received is a splendid piece of work. Its a MUST for every collector of paper money.

The New Netherlands Coin Company, New York, will offer for sale a fine assortment of United States and foreign coins on April 17th. Catalogues will be sent without obligation to all interested collectors who write in. Lists of prices realized are sent free to all bidders.

B. Max Mehl of Fort Worth, writes that he has an important sale scheduled to take place within a few months. He will auction the collections of Wm. D. Waltman and Maurice Ryan. The first contains a choice selection of Pioneer gold. The second will offer a series of half-dollars including the rare 1838 Orleans mint issue.

Duplicates from the collection of Loyd B. Gettys will be sold by the Hollinbeck Stamp & Coin Co., Des Moines, within the near future. Catalogue will be sent free upon request.

ANENT A HAIR-DO DETAIL OF 1797

By MICHAEL J. A. MOLONY, Hollywood

In the interests of those who are concerned about minor coin details, which I personally am not, I am offering the results of some observations made on a number of U. S. silver dollars of 1797 which I recently acquired.

These observations indicate that John Hazeltine was not altogether correct, or at least not entirely clear, in his presentation of the dollar varieties he listed for this year.

Hazeltine's number 2, more commonly known as the small letter variety, declares the obverse die to be identical with Number 1, "but there seems to be an additional curl on top of the head under letter E in 'Liberty.' "

This would seem to at least suggest that this curl was added after the die was originally cut, and that this curl is never apparent except on this small-letter reverse variety. This is not so. I have one superb, boldly struck specimen of Hazeltine Number 1 in which this curl is very sharply in evidence, even though Hazeltine's listing and Standard Catalogue illustration indicates that it shouldn't be there. Then I have another specimen, still Hazeltine Number 1, in which the curl is still there, although it shows much less boldly; and still another which requires a strong glass to reveal even a faint trace of it.

I must conclude, then, that the curl was cut on the die in the first place; that this obverse die was first used together with the small-letter reverse die, and that this curl survived all of these strikings; that this same obverse die was then joined with the large-letter reverse die, and that the curl survived at least some of these strikings; and that this curl was the first detail to be seriously affected when this apparently inexpertly tempered die started to flatten out, which it finally did to such a degree that even the stars which it struck on the obverse were but faintly discernible.

RIGGERS AND RIVETERS

THE SOCIETY OF MEDALISTS' THIRTIETH ISSUE

By MAHONRI M. YOUNG, Sculptor

Believing that design, and after that drawing, is the fundamental fact in the plastic, graphic and pictorial arts, I have not hesitated to work in all of them. Having found out, early in life, that observation was an excellent substitute for imagination and its results much more convincing, I have gone to nature for my inspiration and subject matter. But observation is not enough no matter how keen or how profound. It must afterwards be made into a work of Art and that is where design comes in. It may come as a surprise that one who is known as a sculptor, a painter, an etcher, should dabble with the medal; but I assure you that I have never attempted anything without reverently consulting the masters. During my student days in Paris and on my travels in Italy and England I made it a point to hunt out and study the collections of medals. I also made many studies in the technique of reliefs.

As to the present medal, when I was asked to make designs I was troubled by the number of things I wanted to do—a whole host of subjects cried to be done. After rejecting subjects from the ring, Indian life, etc., I settled on one of my first loves—Labor. But there I found I had too much and would have to make a rigorous selection. I finally modelled three complete medals and did one side twice. Before that there were many drawings. Your committee selected the one now presented.

The subject matter came in rather an interesting way. Something after 1912 while I was occupying a studio in the Miller Building on 65th St. and Broadway, on the same floor as the Dean of all Medalists, John Flanagan, a row of brownstone buildings was torn down in 64th St. My studio had windows on the south so that I could see the operations of tearing down the old buildings, excavating the basement, erecting the steel for the new building and then the building of the walls and filling in of the floors. That summer I had commissions that had to be done. I found it very difficult to keep my mind on my work and my eyes inside my studio. But, I did manage to steal time to do several drawings and a sheaf of sketches. This medal grew out of those drawings and sketches.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense. and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

George S. Vanderwende talked to us about the Presidential medal which is struck by the mint for the Secretary of War and presented to each of the Indian Chiefs at the time of inauguration. He also exhibited and remarked about the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th term medals of President Roosevelt. He said January 20th of Inauguration year is a marked holiday on the calendars in Washington.

He also spoke about the many coins to come to us from the men in the armed services and mentioned specifically coins from China dating back 1000 or more years which recently have been dug from burial mounds.

The evening's auction consisted largely of silver coins and was conducted by Wm. A. Schick, Jr.

—ARTHUR SIPE, Secretary.

RICHMOND COIN CLUB—The 47th Meeting was held February 14, at the Byrd Park Club House with President O. L. Lewis in the Chair. There were nine members present.

Mr. Howe gave a most interesting and instructive talk on "U. S. Type Sets." This was particularly of interest to those of the members present who are just beginning their collections, while the older members found much of interest to them. Mr. Howe also displayed his type sets of U. S. coins which were all in beautiful condition.

Mr. Lewis displayed his second, third and fourth inaugural medals of Pres. F. D. Roosevelt, as well as large cents, half cents, two cents, colonial coppers and fractional currency and large and small paper currency of the U. S.

—HELEN G. LEWIS, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 102nd meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A. on January 25th, with President Worth presiding. There were 17 members and six visitors present.

A communication and resolution from the Oregon Numismatic Society was read and discussed. This resolution, which proposes that the American Numismatic Association sponsor the publishing of a universal Numismatic Encyclopedia, was approved by our organization.

The following officers were elected for 1945: H. H. Zeckser, president; William Worth, Vice president; G. W. Woods, secretary. Howard Glickert, treasurer.

Exhibits:

Mr. Saeman: Broken bank bills and clearing house certificates.

Mr. Fouts: Washington and Oregon transportation tokens.

Mr. Bibler: Allied and Japanese invasion currency.

—G. W. WOODS, Secretary.

THE HEART OF AMERICA NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The 130th regular meeting was held on January 15, with President William A. Knapp presiding. There were 24 members and visitors in attendance.

Mr. Carlson was appointed chairman of a committee to endorse the resolution proposed by the Oregon Numismatic Society to sponsor a Numismatic Encyclopedia.

James G. Guinotte, Zada, Wilkinson, and Charles McAllister, were added to the membership roster.

It was decided to discontinue sending the Coin Bulletin to the non-members of the Club.

In response to James F. Byrnes's request to call off conventions, The Heart of America Numismatic Association has withdrawn its bid for the A. N. A. Convention until restrictions are lifted.

—HARRY BOSLEY, Secretary.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The monthly meeting, held at the Washington Hotel on February 5th, was called to order by President Major Joseph Moss.

There were 26 members present. Visitors were J. S. Bohrer, Col. Joseph Smith of Philadelphia, Pvt. W. E. Pollard, Charles F. Fowler, B. F. Penn, Lt. J. L. Kreiger USNR, Paul Coe, Capt. Patterson and Mrs. T. M. Ball.

Major Moss gave us an insight of the next meeting by telling us what was going to be found during the evening in March, in the way of rare and unusual gold coins.

—D. E. SUHRIE, Secretary.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY COIN CLUB—The 127th regular meeting was held at the New Rochelle Y. M. C. A. on January 16th. In accordance with past custom the year's first meeting was devoted to the entertaining of the members' "ladies," the evenings entertainment being derived from the exhibits displayed on the topic "What Do You Collect Besides Coins." The meeting was called to order by President Weidhaas who extended a hearty welcome to members and guests present. On a motion duly seconded and passed all regular business was dispensed with, and presentation of the exhibits by their possessors began.

Mr. Lighte: An interesting collection covering a great variety of items ranging from minerals and Indian relics to hand painted tiger skins.

Mr. Marsden: 120 different presidential buttons, Indian arrowhead collection; "My Friend" 22 caliber revolver of Civil War vintage, autograph books and post cards of 50 years ago, old beautifully carved meerschaum pipe, Indian handiworks of Onondagas of upper New York State. Stereopticon and slides of bygone days.

Ernest Weidhaas read a paper on "Freak Simulations in Minerals and Their Effect on Civilization" illustrating his remarks with specimens from a collection regarded as being one of the finest extant. Most of these specimens were of such startling beauty and artistry that it was difficult to believe they were natural creations of nature. Various choice pieces from the celebrated collections of John Calvert, Queen Victoria, and George F. Kunz; figure of Madonna in agate, complete with halo; head of Voltaire in chalcedony; free gold, unusual and odd formations.

Mrs. Weidhaas: Large collection of pendants featuring precious and semi-precious stones in variety of settings.

Mrs. Dewey: Extensive collection of seeds, all neatly bottled and displayed. Specimens included seed from grasses, flowers. weeds, vegetables and fruits. Also a collection of leaves and sprigs from various types of greenery mounted on black display cards.

Mr. Dewey: Number of newspapers, of which one (Bangor, Maine Daily Whig and Courier) was over 100 years old. The issues of more recent date all headlined important events in the world or in this country, one oddity being an issue of the New York Post with its main headline printed backwards and telling of Douglas "Wrong-Way" Corrigan's epic flight in 1938.

Mr. Massey: Collection of almanacs, some of which were published prior to 1800. Many of those that were dated in the 1800's are still being published annually at this time. Also collection of art calendars showing change in the type of material pictured since first art calendar published 56 years ago. Stamps and covers commemorating our national parks as well as other subjects were also displayed.

H. C. Lott capped the exhibits of the evening by projecting slides in full natural color of scenes which he had captured with his camera on various cross-country tours made before the existence of wartime restrictions on travel. Some beautiful close-up enlargements of flowers, plants and blooms in full color were also displayed.

The meeting was adjourned at 11:00 P. M. so that all present could do proper justice to Mrs. Marsden's tastefully displayed exhibit, which unlike all the others catered to that bad habit we all possess—eating.

WILLIAM PEARSON, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB—The regular meeting was held at the Cumberland Y. M. C. A. on January 17th.

The meeting was called to order by President Funkhouser.

A letter and resolution from H. F. Hughes of the Oregon Numismatic Society was read, encouraging the publishing by the A. N. A. of a Coin Encyclopaedia. After some discussion, B. G. Charles moved that our Club endorse this resolution and use our influence to encourage the idea.

Dr. F. U. Davis suggested that the Club should place some good coin books in the Public Library for the use of the public. A committee consisting of members Fuller, Morris, and Charles was appointed by President Funkhouser to investigate the possibility and advisability of this proposal.

Alfred Hutter and Joseph B. Stack were elected to membership.

This was Junior Night and a number of young collectors attended. These junior collectors were then offered the chance to make brief talks about their collecting, and the following responded: John Cessna, Ronald Smith, and William Davis.

—MARTIN L. JOHNSON, Secretary.

WORDS OF AN OLD-TIMER

"To the antiquarian, coins are priceless memorials of the past. They form a genuine portion of the flotsam and jetsam of former days, which he so loves to gather up. As he contemplates the precious relics, he recalls the national and social circumstances under which they came into existence; he pictures to himself through what endless variety of hands these coins must have passed; what changes in the world's condition they must have witnessed; what desolations they have survived. Such power of suggestion gives, in his eyes, a peculiar value to coins and leads to the forming of those collections that are studied with such delight by men of kindred taste."

From The Coinages of the World, by Geo. D. Mathews, New York 1876. Page 4.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES FROM THE UNITED STATES MINT

"Made in the U. S. A." might well be inscribed on coins that today jingle in the pockets or money bags of representatives of most of the races of mankind, from Greenland to the Fiji Islands; and from Ethiopia to Australia.

Secretary Morgenthau today revealed for the first time in detail the wartime contribution of the United States Mint to monetary systems of more than a score of friendly nations, a tremendous manufacturing job piled on top of record-breaking domestic coinage, and met despite acute manpower and equipment shortages.

These countries found themselves faced with sharply expanding needs for coins, just as has been the case in the United States, due to presence of large numbers of allied troops, or broadening production of vital materials or to other military factors. The war had destroyed or shut off virtually all the facilities they previously had utilized, and the Governments turned to the United States.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, reported to Mr. Morgenthau that the three manufacturing institutions turned out, at cost, nearly 800,000,000 coins for these friendly countries during 1944, in addition to nearly three billion domestic coins, the largest output in the 152 years of Mint existence. Some of these orders executed for foreign Governments during 1944 are of historic significance.

Franc coins were struck at the Philadelphia Mint from melted-down shell cases, produced after consultation with officials of what at the time was termed the French Committee of Liberation and is now the Provisional Government of France.

For liberated Ethiopia, the experts of the United States Mint drew designs, made the dies, and struck the coins for a new monetary system. The five coins, four of copper and one of silver, bear on the obverse or face the likeness of the Emperor Haile Selassie, who refused to bow to Benito Mussolini. The broken Il Duce, cowering in the protection of his German overlords, might see something ironical in that. The reverse sides of the coins bear the Conquering Lion of Judah.

For Greenland, the Mint produced copper kroners bearing the traditional polar bear of predecessor Danish coins.

To Saudi Arabia went silver riyals with a design of mysterious, intricate tracings.

Coins were made for the Philippines, significant of freedom rapidly being restored.

The United States has executed coinage orders for foreign Governments since authorized by Congress in 1874, but it has been during the last five years that this business has reached large proportions. The minting of pesos, centavos, florins, riyals, francs, and many other foreign coins of various alloys, all of which must conform to the coinage laws of their respective countries, has become every-day business to the skilled artisans of the Mint. A list of countries for which the United States has made coins during the past five years, as a part of a Good Neighbor policy, reads like a lesson in geography. Included are Australia, Belgian Congo, Belgium, Bolivia, Cuba, Curacao, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Fiji Islands, France, Greenland, Guatemala, Indo-China, Liberia, Netherlands and her island possessions, Nicaragua, Peru, Philippine Islands, Saudi-Arabia, and Surinam.

Such orders are executed by the Mints at cost. In most instances the countries supply or purchase the necessary metals, but silver has been furnished on a lend-lease basis, for return after the war, in a few cases.

Mrs. Ross said the consumption of metals by the Mints exceeded 15,000 tons for the year, or at a rate of more than 42 tons a day on the average.

She placed the face value of United States coins minted in 1944 at $121,000,000. The comparable figure for 1943 was $136,000,000, when more coins of larger denominations were struck.

One Mint statistician figured that the 2,844,000,000 domestic coins struck in 1944 would, if laid edge to edge span the continent from New York to San Francisco ten times, with enough left for two strings between Chicago and San Antonio, a total of 34,400 miles. In 1943 2,036,000,000 coins were produced.

The seemingly insatiable demand of American business for cents continues to exert most pressure on Mint facilities, with 2,149,000,000 likenesses of Mr. Lincoln, back in the traditional copperish setting, coming from the stamping machines in 1944. The emergency zinc-coated steel cent was discontinued at the close of 1943.

Still another Mint activity is the production of medals for the Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, and many for the Army. Included are the Distinguished Service Cross, the Purple Heart, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Congressional Medal of Honor, and many others, with accompanying ribbons and bars. Requirements of the armed service required a manufacturing job of substantial proportions in 1944.

To Our Customers: One reason so many are disappointed when ordering as promptly as The Numismatist is received, is that we must send copy for our Ad in by the 10th of the previous month; so that nearly thirty days elapse from the time our copy leaves here until the Ad appears; and a number of people have sent in their want lists in the meantime. Our coins are all subject to prior sale.

Announcement!

A New Monthly Bulletin

PURPOSE: To reflect actual market conditions, based upon supply and demand.

To acquaint my customers with many of the desirable U. S. coins I have in stock at the time the BULLETIN is issued; also to state frankly the prices I am willing to pay for the coins listed—both buying and selling prices plainly given.

FORM: Single sheet, printed in two colors on fine quality, heavy stock, in the convenient size of 8½"x11", both sides used. The type is clear, pleasing in style, and comfortably large; the space is NOT overcrowded, and the items are accurately described. I have tried to make the appearance inviting to the eye, and the offerings even more inviting to the discriminating collector.

CIRCULATION: The first issue (February) was sent gratis to a carefully selected list of 1,500; for March I have ordered 1,750 copies, anticipating many additional requests. Collectors of U. S. coins are invited to send me their names and addresses if they would like to receive the BULLETIN regularly. Every item offered carries a money-back guarantee.

Accurate grading, fair prices, prompt and courteous service—three factors equally important to dealer and collector alike; and my customers have discovered this to be the basis upon which I have built an excellent business.

TO OUR ADVERTISERS

A number of comments have been received from collectors suggesting that when coins in rolls are offered, the number per roll be stated in every case. This would seem reasonable, especially since not all rolls contain the same number, and also because two different sizes of rolls are used in many banks for the same denomination.

Hereafter, will our advertisers please adopt this suggestion. New collectors especially will appreciate it.

THE CONDITION OF A COIN

By Stuart Mosher

Condition or "state of preservation," as it is sometimes so ponderously stated, has a lot to do with the desirability and value of a rare coin. It is but natural that the collector should want only the finest specimens in his cabinet and while perfection is an admirable objective, it is too often over-emphasized. If perfect coins are obtainable and the cost no hindrance the problem of condition does not exist. But perfect coins are not always obtainable and collectors of unlimited means are uncommon. This, along with the fact that we are primarily concerned with the problems confronting the average collector, is sufficient reason for us to give the question of condition more than summary thought.

At the risk of incurring the wrath of some fastidious collectors, and of all condition-cranks, we entreat collectors not to despise a coin because it shows signs of having been in circulation. A coin that has not circulated has not served the purpose for which it was intended. The historical value of a coin is certainly not lessened by wear. That wear diminishes the beauty of a coin is not always so. The appearance of many ancient coins is actually improved by a little wear. This is also true of some modern coins which are so designed that wear will enhance, rather than lessen, their attractiveness. Not the least advantage of a little wear on a coin is that that often brings it within the buying range of the modest purse.

There are those who will quibble over the foregoing statements and insist that it is better to own a few perfect coins than it is to own many imperfect ones. Such collectors are entitled to their opinions, a privilege that is slight enough when compared to the advantages enjoyed by those who are less finicky.

There are certain coins that are unobtainable in perfect condition, yet because of their historical importance they are always in demand and worthy of a place in any collection. This is especially true of coins struck during medieval times and even as late as the beginning of the

Entered as Second Class Matter at the Federalsburg, Md., Post Office under the Act of March 3, 1879.

19th century. The fault with many such coins would seem to be mostly in the preparation of the dies and planchets and in the striking. Many early English and American pieces will be found weakly struck on irregular planchets and yet they are highly desirable.

STYLE AND STRIKING OF A COIN

The "style" and "striking" of a coin is of primary interest to those who collect ancient coins. The "style" refers to the artistic merits of the design. The "striking" to the mechanical accuracy with which it was struck. Fine-style and careful striking are not necessarily associated. In fact, it is a peculiar circumstance that we often find coins of the finest style wretchedly struck and coins of the most atrocious style struck with meticulous care. Fine-style may refer to the output of a skilled artist as distinguished from the work of his less skilled contemporaries or to coins struck during a time when artistic coins were the rule and not the exception. Coins of the latter class are correctly referred to as the "finest period" rather than as of the "finest style."

A coin having a design that is well-centered and showing sharp, even impressions of the dies may be considered well-struck. But the term well-struck must be used cautiously. A worn-out die might produce a nicely centered design but not a well-struck one.

Another highly desirable quality of an ancient coin is high-relief. A coin of fine-style and high-relief is a desirable piece. It is more desirable when struck on a wide planchet. And it is still more desirable when it is well-toned. "Superb" is a modest term when used to describe such coveted pieces.

THE COLOR OF A COIN

As with pottery, gems, tapestries, stamps and other collectors' items, the color of a coin has much to do with its desirability. This is particularly true in regard to copper coins. With silver coins color is of much less importance and with gold coins of no importance at all.

A copper or bronze coin rarely retains its original mint color for any long period of time. The surface of ancient coins acquires a film or incrustation known as patina. This patina may vary in color being either black, brown, red, blue, green or a combination of such colors. Patina is caused by oxidation and the color depends upon the chemical nature of the soil, air, or moisture with which the coin comes in contact.

Patina is sometimes imitated or produced by artificial methods. There are tests that can be used to determine the genuiness of patination. In my early collecting days I bought a small lot of curiously shaped early Chinese coins that to me had every appearance of being genuine. A friend of mine, who collected armor and weapons, told me to visit him on an evening and he would determine whether my Chinese pieces were genuine or not.

His testing method, as it turned out, was to boil the coins for twenty minutes in a quart of water to which an ounce of sodium bicarbonate had been added. The twelve pieces, for which I had paid $85, came out of the treatment as bright and shiny as a new brass bedstead. The dealer who sold them to me is still alive and what is more he still has my $85. Genuine patination is not removed or harmed by this test, as I have proved by many subsequent examinations.

It is the aim of many present day collectors to form "matched sets" of coins. Thus they will attempt to make a collection of Indian head cents from 1864 to 1909 having the identical color. As far as I know this has never been accomplished as the original color of Indian head cents is never uniform. Show me a matched set of Indian head cents and I'll show you a set that has been dipped and colored artificially. This also applies to Lincoln cents which never are uniform in color.

Silver coins may vary in color from their original brilliance to a heavy dull tarnish. Until recent years collectors preferred silver coins having what can best be described as a light steel-blue tone. A few of the old-timers still prefer it but generally new collectors insist that the coins they buy have "original brilliance." This is a curious attitude and one that is causing much rubbing and scrubbing by coin dealers over-anxious to please their customers.

Badly tarnished silver coins can be cleaned safely by a variety of methods providing it is done by an expert. Once the dirt and tarnish is removed it is advisable to let the coins acquire a natural tone. This can be done by exposing them to sunlight, being careful to give equal exposure to both sides. Frequent wiping with a clean piece of soft flannel will promote and preserve an even, pleasant tone.

We know of collectors who clean and lacquer their silver coins. The merits of this method can be best appreciated by those who house their collections in the shallow trays of cabinets. Lacquer is not injurious to silver and we have seen coins that were lacquered forty years ago that appeared to be coined but yesterday. But again, cleaning and lacquering must be done in an expert fashion otherwise damage will result.

There are collectors who object to lacquered coins and dealers handling such should always state that they have been treated in such a manner. Lacquer can be easily removed with acetone without damage to the coin.

CLASSIFICATION OF CONDITION

The classification of condition is a perennial topic for collectors and dealers alike. Their aim is to improve upon existing methods and to establish a workable system that will be accepted by the entire coin collecting fraternity.

So far no one has devised such a system and what is more, none ever will. It is not possible to apply the same system to all coins. Most of the terms in current use mean little or nothing when standing alone. Take for example the term "uncirculated," and apply it to a group of coins including a Greek tetradrachm, a Roman bronze, a medieval denier, a Pine Tree shilling, a copper cent of 1793, a silver dollar of 1794 and a quarter dollar of 1921. Each of these coins might be "strictly uncirculated" yet supplementary terms are needed to describe them accurately.

It is unfortunate for both the dealer and the collector that there are no hard and fast rules by which to grade the condition of a coin. Various systems have been designed, some of which have not been without merit, but the insurmountable factor of personal opinion will never permit everyone to see eye-to-eye in deciding the comparative merits of each coin. This situation leaves room for an honest difference of opinion yet this difference is of small importance if you buy your coins from dependable cataloguers who have experience, integrity and good eyesight.

Though the adjectives used in describing condition are familiar ones it may startle the beginner to learn that a coin classified as "very good" is actually in wretched state and, what is worse, almost unsalable. "Uncirculated" is another confusing term. In its proper sense it means a coin that has not been circulated. Yet any coin that is free from signs of wear is called "uncirculated."

TERMS USED IN CLASSIFICATION OF CONDITION

For the sake of clarity these terms are arranged in order of merit rather than alphabetically.

PROOF (PR.)—A coin with a mirror-like surface struck with polished dies on a polished planchet. Usually sold at a premium by the mints.

UNCIRCULATED (UNC.)—In perfect condition showing no signs of wear or damage but not necessarily brilliant. Sometimes known as MINT STATE.

EXTREMELY FINE (EX. F.)—No definite signs of wear but having a less desirable surface than an uncirculated coin.

VERY FINE (V. F.)—Showing inconsequential signs of wear but only slightly less desirable than the preceding classification.

FINE (F.)—Perceptible signs of wear but still a desirable piece.

VERY GOOD (V. G.)—Definite signs of wear but not altogether unattractive.

GOOD (G.)—Worn but lettering and design all clear.

FAIR (FR.)—Quite badly worn and usually highly undesirable.

POOR (P.)—Less desirable than FAIR yet the design can usually be distinguished.

SUPPLEMENTARY TERMS

There are certain coins that cannot be graded according to the above terms. While they present no difficulty to the experienced collector the beginner may find it difficult to describe them. Every so often we find an ill-advised cataloguer describing a coin as "Uncirculated, was a Proof." Such a coin can be properly described as an "Impaired Proof," or better still it would be well for the cataloguer to state the exact damage. Any coin that is noticeably damaged by scratches, nicks, dents, abrasions, ought to be catalogued so. Such terms as "Superb," "Perfect" and "Gem" are sometimes used and being self-explanatory need not be commented upon.

Occasionally an over-enthusiastic cataloguer will wax eloquent and describe coins as "beautiful," "wonderful," and even "lovely," but the use of such endearing terms in a coin catalogue appears to us as being out of place.

COPPER COINS OF DENMARK AND HER POSSESSIONS

By O. P. EKLUND, Spokane, Wash.

Christian IV, 1588-1648.

1. Hvid (Witten) 1619. Obv., CHRISTI.4.D.G.D.1619. A shield shaped ornament upon a long cross. Rev., NORV.VAN.GOT.REX (King of Denmark, Norway, Vandals and Goths). In the field a crowned G inclosing 4.
2. Hvid 1624-25. Similar to last but CHRISTIAN IIII. D.G.DA., no date, and NOR.VAN.GO.REX, date, on reverse.
3. Sosling 1624. Obv., CHRISTIA.4.REX. Crowned bust to right, in armor and ruff. Rev., SOS | LING | 16Z4, a small trefoil below, the whole within a cartouche.

Fine well struck specimens of the above described coins are rare in this country. Also struck in silver.

Frederich III, 1648-1670.

4. Hvid 1651. Obv., in center F3 crowned, D.G.DANIÆ.REX. around. Rev., DOMIN PROVID. ("God will provide," the king's motto) In the field a cross cantoned by the date.
5. 1 sosling 1651. Obv., DOMIN.PROVID. In the field F3 in monogram, crowned. Rev., I between rosettes | SOSLING | DANSKE, the date divided by a small hook below. Rare if fine.

Many minor varieties, different abbreviations of the inscriptions, etc. of the above coins exist.

Christian V, 1670-1699.

6. ½ skilling 1693-96. Obv., CHRIST.V.DEI GRATIA. Bust to right. Rev., DAN.NOR.VAN.GOT.REX. (rosette) the date divided by a small heart, the mint mark of Copenhagen (rosette). In field a royal crown divides the value ½ — S, P & 1 "(Piety and Justice" the king's motto) below. Varieties: GRA. and GRAT. on obverse. None coined in 1695.

(Danish "silver" coins are often found struck in very base silver, nearly all copper, but as they were not legal copper coins they have been excluded).

Christian VI, 1730-1746.

9. ½ skilling 1745. Obv., C6 doubled in monogram, crowned. Rev., ½ between quatrefoils | SKILLING | DANSKE | K.M. ("Copper Money") | 1745. | C.W. (Christian Winneke, mint master in Copenhagen).

10. ½ skilling 1751, 55. Obv., F5 doubled in monogram, crowned. Rev., (quatrefoil) ½ (quatrefoil) | SKILLING | DANSKE. | K.M. ("Copper money") | date | P.N.V.H. (Peter Nicolas von Haven, mint master in Copenhagen).

Coins of Denmark

11. ½ skilling 1762. Similar but the monogram and crown are smaller, and .W. (Wahl) mint master, below the date.

Christian VII, 1766-1808.

12. ½ skilling 1771. Obv., C7 crowned. Rev., (quatrefoil) ½ (quatrefoil) | SKILLING | DANSKE | K.M. ("Copper money") | 1771.
13. 1 skilling 1771. Similar but C7 doubled in monogram, 1 in place of ½, and a rosette below the date.

These coins were struck in great numbers for many years at Copenhagen and Altona, the only copper coins minted up to 1809. Many die varieties are known, especially the 1 skilling, with or without periods after "DANSKE" and date, large and small monograms, crowns, rosettes, lettering, etc. A scarce variety shows nothing below the date, and a rare one has no curls on the upper strokes of the C's in the monogram.

With erroneous reverse readings.

14. 1 skilling 1771. Similar to last but with DANKSE instead of "DANSKE." Rare.
15. 1 skilling 1771. Similar but DANAKE. Rare.
16. 1 skilling 1771. Similar but DANASKE. Very rare.

NEW OR RECENT ISSUES

By ERNST KRAUS

BELGIUM. 5 francs, 1941, 1944. Zinc. Obverse: Head of King Leopold III to right, inscription in Wallonish (French) name of designer RAU. Reverse: Crowned value, initials and date. Reeded edge. There are also coins with Flemish inscription of this value. Reported by B. O'Hea.

From Corp. Jack Nelson (now missing in action) stationed at the time somewhere in Luxemburg, come the following coins also of Belgium: 2 francs, 1944. Zinc coated steel made by the U. S. mint for our invasion troops. It shows the name of the country in Wallonish (French) and in Flemish. Value and date on the reverse.

Also from Belgium a franc, 1944. Zinc. Struck there during the German occupation. Of a new design, it replaced the nickel pieces of the same size. Obverse: Shield with rampant lion; name of country in both languages. Reverse: Value crowned, double LIII for Leopold III, and date.

BRAZIL. Similar to the 50 centavos already reported, there is a 20 and 10 centavos, 1943, in brass, showing the head of Vargas and value.

Also a 5 cruzeiros, 1942 and 1943, in aluminum-bronze same as the 1 and 2 cruzeiros, map on obverse, date, value and stars on reverse.

CURACAO. Martin F. Kortjohn, New York, sent in two new coins, a 1/4 and a 1/10 guilder in silver, minted in the United States for Curacao. They are similar to the issue of 1900 and 1901, but without the crowned coat of arms, showing only value, date and mint mark P for Philadelphia. The obverse has the head of Wilhelmina similar to the current and prewar coins of the Netherlands.

CHILE. In addition to the peso in bronze, as illustrated in THE NUMISMATIST, November, 1942, there is also a 20 and 50 centavos 1942, 1944 in the same metal and design. Obverse: The head of Bernardo O'Higgins. Reverse: Value. Santiago mint-mark. Supplied by the Tatham Stamp & Coin Co.

ECUADOR. 5 sucres, 1943. Silver, struck at Mexico mint. Obverse: Head of Sucre to left, date. Reverse: arms, 25 gram, 720 fine. MEXICO mint-mark. This is the first dollar size coin struck for that country in the 20th century.

FIJI. Penny, 1942, 1943. Brass. Similar to the earlier nickel coins. Struck at the San Francisco mint. Small S under the central hole. Also reported a ½ penny of same design in brass made by the U. S. mint.

MOROCCO. 1 franc on small cardboard. Issue authorized by law of April, 1944, replacing the nickel coins. Obverse: View of the city. Reverse: Value and inscription.

NETHERLANDS. Sgt. H. Boosel has donated a set of the new Netherlands zinc coins to the A. N. A. collection. All of them have been illustrated in 1942 except the 5 cent piece, which is square and the same size as the previous nickel coin. All these pieces were struck during the German occupation.

The date is in numerals. There were also 10 and 5 centavos made at the mint in San Francisco in 1942 and 1943, in brass, showing a small S under the value.

SERBIA. S/Sgt. D. M. Bullowa at present stationed in Italy and who has donated many coins to the A. N. A. collection, has sent a 2 dinar zinc coin of Serbia, dated 1942. Obverse: Arms, double head eagle with shield, but without the crown. Reverse: Date and value. It is obvious that during the German occupation the rule of the young king Peter was not recognized or acknowledged. Yugoslavia has been separated into Serbia, Montenegro, Slovenia and Croatia.

NUMISMATIC LIBRARY OF BRITISH MUSEUM DAMAGED BY BOMBS

New Yorkers recently had the privilege of listening to illustrated lectures by Sir John Forsdyke, the Director of the British Museum, and Dr. Henry Thomas, Keeper of Printed Books, who told of the damage suffered by the institution they serve. Newspapers have printed some accounts of these lectures but they failed to convey the extent of the losses. Shortly after the raid in which the Museum was set afire, letters were received from John Allan, Keeper of the Department of Coins and Medals, in which he said: "All of our coins, casts and a large part of our Library had been removed, but we lost many books, chiefly recent publications and standard works in every-day use, and books dealing with more recent currencies . . . We lost all of our books on North and South America except Crosby and Dickeson. I need not say that we shall be most grateful if any of your members can present us with any books on these countries or any other modern countries."

This communication was read at one of the meetings of the American Numismatic Society and some responses to the appeal have been received. With a view to having the needs of the British Museum brought to the attention of a larger group, the matter is laid before the readers of THE NUMISMATIST. It is suggested that anyone who desires to contribute shall send to the American Numismatic Society a list of the titles available in order that duplication may be avoided and that the shipment to England may be limited to titles actually needed by the British Museum. It is hoped that this suggestion will appeal to American numismatists as an opportunity to express our appreciation of the helpfulness which has always greeted requests for aid from that institution over a period of many years.

INTERNATIONAL BROADCAST

One of the most important events in the history of numismatics will take place during the 1945 National Coin Week, an international broadcast originating from London, England, devoted solely to coins and National Coin Week. Coin collecting is not just a local hobby, not just a national pastime, but a world-wide avocation, as this broadcast will prove. It is to be hoped that this will be only the first of a regular yearly feature. On April 18, the B. B. C. London, England, will broadcast on their "Bridgebuilders" program a discussion between five midwestern prominent numismatists representing five different states, and five leading English numismatists. William Brimelow of W. T. R. C., Elkhart, Indiana, will be featured as Bill the Coin Man, and Nicholas Stewart of London, England, for the B. B. C. All coin collectors are invited to tune in at 9:45 a. m., 7:00 p. m., and 11:15 p. m., C. W. T. on April 18 (short wave).

The following numismatists will be the silent participants: Ted Hammer, Burlington, Iowa, A. N. A. Librarian and Curator; Frank C. Ross, Kansas City, Missouri, writer and philosopher; Clifford Hewitt, Chicago, Illinois, numismatic publisher; William Brimelow, Elkhart, Ind., broadcaster and writer; R. S. Yeoman, Racine, Wisconsin, Chairman National Coin Week.

This interesting international broadcast was arranged for National Coin Week by William Brimelow of Radio Station W. T. R. C., Elkhart, Indiana; Nicholas Stewart and Lillian Lang for the B. B. C., London. Through the courtesy of the Elkhart Daily Truth and Mr. R. R. Baker, Manager of W. T. R. C., the radio engineers will pick up original program on April 18 and re-broadcast during National Coin Week.

NOTES AND QUERIES

Still Reads It But Not In Bed Like He Used

Sir:

I discontinued my subscription to THE NUMISMATIST about the time you took over. My resignation was no reflection on your ability as I had never met you and anyway I had other good reasons for quitting.

To make a long story short, I've read the last four issues in the reading room of the public library, and in my opinion it gets worse each month. As far as I'm concerned you're wasting my time.

You might palm yourself off as a numismatist, editor and amateur humorist within your small circle of friends but what, may I ask, has humor to do with the science of coin collecting? We readers want facts not trivial opinions.

I dare you to publish this letter (without using my name) in the next issue. If you did you would be fired from your fat-salaried job and everybody would be a lot better off, excepting The Editor as you so fondly call yourself.

—signed, A DISGUSTED READER.

Make Them Short—

Three lengthy letters have been rereceived for publication under Notes & Queries. Each of these communications is of some interest but because of their length cannot be recorded here.

Not a Wailing Wall—

The Notes and Queries department is not, as many readers seem to think, designed to air the pet peeves of collectors. The Numismatist does not propose to regulate the coin business and those having complaints should deal directly with the persons concerned. Without a doubt, many of the complaints received are justified but it's impossible to handle such matters here.

Souvenir Pieces of Cuba—

A. S. of Hollywood, wants detailed information on the silver dollar size pieces of Cuba which were issued in 1897.

Off hand the Editor cannot supply such information. While they are generally listed as a regular Cuban issue, we have always considered them to be medals rather than coins. They were issued and sold as souvenirs by Cuban sympathizers here in the United States during the Cuban revolt against Spain in 1897.

There are several varieties and specimens are known in copper as well as silver. The 1898 date is inscribed UN PESO instead of SOUVENIR. It is scarce.

Perhaps one of our readers can supply more detailed information.

A Fine Column—

Benjamin E. Rogers of Middlebury, Vermont, writes, "I think NOTES and QUERIES a fine column. It should bring us all closer together."

He also sends in a clipping from the BURLINGTON FREE PRESS (Vermont) which relates that Samuel Endicott of Lancaster, N. H., recently bought a collection of coins which contained the "only known cent of 1815." Mr. Endicott, "Conservatively estimates its value (the 1815 Cent) at $5,000."

It's a Medal, Not a Coin—

Sir:

I was recently sold what was claimed to be a Centennial dollar dated 1876. I can't find any record of it in the mint reports and am beginning to wonder if it is really a coin.

J. W., A DOLLAR COLLECTOR

This piece is distinctly a medal and was authorized as such by Congress at the time of the U. S. Centennial in 1876. It comes struck in several metals including brass, copper and silver. While it was never legal tender it is nevertheless an interesting numismatic item.

—Editor.

Designed Liberty Head Nickel—

Charles E. Barber designed the Liberty head nickel five cent piece issued from 1883 to 1912. He was chief engraver of the U. S. Mint from 1880 until his death in 1917.

Bulletin No. 12—

The Heart of America Numismatic Society has sent out its February Bulletin No. 12. It's full of news and the hard working editor, Wm. A. Knapp, (A. N. A. No. 8818) is to be congratulated on his good work. He might send you a copy if you asked for it politely and enclosed a stamp. His address is 16 East 17th St., Kansas City 8, Mo.

No Half-dollars of 1816—

Though the official mint report records 47,150 half-dollars issued in 1816 none is known to exist. Early mint reports are not always to be depended upon. It would appear that the "issue" referred to the half-dollars dated 1815 which exist, but of which there is no official mint record.

Too Cunning for Words—

Miss H. T. of Boston writes, "Being interested in coins depicting the flora and fauna of the entire world (and caring nothing for rare dates) I appeal to you for an occasional article on the subject. How about it? Your Notes and Queries department is too cunning for words."

(I'll bet you are too.—Editor.)

Yalta Leaders Get 4th Term Medals—

According to the Associated Press, copies in gold of the fourth-term inaugural medal were presented by President Roosevelt to principals at the Crimean conference. He gave them to Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Stalin and the British and Russian foreign ministers.

Wants the Rare Ones—

Sir:

Why is it that the most interesting coins are always the rarest; away beyond the reach of an ordinary collector such as myself. What chance do I have of making a decent collection when I have to bid against collectors with plenty of money? It looks to me as though the hobby of coin collecting had reached the end of its rope.

—C. N. T., California.

Help Wanted—

We have no record of the highest priced Civil War token. Perhaps one of our readers will be kind enough to supply such information.

MY COIN SHOP

I'd like to keep a Coin Shop, a nifty little Coin Shop,
A thrifty little Coin Shop in some secluded street,
A place serene and quiet, secure from noise and riot,
I'd like to keep a Coin Shop where Coin Folk all should meet.

I'd like to keep a Coin Shop, an inexpensive Coin Shop,
A comprehensive Coin Shop of great nummary lore,
Divided into sectors for various Coin Collectors.
I'd like to keep a Coin Shop with lots of stock in store.

I'd like to keep a Coin Shop, a crazy little Coin Shop,
A lazy little Coin Shop for those who like to browse,
Designed, from floor to attic, to please the Coin Fanatic,
His coinage-conscious children and numismatic spouse.

I'd like to keep a Coin Shop, a funny little Coin Shop,
A sunny little Coin Shop for you —and you—and you!
A square, veracious Coin Shop, a snug and gracious Coin Shop,
I'd like to keep a Coin Shop; that's what I'd like to do.

OHIO SUTLER'S METALLIC CHECKS

By WALDO C. MOORE, Lewisburg, Ohio

(Paper read at a recent meeting of the Dayton Coin Club.)

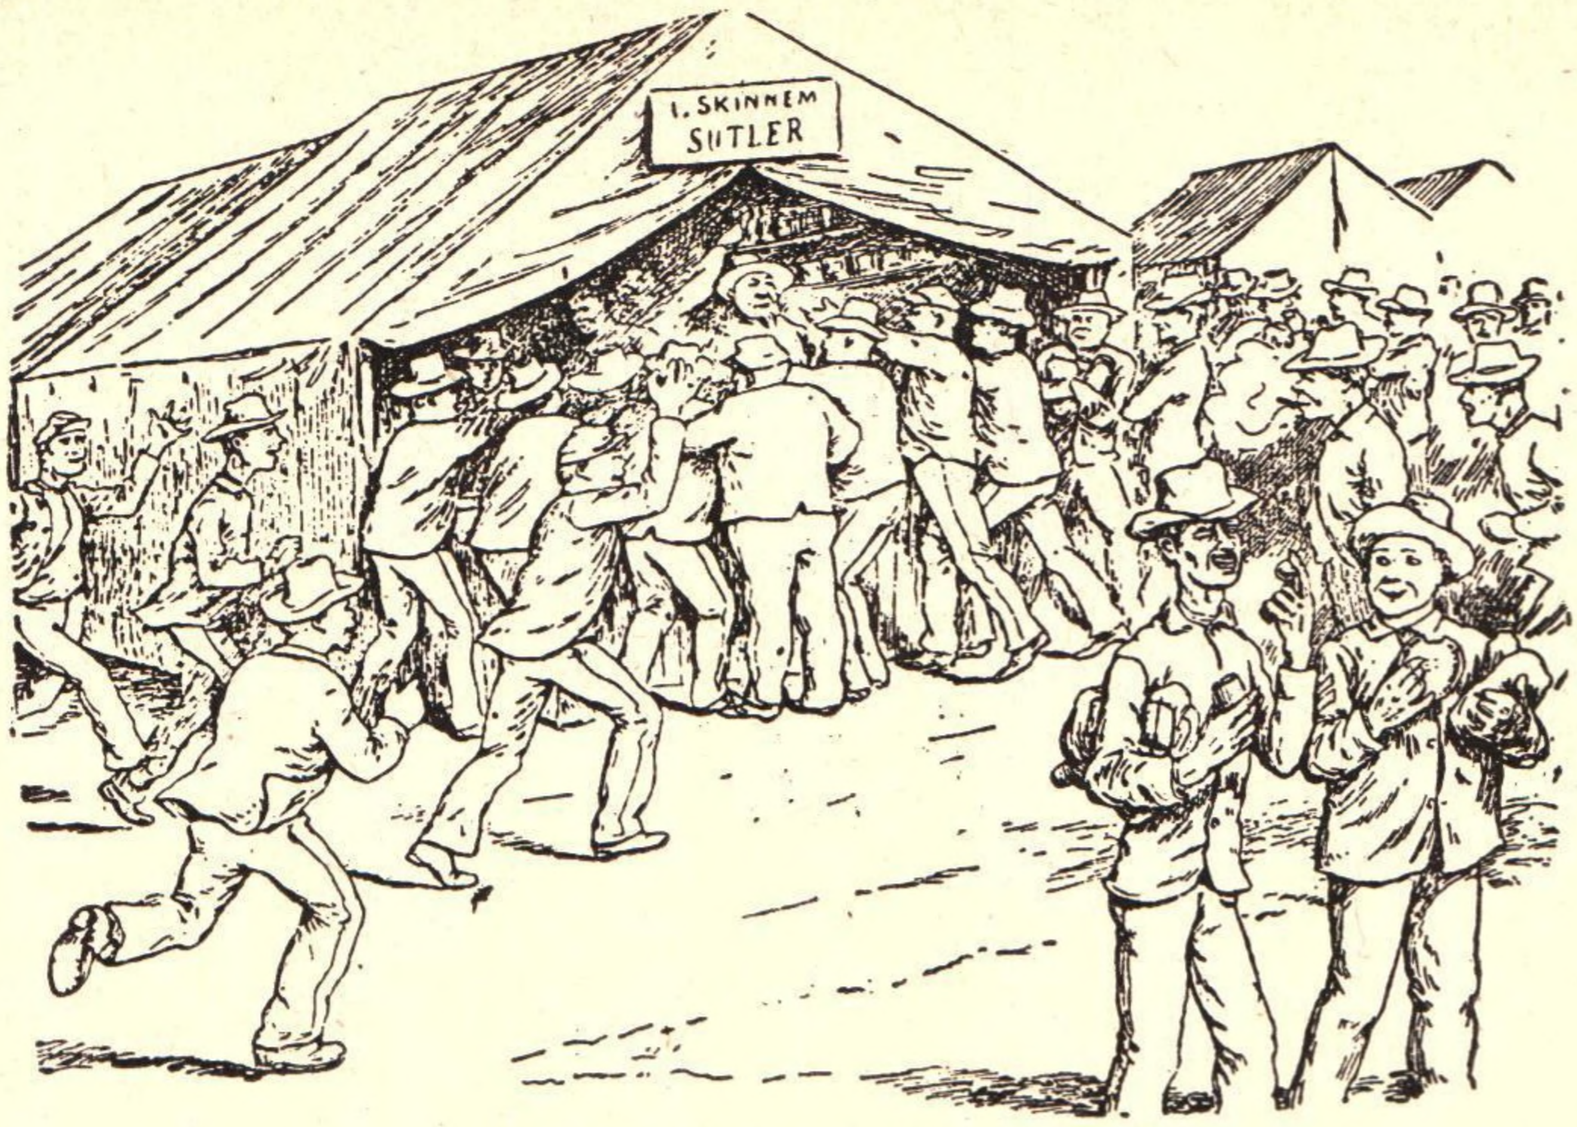

Webster defines a sutler as being a small trader, especially in camps; also one who follows an army and sells to the troops provisions, liquors, or the like. Sutlers attached to regiments are sometimes called vivandiers, victuallers, also canteen-keepers. Sutlers were very much a fixture of the army during the Civil War.

"PAYING OFF."

It was permissible during the Civil War that every army regiment, every military detachment, or any troop-train on distant service have its storekeeper or sutler who received appointment direct from the office of the Secretary of War upon recommendation by the proper Administration authorities and subject to the approval of the officer in command. The sutler was entirely at his own expense. He had no claim to quarters or housing, transportation for himself or his stock of merchandise, or to any military allowance whatever. He was in business for himself entirely upon his own resources. His term of office was for three years unless sooner removed. He was expected to behave as a good sutler or be removed.

Sutlers of the various regiments in many cases issued coin tokens, cardboard checks and sometimes paper scrip which circulated among the soldiers and which formed the greater part of the small change. These different forms of money were usually issued by the sutler for a certain regiment, the number of the regiment being so designated on the form. They were usually issued in denominations of 5, 10, 20, 25, 50 cents and occasionally $1. (For a better understanding as to the working of the sutler's checks the reader is referred to an article on "The Sutler and His Check" published in the July 1929 NUMISMATIST.)

Sutlers' checks are interesting, not so much from an artistic slant, but more specially from an historic point. An old Civil War veteran once related to the writer that on several occasions while in the army he had his cap full of those brass things, having made good at poker. Jokingly he said that if he had known then that at some future date he was to meet a collector of such things he might have saved them. Well to say the writer was much disappointed, is putting on the soft pedal with a tear. What a collection it might have been!

The Civil War Sutler check series is considered not a large one; perhaps several hundred varieties would cover the entire original issue represented by all the Civil War time sutlers having the authority to so issue. The following is a list of sutlers' metallic money of Ohio regiments in the private collection of the writer. Listed also is the I. A. Hutchinson sutler check which is struck in dark red rubber.

Civil War Sutlers' checks at this date seem rather scarce. Seldom are any of these coin tokens offered for sale in any of the mail auction catalogues. If there are any hidden supplies yet extant, the writer would be greatly pleased to see the same come forth from their hiding places. The writer has never had the pleasure of reading the same, but to those who may be further interested in the subject of the Sutlers' checks, for a clearer explanation and a better understanding, are directed to Howland Wood on "Sutlers' Checks," published in the American Journal of Numismatics, volumes 37 and 47.

A United States $20 gold piece can be drawn into a wire 50 miles long.

OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO NUMISMATISTS

Collectors and dealers in rare coins may now insure such objects at their full numismatic value when shipped by Railway Express.

Copper, bronze, nickel, platinum, brass, steel and all other metals or numismatic materials, except gold or silver, can be sent by express, and they are accepted at first class express rates, the first $50 of value allowed without extra charge; and extra valuation provided at 10 cents per hundred or fraction thereof. The minimum express charge is 35 cents plus 3% federal tax.

Gold and Silver coins, including patterns, trial and experimental pieces, are charged for, either at the actual weight and declared value of the shipment at 1st class express rates or at the scale of charges outlined in the money portion of the Official Express Classification, a recent addition to which has made this new feature possible. The higher charge developed under the alternate method of pricing such shipments will obtain.

Currency, except obsolete currency, of the United States or Canada is acceptable for movement by express on face value at rates described in the Classification. Foreign currency (except Canada) is charged for on the actual value at rates prescribed.

Mixed shipments of different kinds of coins or coins and currency are charged for at the rate applicable to the kind of money taking the highest rate, but the charge must not be greater than the aggregate separate charges on each kind of money enclosed in the same package.

Air Express Service is also available to shippers desiring an expedited means of getting their shipments to destination.

Air Express is carried on all scheduled trips of the country's 18 major airlines and to scores of foreign countries, even during war. Cargo travels from coast to coast or border to border within a few hours—overnight or sooner—while International points are reached at the same three-miles-a-minute speed.

In addition to the 575 airline points that get direct service, coordination of air and rail—by a single organization—makes Air Express available to every one of the 23,000 cities and towns served by Railway Express Agency. At non-airport cities, fast trains pick up cargo—rush it to the nearest airport city where it is transferred to fast planes for the longest part of the trip—the part that counts most.

The charges on currency, gold, platinum and other precious metals, excepting silver, are based on market value at rates per thousand as described in the air express tariff. Silver and silver coins are charged for by weight and value declared by the shipper at regular air express rates.

Section 5 of the new Air Express Tariff No. 8, effective January 15, 1945, covers rates on gold coin, gold bullion, paper currency, platinum and other precious metals, except silver, when shipped in Air Express service. Silver transported by Air Express is charged for on a weight and value basis, the same as for any other shipment of merchandise.

WOULD CLOSE MINT TO SAVE MONEY

"It is hoped that Congress, if they take up citizen Lyon's motion for retrenching the public expenditures, will bind up and close that bleeding artery of profusion, the NATIONAL MINT. Little sagacity would be necessary to see that such a conception must be cursed with abortion. After being in operation many years, and thousands expended, it is almost a prodigy to see the national coin, in this part of the country, in circulation; nay, it has almost excluded, to our great inconvenience, the small change with which we used to abound."

Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 10th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

MRS. EDITH FOWLER DUFFIELD

Mrs. Edith F. Duffield, wife of Frank G. Duffield who was for more than a quarter of a century the editor and business manager of THE NUMISMATIST, died at her home, 4215 Fernhill Avenue, Baltimore, Md., on February 18. She was 74 years old. She was a member of Wilton Heights Methodist Church, and until her last illness was active in church work, as well as in other organizations of which she was a member. She was known to the older group of A. N. A. members, having attended numerous conventions of the Association with Mr. Duffield.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by two children—Mrs. Virginia A. Zimmerman and Edward R. Duffield, both of Baltimore—five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

THE EDITOR'S CORNER

THE COIN MARKET

More than a few subscribers have suggested that THE NUMISMATIST devote a page or so each month to Notes on the Coin Market.

We have given the idea particular consideration, but cannot say that it appeals to us. Such a column would, of a necessity, be highly opinionated and would serve no useful purpose. Each month nearly one half the space in this magazine is taken up with advertising and the prices quoted are a good indication of the current market.

One of our correspondents writes, "I'm sure many readers would be interested to learn your opinion of the future value of 1936 proof sets, nickels of 1885, and cents of 1922."

Frankly, I believe my opinion on the "future" of such coins would be of little interest and of no value whatsoever.

I do not support the idea that a numismatist should anticipate a profit before he buys a coin. Worthwhile coins are collector's items and coin dealers are much more dependent on coin collectors than they are on coin speculators.

Recently there was sold in New York a pedigreed coin that had changed ownership seven times since 1917. The first owner on record paid $210 for it. The most recent owner paid $425. That's an increase of over 100%, a fairly decent appreciation. I know for a fact that the seven coin dealers who handled this coin made altogether more than $400 in commissions. Now figure compound interest on $210 since 1917.

If you speculate, buy gold mining stocks. If you must gamble, play the horses. If you want to invest your money in a sure thing, buy United States War Bonds.

SCRAPBOOK TECHNIQUE

A coin collector should keep a numismatic scrapbook. Photographs, excerpts from dealers' catalogues, clippings from newspapers and magazines, anything and everything pertaining to coins, medals and paper money should be cut out and pasted in. A loose leaf scrapbook makes a far better arrangement and is cheaper in the long run.

Your scrapbook can be made as interesting as your collection and will prove to be one of the most useful books in your library. My own "scrapbook" is contained in thirty odd volumes and continues to grow. For years I bought two copies of all coin magazines, so that I could paste up both sides of the pages I wanted to keep. Later I found that I could save money and space by cutting a frame in the page of my scrapbook and pasting the article in so that both sides were visible.

At first I used ordinary library paste. As years went by this decayed and attracted book-lice. My scrapbooks became discolored and fell apart. Then I used rubber cement. This caused a stiff page and under certain conditions dried out. My present method is to use a small dab of waterproof cement, (Dupont, Duco, Testors, or Ambroid) on each corner of the clipping. This cement does not decay, does not wrinkle the page and permits the transfer of the clippings without damage.

The word scrapbook generally suggests an over-size form that is impossible to place on the shelves of an ordinary bookcase. I use regular nine and one half by six inch loose-leaf note books. They are difficult to get right now but it won't be long before they are plentiful. These books fit into average bookcases, are about the same size of THE NUMISMATIST and are easy to handle.

THE EDITOR'S BOONDOGGLING DEPARTMENT

Ordinary liquid floor wax can be applied to cheap bronze coins. Use an old tooth-brush and don't be afraid to rub it on well. It removes dirt and leaves a well protected surface. Simonize wax gives good protection to a coin as it also does to other metal objects. Try it on a pewter jug, a brass candle-stick or your grandfather's muzzle-loader.

Silver coins (proofs excepted) should be wiped every so often with a piece of flannel. An old night-shirt will do. If you don't believe it, ask any oldtime jeweller. Ordinary soda and water makes a fairly good paste for cleaning silver. If your wife hasn't any in stock, you can use her cream of tartar. It's more expensive but she will understand. Use your thumb and fingers instead of a brush. Don't try to clean all your coins at once. If you do, you will have a mighty sore thumb.

Don't attempt to clean expensive coins unless you are an expert. Even then you may decrease the value of a coin.

Worn and dirty paper money can be washed in warm soapy water to which has been added a few drops of Chlorox. Rinse them well, lay them flat, press out the wrinkles and dry them between blotters or rough surface pieces of paper. Keep them under pressure until they are thoroughly dry. It's important that you change the drying paper every day to prevent mold. Before you begin on your collection, experiment on a few dirty notes picked from circulation. They will still be worth face value.

Editor Messes Things Up—

Has to Sit in Corner for A While

Pages 215 and 216 of the March issue show scrambled cuts of U. S. half-eagles. One has been duplicated and another omitted entirely. Our readers have been quick to point this out and ye olde editor is mightily embarrassed. One member writes:—"After a hundred and fifty years it's time that the editor at least was able to recognize the different types of half-eagles . . . "

We All Have Our Hobbies—

Sir:

I've been collecting coins for a few months and there is one thing that has me puzzled. When I talk coin collecting to my friends they either listen with polite disinterest or make highly uncomplimentary remarks about my intelligence and choice of hobby. I would like to know if other coin collectors are treated in this fashion by their friends?

—R. B., Philadelphia

Most collectors are regarded as being somewhat odd but don't let trifles like that dampen your enthusiasm. A few of our friends sneer at our hobby every time we mention it. They have their hobbies too. One of them likes to sleep in a cold swamp all night so he will be "all set," in the event a duck happens along early the next morning. Another spends his spare time during eleven months of the year polishing and admiring an expensive rifle. The other month he spends crawling through the woods in hopes of being able to send a high-powered bullet into the rear of a defenseless deer. Another spends a goodly part of his weekly salary on horses. He thinks nothing of putting $20 on the nose of a two year old filly that he has never seen and that is running for the first time.

We all have our hobbies, whether we call them that or not.

Speaks to 300 Advertising Men—

On February 20, Loyd B. Gettys of Davenport, Iowa, gave a talk on "Numismatics" before the Advertising Club of that city. For nearly one hour 300 members listened while Mr. Gettys handed out some of the best publicity that coin collecting has had in a long time.

After the talk Mr. Gettys was called upon to answer many questions in regard to our coins and paper money.

Unless we miss our guess, Loyd roped in a few new members for the A. N. A.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT AND JULIUS CAESAR

By EARLE K. STANTON, Los Angeles

The historian Plutarch was in the habit of grouping the great Greek and Roman heroes in pairs and comparing their exploits, and he so discusses Alexander and Caesar as the two greatest figures of antiquity. We cannot disagree with his choice for it is true that the world was tremendously affected by their lives and conquests.

Aside from the fact that they were both powerful dictators, the two men had little in common, and the coinage for which they were responsible certainly bears no possible resemblance. The Greeks were an artistic people, the Romans a realistic people, and the coins remaining to us clearly illustrate this distinction. It is interesting to speculate on what might have happened had these two leaders lived at the same time. Fortunately two hundred and seventy nine years elapsed between the death of Alexander in B. C. 323 and the murder of Julius Caesar on March 15, B. C. 44.

The death of Alexander the Great practically signified the demise of the Greek civilization and art, while the death of Caesar marked the end of the Roman Republic and the birth of the Roman Empire. In his "Ancient Civilizations" Dr. Brested says: "The death of Alexander the Great interrupted in mid career the conquest of a world empire stretching from the frontiers of India to the Atlantic Ocean. The bloody deed of the Ides of March stopped a similar conquest of Julius Caesar,—a conquest which would have subjected the Orient and Occident to the rule of a single sovereign."

Alexander the Great was born to the purple, as the books say, for his father was none other than Philip II of Macedon, and when Alexander took over the reins of government in B. C. 336, he found awaiting him a finely disciplined army, experienced in conquest, as well as a supply of precious metals available for coinage.

Julius Caesar, although of patrician birth, possessed no such initial advantages, and it was only after a long career in civil office and after he had been supposedly sidetracked in Gaul, that he finally emerged as one of the world's greatest generals and dictators. While Alexander had conquered the world and died at the age of thirty two, Caesar was past fifty when he returned to Rome as its ruler. Yet, although Alexander is remembered largely for his military conquests, Julius Caesar was a brilliant orator, a law giver of ability, an accomplished author, the reformer of our calendar, and a dozen other things.

The basic unit of the Greek silver coinage was the drachm, which coin and its equally known multiple, the tetradrachm, continued well into Roman times. The drachm was roughly the same size as the Roman denarius which was first struck about the year B. C. 268, and there was a fairly well defined relation between these similar coins. Harold Mattingly says that "the Roman denarius, at first a little heavier, later a little lighter than the Attic drachm, was normally equated to it." However it will be remembered that several different monetary systems had been in use among the Greeks, and while the Athenian tetradrachm was reckoned as equal to four Roman denarii, this was not true in reference to the silver coins of certain other places, notably the drachm of Rhodes which was only equal to three fourths of a denarius.

While the drachms and tetradrachms of Alexander the Great are among the most common of Greek coins and relatively inexpensive, the coins of Caesar, particularly his portrait denarii, are inclined to be rather scarce. This is not hard to understand when it is considered that Alexander reigned for thirteen years and made use of several mints, and that the Alexander tetradrachms were struck after his death and well into the next century. The coinage of Caesar, in his life time, did not encompass a longer period than six years, and his portrait coins were officially struck for only about a month previous to his murder.

So great is the variety of the Alexander tetradrachms that one might easily amass a large and interesting collection of these coins alone. Although more or less closely adhering to the basic design which shows the head of Herakles in a lionskin head dress, and on the reverse the seated figure of Zeus, the silver coins of Alexander display infinite variety in respect to artistry, mintmarks, magistrate's symbols and other characteristics. On many of these coins the head of Herakles was doubtless meant to be a mere conventional representation of that god; on others, as the late Edward T. Newell has said, there can be little doubt that the face was meant to show Alexander himself. "The type proclaims Alexander's reputed descent from this the most popular of all Greek heroes, a dauntless protagonist and the conqueror of numerous fabulous monsters."

The two Greek mints of his father Philip II, located at Pella and Amphipolis, were continued by Alexander, but as he extended the Persian conquests into Asia he took over, or established other mints at Damascus, Babylon and other places, and also founded his own city of Alexandria in Egypt, which mint, perhaps, produced the finest of all his coins. "The scenes of this career," remarks Jean Camman in the little book entitled "Numismatic Mythology," "are the closing chapters of the history of classic Greek coinage," for the Alexander type superceded and replaced all the individual output of Greek cities.

In the earlier issues of these tetradrachms the legs of the seated Zeus were generally parallel or both visible; in the later and posthumus coins the right foot is usually drawn back and visible behind the left. This peculiarity however is not an infallible indication of the date, and the earlier type is found among coins struck in the next century after Alexander's death. In the coinage which followed his death, the coins eventually became larger and flatter and the workmanship more and more barbaric in character although no change in the general design took place. Struck in many mints in Europe, Asia and Africa these issues constitute, as Mr. Newell observes, "one of the most popular and widespread coinages of all times." It may be noted that in the first eight years of coinage Alexander's mints made use of some 45 known obverse dies, and 150 reverse dies.

Many thousands of these tetradrachms have been found, as well as great numbers of the gold staters of Philip and Alexander. Some idea of the number which were struck may be gained from the various finds of these coins. For example the Saida Find on the Syrian coast in 1820, 1852 and 1863 included 3000 gold staters of Alexander and his father. In 1895 the Anadol Find in Bessarabia produced 1000 gold staters struck by Alexander. In 1887 at Sidon a pot containing 8000 coins of Philip and Alexander, was found. One of the largest finds was that of the Demanhur Hoard found in Egypt in 1905 and this brought to light some 8000 tetradrachms of Alexander which had been buried about B. C. 318.

After Alexander's death in B. C. 323, his generals, who fought among themselves for the choicest bits of the empire, struck tetradrachms which portrayed Alexander in a more or less idealized fashion. One of the most satisfactory of these coins was struck by Lysimachus in Thrace; another by Ptolemy I of Egypt which shows Alexander the Great in an elephant skin head dress. A large deified head of Alexander is found on a tetradrachm struck at a much later period for Macedon under Roman rule.

As to Alexander himself, Seltman in his "Greek Coins" affirms that this leader "was as great a soldier as Caesar or Napoleon and that he was devoid of the sensuality of the Roman or of the Corsican's duplicity."

The period between the death of Alexander the Great in B. C. 323 and the birth of Julius Caesar in B. C. 100, had been filled with important events. Macedon and the Greek civilization had been taken over by the Roman Republic; the Carthaginian wars had been fought; Marius and Sulla were about to come on to the Roman stage, and lacking other enemies the Republic was endeavoring to tear itself to pieces in bloody civil strife. Into this badly upset world Julius Caesar was born.

By this time the artistic Greek coinage had either ceased entirely or had greatly deteriorated in quality. The heavy Roman aes grave coinage had been gradually reduced in weight and largely superceded by the silver denarius.

The years 49 and 48 before Christ give us several denarii struck by Julius Caesar to commemorate his famous conquest of Gaul or France. Some of these coins are relatively common but they do not bear his picture since it was not customary or proper to place upon a Roman coin the likeness of a living man, however famous he may have become. One of the many things for which we can thank Caesar is that he reversed this time honored custom and made it possible to collect the portraits of himself and all the succeeding Roman leaders together with pictures of many members of the imperial families.

Among the more common of these first coins is the denarius showing an elephant (Caesar) metaphorically crushing a serpent, (Gaul). Another coin registers Caesar's legendary descent from Venus and from Aeneas by picturing on the obverse the goddess of love and Aeneas carrying his aged parent Anchises on his back as he fled from the burning city of Troy. Other denarii show captured Gauls and trophies indicative of Caesar's various conquests, and one of these bears symbols said to refer to Caesar's age, fifty two. His love affair, and/or marriage with Cleopatra, is likewise said to be denoted by a small cupid shown on the neck of Venus. Some of this may be pure speculation but it is not beyond the bounds of reason, particularly when we learn that Caesar took personal charge of the coinage and placed his own family servants in control of the mint. Two bronze coins were struck by Caesar's moneyers, Oppius and Clovius in Spain about B. C. 46-45, but still without his portrait.

One of the most important of Caesar's coins, historically speaking, is the gold aureus struck to commemorate the great quadruple triumph which the dictator celebrated in the year B. C. 46. Caesar's victories in Gaul, Pontus, Egypt and Africa clearly entitled him to this distinction. It is said that on this occasion he gave to each foot soldier 20,000 sestertii or roughly about a thousand dollars, and to every Roman citizen 400 sestertii or about $20 in addition to liberal quantities of oil and corn. Although perhaps it was not yet strictly proper for Caesar to place his portrait on a coin, the purported head of Piety on this aureus bears the unmistakable likeness of Caesar himself.

In February, B. C. 44, the Senate, then largely under Caesar's control, broke with all precedent and made it lawful for the dictator to place his likeness on the coinage, and we therefore have the opportunity to see how he looked only about a month before his murder. The Roman coin portraiture was, as one author says, "sternly realistic," rather than artistic in the Greek fashion, and certainly the profile portraits of Caesar to be found on his coins are not particularly attractive. The famous busts and statues in the museums of Rome, Naples, London and elsewhere are from every standpoint much more satisfactory.

Frank J. Scott in his book, "Portraitures of Julius Caesar," does not consider that the coin portraits furnish the most fundamental data for knowing Caesar's features. He calls attention to the fact that the revolutionary period in which Caesar lived was not one of artistic excellence. In any event the coins merely show us "a thin cheeked, bony faced, lean necked man," with angular under jaw, prominent nose, strongly molded chin, and large mobile mouth. At the time of his death, Caesar was 56 years of age, slender in build and somewhat bald.

The coin portraiture of Julius Caesar did not cease with his death, and his deified head continues to appear on the coins of his successors, Antony and Augustus. The latter issued a number of denarii and two large bronze coins featuring his own and Caesar's portrait, which however, show no particular improvement in artistic excellence. On some of these coins we see the star of Julius, or comet, which as Suetonius says, shone for seven days after his death and was believed to be the soul of Caesar. Of this same star Horace, writing in the time of Augustus, says: "Micat inter omnes Julium sidus, velut inter ignes Luna minores." In other words, as Julius Caesar in life eclipsed all other leaders, past, present and future, so his star in the heavens burned more brightly than any other.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Buffalo, N. Y.

VIII. ITALY

K. Papal States

The Papacy goes back to the earliest days of Christianity when the Church at Rome assumed a prominent place in the Christian world. As the Empire declined the Church gained in temporal power until by the ninth century land in many parts of the Roman world and a concentration of possessions in central Italy were held by the pontiff in Rome. Members of the clergy directed the civil and military officials in administering the estates. The Popes were elected by the principal members of the clergy and nobles and actually at first, later theoretically, acclaimed by the people. During the Middle Ages, and even after the Reformation, the Popes exercised a tremendous influence on the entire civilized world.

The period of the French Revolution saw the cultivated, devout, and conscientious Pius VI (1775-1799) in the Papal seat. New ideas were sweeping Europe, many of them hostile to the church, and Pius' position was a most difficult one. Napoleon overran the Papal States in 1797, and in 1798 a republic was proclaimed in Rome. Pius died a captive exile in 1799. Napoleon's temporary absence allowed the Second Coalition to overthrow the Roman Republic in June of 1799. From Sept. 30, 1799 the capital was held by Neapolitan troops of Ferdinand IV of Naples and Sicily until the new Pope entered the Eternal City on July 3, 1800. During the interregnum coins were issued from Rome in Ferdinand's name.

The new Pope, Pius VII, a Benedictine monk, Barnaba Chiaramonte, had been elected in Venice at a conclave under Austrian protection. He was restored to his diminished estates and managed to get along with Napoleon for a while, anointing the Emperor at his coronation in Paris in 1804. The cooperation which Napoleon expected from Pius in maintaining the continental system was not forthcoming. So in 1808 Rome was occupied, and in the following year the Papal States were incorporated into the French Empire. There follows a gap in the large Papal silver pieces from 1807 to 1815. Pius was taken—practically a prisoner—to Savona and later to Fontainbleau, where he remained until Napoleon's downfall. In May of 1814 he returned to Rome. In the post-Napoleonic period many of the French reforms were retained, but the government underwent excessive concentration in an effort to preserve the conservative traditions.

During the period following Pius' death, coins were issued under the supervision of Cardinal Bartolomeo Pacca. The new Pope Leo XII (1823-1829), formerly Count Annibale della Genga, was a strict and pious churchman who did his best during the six years in his office to root out the Carbonari and other forms of liberalism which were beginning to make themselves felt everywhere.

The next interregnum, during which Cardinal Francesco Galleffi issued coins, was followed by the brief pontificate of Pius VIII (1829-1830) (Francisco Castiglione) who died in the midst of the unrest sweeping Europe in 1830.

Again Cardinal Galleffi presided over monetary affairs until the election of Gregory XVI (1831-1846), a former Camuldulian monk. The July revolution in France was having reverberations in Italy, and Austrian arms were required to suppress them and the revolution which broke out in 1832. A demand was growing both within and without the Church for the separation of the ecclesiastical and secular administrations. In the interval following Gregory's death Cardinal Tommaso Riario Sforza administered financial affairs.

Pius IX (1846-1878), a member of the Mastai-Ferretti family, was the last Pope to issue coins until the temporal restoration of the Papacy in 1929. His liberal tendencies prompted him to propose an Italian customs union, but he lost his popularity when he refused the public demand to aid Piedmont in her struggle against Austria and when he declared that he would never allow the Pope to become head of an Italian Confederation. The rising demand for more liberal government and for the abdication of certain temporal powers led to the granting of a constitution in March 1848 and finally to the sudden departure of the Pope from Rome in 1849. The fantastic excesses of the Republic which was established aided the foreign powers in restoring the Pope in 1850. In the following decade, which saw increased activity in nationalistic expression, one point in Cavour's program for a united Italy was the abolition of the Papal States. After the victorious campaigns by the Piedmontese and their allies against the Austrians in 1859, the Pope was stripped of about four-fifths of his possessions. In 1870 came the final reduction of the Papacy with the taking of Rome and its establishment as the capital of the united nation. The Pope was deprived of his sovereign rights, and while he was confirmed in the use of certain palaces, etc., these were declared state property. In protest the Pope refused to leave the Vatican, where he remained until his death in 1878. The last issues of Pius IX conform to the lira standard, which had gradually superseded the diverse Italian coinages.

DOES NOT THINK MR. GOODHART'S IDEA PRACTICAL

Editor THE NUMISMATIST

Dear Sir:

Mr. Goodhart's suggestion in the February NUMISMATIST to have "a proportion of the current half-dollar pieces carry the portraits of the governors of each of the forty-eight states in place of the figure of Liberty" is impractical. Nearly fifty different types of half-dollars circulating at one time would be confusing. A large number would be held from circulation as souvenirs. It would again bring the question of states' rights to the front, possibly even causing violent friction.

As Mr. Goodhart stated, the German states did issue coins picturing the bust of their ruler but these states were once independent countries that had been issuing coins for centuries and did not wish to give up their prerogative.

Just because German states were issuing coins using the bust of their rulers is no reason why each of our states should have a half-dollar picturing the bust of its governor. And, which governor's portrait would be used? That of the first, present or most famous governor?

It has always been the custom to refrain from placing the busts of living persons upon United States coins. If we placed a governor's portrait upon the half-dollars, it would only be right to have the President's bust upon a coin, and probably more so than many of our governors, as few of them are worthy of having their features preserved in metal.

If his proposal passed, in ten years, through the change of governors every two or four years, we would have nearly 200 different designs of half-dollars! In addition to this, there would be much additional expense in the making of new designs every few years. I am really unable to see the practibility of Mr. Goodhart's suggestion.

Yours very truly,

ARLIE SLABAUGH.

CONDITION COLLECTORS

Editor THE NUMISMATIST

Sir:

Your kind words for "Condition Collectors" are appreciated. I'm one of them and know all-too-well that dealers and some other collectors regard me as a crank. Having been called lots worse names than "crank" I have no objection to the epithet. What I do object to is the system used by coin-dealers in classifying coins. Here is a recent experience of mine.

An 1836 milled edge half dollar was catalogued, "Strictly uncirculated. As perfect as the day it was struck." I bid well over estimate for it and got it for less than my bid. I wasn't surprised to get it for less than my bid as the dealer conducting the sale is known for his honesty. Upon examining the coin I found it to be "as perfect as the day it was struck." However, it was struck considerably off-center, and four of the stars were flat as pan-cakes. Such a "strike" has no place in my collection but I did not send it back as I came to the conclusion that the dealer was justified in his classification.

It is not a perfect coin, never was and never will be; but it was and is "as perfect as (the miserable) day it was struck."

From A CONFIRMED CRANK

King George VI of England is portrayed on more coins than any living man.

In 1935 Canada issued a $25 bank note to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the reign of King George V.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

NUMISMATIC SCRAPBOOK (Hewitt Bros.) for January. "Commemorative Coins of the Balkans," by John S. Davenport, is the feature article in this issue. Written in a concise, readable style it briefly describes the events that have been commemorated as well as the coins themselves. Twenty of the issues are illustrated. Under the title "English Tokens," Wm. Brimelow offers some interesting comments on the tokens of Stockport and Nantswich. Other articles of interest have been contributed by B. Morganthau, "Uncle Ben," H. H. Kurth, Joseph Coffin, Paul Pennington, and Emil Di Bella.

NUMISMATIC SCRAPBOOK (Hewitt Bros.) for February. Feature articles include "The Facing Heads of Ancient Coinage," by Paul Pennington, and "Private Gold," by R. S. Yeoman. Rudolph Kimpfler writes on "Wages in South Germany in 1650." He gives an interesting list of occupations with the income of each in kreutzers. Other contributions are by Wm. Brimelow, "Uncle Ben," B. Morganthau, Joseph Coffin, J. S. Davenport, and Emil Di Bella.

THE ESSAY-PROOF JOURNAL (Essay-Proof Society, Inc.) for January (quarterly). While mostly of interest to stamp collectors, this issue should prove of real value to collectors of paper money, as it contains the final installment on the American engraver, James Smillie (1807-1885) by Thomas F. Morris.

Smillie's engravings for bank note vignettes, numbering more than three hundred, are of high quality and Mr. Morris writes of the man's life and work with more than ordinary appreciation.

A partial list of notes for which he engraved vignettes is included and it is to be hoped that the author will someday find it possible to share his extensive knowledge with readers of THE NUMISMATIST.

STANDARD CATALOGUE OF THE COINS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND, by Herbert Allen Seaby, London, England. Collectors here in the United States have long been in need of an inexpensive catalogue on English coins, and this will serve their purpose. The compiler does not imply that it is any more than it is—a list of types and denominations, with suggested values. Most of the types are illustrated with line-cuts. The descriptions are brief, and the prices are for coins in very fine condition.

THE COIN COLLECTOR'S JOURNAL (Wayte Raymond, Inc.) for January and February. The cover of this issue illustrates the original coat-of-arms of George Washington. The accompanying article gives a record of the Washington family beginning with Colonel John Washington who migrated from England to America in 1657. "The Coins of Colonial America" by Phares O. Sigler treats the issues for Virginia. Other articles have to do with The Coin Market, Confederate Currency, and 19th Century French Colonial Coins.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR OF THE U. S. MINT, 1944. U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. (Price 20 cents). This report contained within 109 pages should be in the library of every coin collector. It gives a detailed account of the many activities involved in the production of our coinage as well as a complete Mint Report from 1793 to 1943.

It is interesting to note that during the fiscal year there was $1,274,100.57 in domestic gold coins converted into bullion. Another item of interest is that the 1943 production of gold in the U. S. (1,394,522 oz.) is the lowest of any year since 1911. From 1792 to 1847, a total of 1,187,170 ounces was produced.

Under the title COINAGE OF NATIONS it is reported that in 1942 Iran issued 310 pahlavi and 690 half-pahlavi gold coins. This is the first notice we have had of such an issue.

COIN WEEK NOTES FROM HERE AND THERE

Henry Shuhmacher, Chairman of Coin Week activities for the Boston Numismatic Society, writes your general chairman that his committee is all out for first club prize this year. They have a fine record, having gained second place in the 1944 and 1943 club competition.

E. M. Eversole is sparking the Chicago Program this year. He has made final arrangements with the Lake Shore National Bank on Michigan Boulevard, to display six frames of numismatic items. He's going to be on hand every day to answer all queries about his exhibit.

The Racine Numismatic Society will have its annual banquet during Coin Week at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Rev. A. G. Weiler, Coin Week Chairman, is planning a fine program which will outrank all past banquets. At the time of going to press, the exact date is undecided. Drop a card to R. S. Yeoman, 3619 Graceland Blvd., Racine, Wisconsin, for the banquet date.

Bill the Coin Man (William Brimelow) did a fine piece of work in arranging the B. B. C. broadcast for April 18th. Chief Engineer Lester Zellmer of Station W. T. R. C., Elkhart, Indiana, is arranging a recording of the short wave broadcast from London. Engineers George Kasdoff and H. Houck will make the transcription. A rebroadcast will be heard over W. T. R. C. during Coin Week. W. R. J. N., Racine, Wisconsin, will also rebroadcast the program.

All A. N. A. District Secretaries are on the Coin Week Committee. They are all familiar with procedure and can give valuable assistance where needed. Get in touch with your District Secretary for help in perfecting your club program.

Send in club and individual reports by May 10th to the Awards Chairman, Lillard W. Culver, 2708 E. Hampshire Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He will be assisted in judging all entries by Hubert L. Polzer and N. J. Hoffman, veteran members of the Milwaukee Society.

Awards will be based on the best reports from clubs and individuals covering the following activities:

Newspaper space (include clippings).

Radio time secured and subjects covered.

Number of new club and A. N. A. members obtained.

Coin talks given during Coin Week (where and what topics—include papers read if possible).

General list of store displays and photos of the best exhibits.

Special club bulletins, or other special promotional matter such as reports of special meetings, banquets, etc.

Photos of the winning exhibits will be reproduced in the June or July NUMISMATIST. Reports from Coin Week Chairmen should describe the efforts of individuals in conjunction with outstanding exhibits or activities to enable the judges to properly reward the best individual Coin Week achievements.

HAMTRAMCK DEPRESSION SCRIP

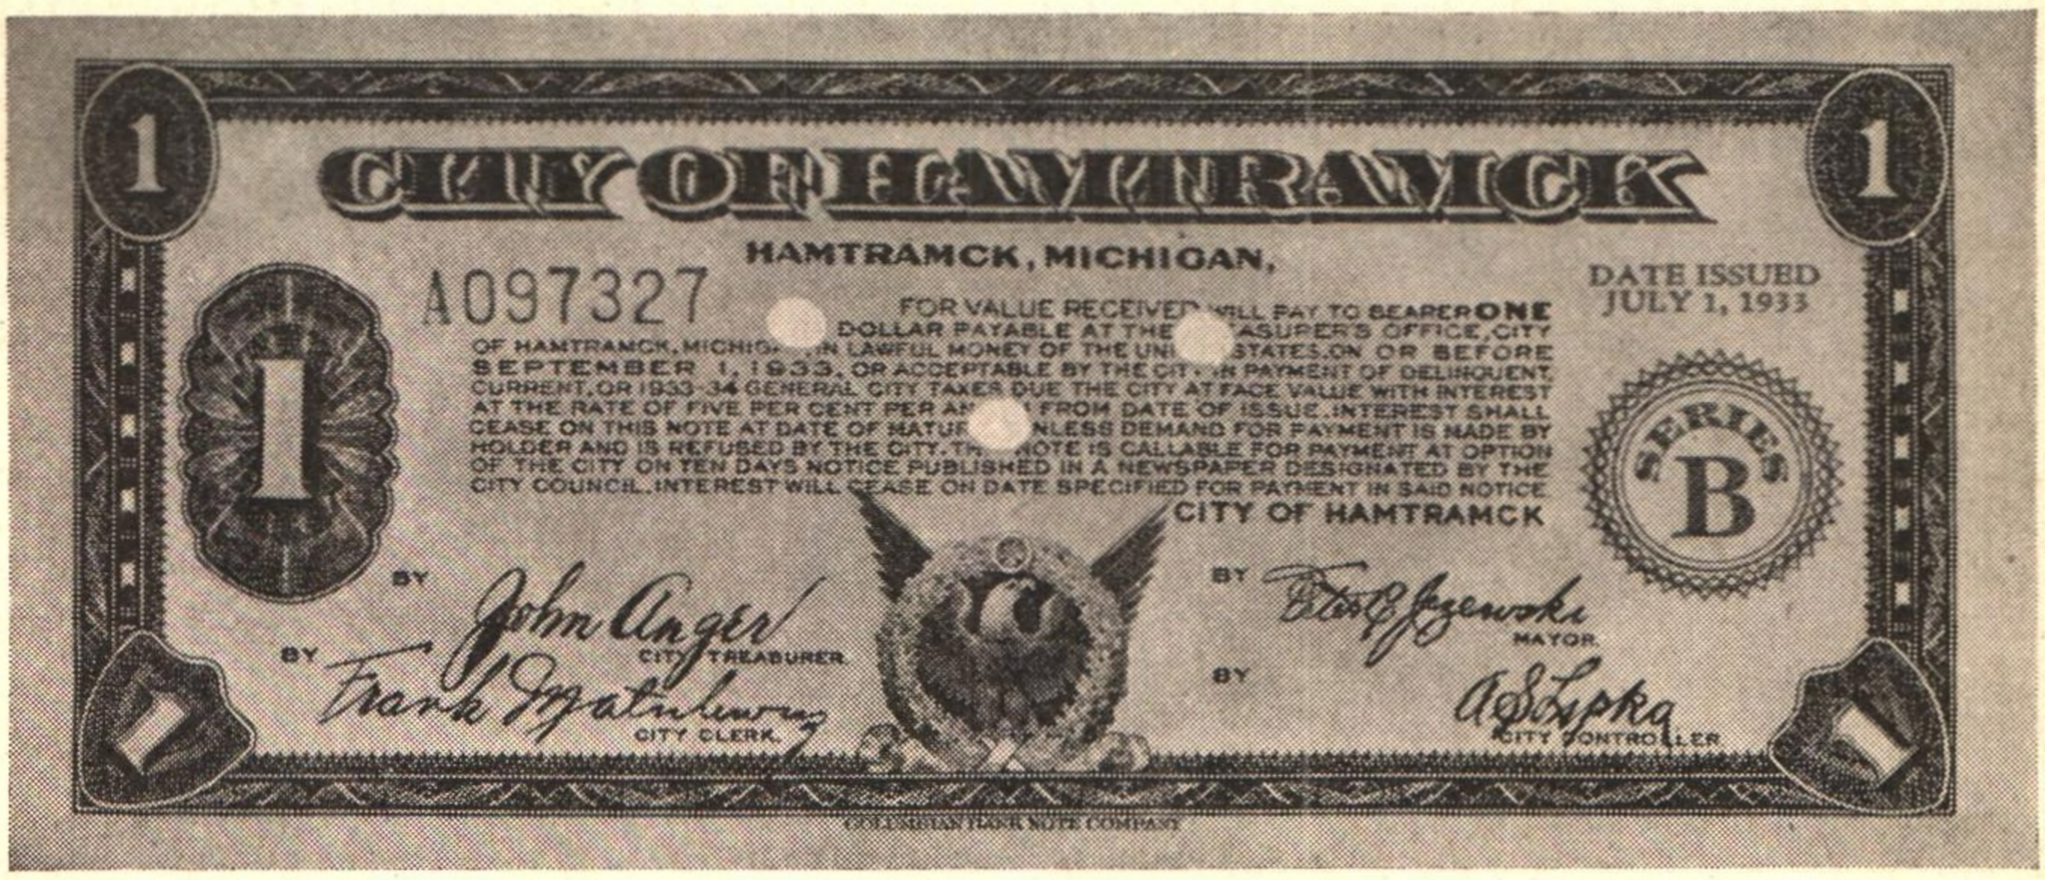

By J. J. CURTO

Hamtramck, Michigan, population about 50,000, is a city within a city, being entirely surrounded by its larger neighbor, Detroit. Hamtramck was incorporated in 1901 and took its name from Colonel John Francis Hamtramck who received the surrender of the British in this area, as part of the North West Territory on June 1, 1796.

Here, as in so many other communities in the early 30's, during the depth of the depression, unpaid taxes made it imperative for the City of Hamtramck to issue scrip. This step was necessary in order to carry on the functions of government, such as law and order, health and sanitation, safety and fire prevention, welfare and education and the numerous other services so vital and necessary to the well being of a community; services taken for granted by most of its citizens, their importance and cost appreciated by only a few.

The total amount issued by the City of Hamtramck during this emergency period, was $620,000.

Of this amount, only $800 is still outstanding presumably being held out for numismatic and various other reasons and not turned in for redemption.

Four series of notes, series A, B, C and D, were issued in 1933 and 1934 in $1, $5 and $10 denominations. They were engraved and printed by the Columbian Bank Note Co. of Chicago.

Through the courtesy of Mayor Dr. Stephen S. Skrzycki and City Comptroller Frank Matulewicz the following information and facts pertaining to these series, were dug out of the records for the benefit of numismatics.

THE COIN WEEK OBJECTIVE

In planning our community Coin Week programs, chief consideration should be given to the manner in which we invite the attention of the general public to our hobby. Let us emphasize the pleasure and educational values, and display carefully chosen examples of the engravers art and those specimens which have historical significance or an interesting story.

There are hundreds of novice coin collectors in your community who need only slight encouragement in the form of a coin display, a coin talk, a newspaper story, or radio discourse to join the growing ranks of numismatists. Let's extend a helping hand to the would-be coin collector on this occasion by demonstrating the romantic and historical aspects of numismatics, and by suggesting the limitless possibilities for scientific study for those whose interests lie in that direction. Above all, let's take the democratic viewpoint with the serious newcomer. Stir up his appetite for an intimate knowledge of coins, medals, paper money, tokens or the like, by exhibiting our coins, and telling our stories from the human, down-to-earth, standpoint, and reserve our technical language and specialized ramifications for discussions with our more advanced brethren.

Coin Week affords us the occasion to display our wares, an opportunity to glamorize our hobby so well that everyone who becomes exposed to our publicity, whether or not he finally becomes a collector, will gain a little more appreciation and understanding of United States money in particular, and at least a nodding acquaintance with coins and medals of the world in general.

Between the years 1859 and 1909 there were 1,843,448,000 Indian head cents issued, yet today one is seldom found in circulation.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ALBANY NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—President Reynolds called the 160th meeting to order at 9:05 p. m., March 8th. The roll call disclosed twenty-nine members and five visitors present.

A communication from A. Kosoff was read in which he indicated that he would donate to our library a bound volume of his current sales catalogs and price lists.

Mr. Kurth reported donations to the library making our file of "Numismatists" complete for the years 1922 and 1928 also making 1927 complete excepting March. He also donated a copy of No. 11 in the Coin Collector Series.

Mr. Sherwood reported for the Junior Coin Club Committee that all boys and others contacted had been enthusiastic about the proposal. The Committee suggests an organization composed of boys in the 12-21 years of age group, dues of 50c per year and meetings on Friday evenings once or twice a month. Many members present indicated their willingness to assist with the project by acting as exhibitor or counsellor at such meetings. The secretary-treasurer moved that the Junior Coin Club Committee be empowered to organize and sponsor such a club. Mr. Kurth seconded the motion and it was carried.

Luke Fleming was unanimously elected to full membership.

The resolution of the Oregon Numismatic Society regarding the production of a universal numismatic encyclopedia by the A. N. A. as a post-war project, which had been discussed and tabled at previous meetings, was again brought up for discussion. A compromise proposal reading as follows was adopted upon motion of Mr. Mackay, seconded by Mr. Sherwood and carried.

"WHEREAS, coin collectors generally recognize a need for authentic numismatic reference works to enable them to attribute and appreciate their coins, and

WHEREAS, the works now available to collectors for this purpose are limited, inaccessible or prohibitively expensive, and in many fields inadequate, and

WHEREAS, it is deemed feasible to have presently scarce works reproduced and made available, and/or additional authoritative reference works produced, under the management or sponsorship of the American Numismatic Association,

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that we, a member organization of the American Numismatic Association, propose such an undertaking to them, as a post-war project.

WE FURTHER suggest that all other member organizations who share our views take such steps as they deem advisable to bring about favorable action upon this RESOLUTION."

Dr. Sartoris then gave a very interesting talk on "Unlisted U. S. Coins" illustrated with a display of numerous regular issue coins with certain features recut or with stars or letters of sizes other than regularly cataloged. He also exhibited numerous altered coins and counterfeits including an 1815 cent.

—WILLIS J. McKINNEY, Secretary-Treasurer.

ANDERSON COIN CLUB—The 51st regular meeting opened in due form with President Stewart in charge Thursday, February 1.

Nominations for officers of the club for 1945 were held. Election to be held at the next regular meeting in March.

A discussion and quiz in regard to commemorative coins was conducted by Pres. Stewart. Also a discussion in regard to the possibility of the striking of a "Will Rogers" commemorative half dollar.

Mr. Blackmore contributed to the club collection a New Jersey cent of 1787 struck over a Connecticut cent of 1787.

—PERRY F. GORMAN, Secretary.

BALTIMORE COIN CLUB, INC.—The regular semi-monthly meeting was held at Peale's Museum on February 15th, with 23 members and five guests in attendance.

Mr. Sheckells, Chairman of the Display Committee, reported on the exhibit in the Union Trust Company which was prepared by Mr. Straus. This exhibit contains complete sets of small cents, two cent pieces and a full set of Commemorative half dollars. The Bank officials report that 200 to 300 persons view this exhibit daily. Mr. Sheckells then called on Mr. Perlitz who reported that the Annapolis exhibit in the Farmers National Bank at present consists of Commemorative gold coins showing both the obverse and reverse of each type.

A. F. Aschemeier of the C. & P. Telephone Company was then introduced and he presented an instructive and interesting talk on the operation of the Coin Telephone, particularly in the relation that coins play in the functioning of this type of telephone. He also exhibited a display of material which had actually caused trouble in Coin Telephones, such as mis-struck, flaked and other defective coins, mutilated coins, foreign coins, slugs, washers and other miscellaneous material, including even a wedding ring.

After the meeting adjourned, light refreshments were served.

—PLUMMER WILEY, Secretary-Treasurer

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—There was an attendance of 30 at the regular meeting held on March 6, at the Civic Center Building.

A change in the usual program was inaugurated so that the auction was held immediately after the business meeting instead of postponing it until after the address of the evening. This change proved very satisfactory and an interesting auction was held, Mr. Holger Jorgensen presiding as auctioneer. Two new members were added to the roll, namely Major Dana Hill and A. L. Nowak. Mr. Nowak, who was previously an antique dealer in San Francisco, was about to leave on a numismatic tour of the United States.

President Adolph Larson, Jr. had been scheduled to give a "Numismatic Pep Talk" on this occasion but due to the arrival of Major Dana Hill Mr. Larson postponed his talk until some later date and turned over the meeting to Major Hill. The club then listened to a most unusual address on "Snorter Money," which, Major Hill explained, is the special privilege of pilots who have flown over some ocean. On meeting other "snorter" pilots they exchange autographed currency and thus the collection grows. These "snorter" bills are pasted together and Major Hill exhibited a strip of this currency some fifty feet in length. Among his exhibits were bills autographed by General MacArthur and many other famous leaders, and the only countries not represented in his collection were Jugo Slavia, Greece, Greenland, and Tibet. The club was also presented with a specimen of this interesting currency, which was sold at the auction.

—EARLE K. STANTON, Secretary.

CEDAR RAPIDS COIN CLUB—The first triannual auction was held February 26. It was called at 7:30 by president Ray Harman at the Roosevelt Hotel. An introductory talk on the rules of the auction was given by James F. Cowden, auction chairman. Ivan Penrose and Ray Harman were auctioneers. The Coin Club was joined by the Cedar Rapids Stamp Club at this auction and some very fine lots of coins and stamps were sold. About 20 members were present. The meeting was most successful and interesting and a good time was reported by all.

—C. O. BARTMAN, Secretary-Treasurer.

CINCINNATI NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The regular meeting was held Friday, February 23rd, at the Netherland-Plaza Hotel with Vice President Gunning in the chair with an attendance of 15 members and four guests.

An auction of 214 lots was held with very active bidding.

The annual Washington Birthday banquet was held Saturday, February 24th at the Netherland-Plaza Hotel with approximately 50 members and guests present.

Sol Kaplan acted as toastmaster and introduced the officers for 1945. He then presented the six life members and three honorary members with special gold membership cards.

Mayor James G. Stewart opened the entertainment with a short talk discussing the value of numismatics as a hobby, relating to relaxation, at the same time being of extreme importance in preserving the history of the world.

As a conclusion, Mayor Stewart in behalf of the club, presented to Thomas G. Melish, a certificate of award, carrying a degree of Doctor of Numismatology (ND), in recognition of his constant interest in the local club and the promotion of numismatics in general. The certificate was of large diploma size on parchment paper, printed in script and old English type with the Association seal in gold and the colors of Numismatology—gold and silver underlaid. The Mayor stated this degree was original to his knowledge, and agreed with the members that the conference was most appropriate.

The main speaker of the evening was Lt. Kirk of the A. A. F. who related his experiences of 50 missions over Africa, Italy and Germany. He concluded his talk with an appeal for nurses, and WACS who are critically needed on all fronts.

—GEORGE D. PARVIN, Secretary.

COLUMBUS NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 158th meeting was held at the Neil House, February 12th. The meeting was called to order by President Depew Head. Twenty-one members and twelve visitors were in attendance.

The President spoke a few words of welcome to the guests, who were mostly women, this having been designated as "Ladies Night," and the men had been asked to bring their wives and friends with them to the meeting.

Miss Florence gave a splendid talk on the subject of "Collecting of Antiques for Pleasure and Profit." She gave some very interesting stories of her experiences in collecting and also gave us some good advice on becoming aware of imitations and reproductions. Miss Florence pointed out to us that in our search of old coins we would undoubtedly come in contact with many valuable antique pieces and that we could quite profitably take advantage of our knowledge of these two hobbies at the same time.

The following exhibits were made:

Harry Rodecker: French, English, and Belgian coins and paper money, recently received from his son overseas.

Gene Schroder, District Secretary of the A. N. A. explained the advantages of being a member of the A. N. A. and asked the members to join this organization.

A. L. Williams displayed a plastic proof coin holder and it was examined by members of the Club. Two sheets of cut uncirculated S and R bills were also exhibited. —VERA C. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

THE GREELEY COIN CLUB (Colorado)—The regular monthly meeting was held March 5, at the Home Gas and Electric Lounge. President C. G. Klein presiding. Twelve members and guests were present.

Our speaker for the evening was Chief Pharmacist Mate, Gerrit Wiers, of the U. S. Navy Recruiting Station, who gave one of the most fascinating talks ever given at our meetings. Chief Wiers is a born coin collector, and has spent the past 27 years chasing coins around the world in connection with his Navy pursuits. In his 102 crossings of the Seven Seas, he has collected coins from various countries which fill eight trunks. He spoke in detail of the odd customs practiced in foreign lands, such as the burning of paper money in China for their dead kin, and the renting of the mint to make your own money. His talk was most educational to those present, and it will be long remembered.

—HARRY BOSLEY, Secretary.

MISSOURI NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 73rd regular meeting was held at Hotel Melbourne.

President Vredenburgh presided with 11 members and four visitors present.

Mr. Burnette was called on to give his views on numismatics. He said that he had been collecting less than a year and had accumulated a nice beginning on coins out of circulation, and was progressing to a point where he was ready for further information on collecting coins. His first thought in attending his first collectors meeting was that he might be entering a den of wolves. Before the evening was over however we had his assurance that our group of members were not wolves but on the contrary quite eager and anxious to give every collector a helping hand.

Mr. Boos then gave a very interesting talk on coin collectors and dealers. He added that from his experience most collectors and even dealers were not necessarily wolves but from one of his amusing anecdotes left us wondering just what other term could be used.

Mr. Butler, the next speaker, expressed his own views on collecting. In his opinion a true collector considered the educational standpoint in collecting coins, stamps and even Indian relics all of which items he had been gathering for many years. His greatest gain had been in what he had learned rather than the profit in reselling his collections.

Mr. Lowen exhibited some aluminum occupational coins, which Germany had put in circulation in France and Belgium.

Mr. Frick made a very fine exhibit of over 100 specimens, covering two centuries of German coinage as well as some Canadian and English tokens. Franz Schlosser one of our specialists on old German coinage was called on and gave a fine descriptive and informative talk on the various German coins in Mr. Fricks collection.

Rev. Morton displayed five fine and unusual coins of early Rome and Greece. Being one of our advanced students on Greek and Roman coinage, his interesting talk on these coins added much to our knowledge on this subject and was greatly appreciated. One of these specimens weighing almost a pound, is termed the Roman pound and is a cast coin; one of the first issued, about 300 B. C. The British pound derives its name from this same Roman piece.

—AL. WICK, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 103rd meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A. on February 22nd. President Zeckser presided. There were 19 members and eight guests present.

Paul Fouts reported that he had contacted the Seattle Public Library and found the librarian very anxious to cooperate in building up the numismatic section. He left a list of books that would be of interest to coin collectors, and was assured that they would be made available in the near future. He also brought back a list of books that are now in stock.

Mr. Main gave a talk on Lincoln. As so many of the details of Lincoln's life are known, Mr. Main chose to deal primarily with the Lincoln family. Starting with the migration of Samuel Lincoln to America from England in 1638, the family spread from Massachusetts southward and became quite prominent throughout the entire country. It is interesting to note that there were several times as many Lincolns in the Confederacy as there were in the union.

Mr. Bibler reported on Victor D. Brenner. Born in Lithuania, he learned the die-cutter's trade from his father. He unwittingly became a fugitive in his native land by making a copy of an official seal, and he fled to America. His talent was soon recognized, and after some study in Paris, he returned to America, where his most famous work was the design for the Lincoln cent.

Mr. Fouts told an interesting story of the struggles of Washington, trying to pay the bills incurred during the Revolutionary War. The only solution was to issue currency. With nothing to back it, the currency issued was not readily accepted, especially since the British flooded the country with counterfeit bills in order to cause more confusion. The greatly depreciated value of this currency is the origin of the term "not worth a Continental."

Some very nice displays of Washington and Lincoln coins were shown.

—G. W. WOOD, Secretary.

SPRINGFIELD COIN CLUB—The 328th meeting was held February 13 at the Museum of Fine Arts, President Wheeler presiding with nine members present.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting was called to order by our president Major Joseph Moss at eight o'clock in our meeting room of the Washington Hotel. Twenty-seven members were present for the roll call and eight more members came in as the meeting progressed.

The time was then given over to Mr. Leachman, one of the speakers of the evening, his subject was coins of the Philippines. He gave us a very interesting talk and had coins to show the members the progress of coinage in these islands.

Another interesting collection was of the coins of the Coulion Leper Colony in the Philippines. This Leper Colony was established in 1906 and the coins were circulated in 1913 having been made of aluminum, they were of the 1, 5, 10, and 20 centavos and as the life of this metal did not last long due to the disinfecting of the coins, a new combination was made in 1922 of 75% Copper and 25% nickle. These were made in Manila and are still in circulation today. One of the coins of the 1925 issue had the profile of Doc Reissell on the obverse and the seal of the Philippines on the reverse. These he invited the members to view after the meeting.

The other speaker for the evening was our president Major Moss. He first told us of the experience he had in buying a set of the coronation issue and said his next buy of foreign coins in gold would be from a recognized coin dealer. His talk was on rare and beautiful gold pieces and the pieces shown told of his interest in the better things in numismatics. Following is a list of the pieces shown and explained. All coins were in proof or uncirculated condition.

1918 Gold coin of Turkey (Equal to 2½ English Pds.) This coin was only used as payment for a favor and never circulated. It had no image on it as this was against the belief of this sect. 500 Piasters of Egypt (Equal to 5 pds English). 4 Gold coins of Austria. One issued in 1908 on the 60th anniversary of the Austrian king's rise to the throne. Gold coin of Austria 1928 issue equal to 100 shillings. This coin showed the effect of Russia on the government by the use of the sickle and hammer. 2 coins of 4 ducats each 1880 and 1908. These showed two profiles, one of the king and the other of the crown prince. 1911 Bulgarian coin of 4 ducats. 1927 Albanian gold coin of 100 francs. 100 francs of Monaco (Monte Carlo) of the year 1895. The smallest coin of gold ever minted from Nuremburg of the year 1700. One dobra from Portugal of the year 1834. Set of Vatican gold coins. 100 Kronur from Austria year 1936. Membership medal of the A. N. Society with the name of the Major on it. Pattern set of the coronation of the present king of England.

He also had on display two copies of the limited issue club, one was titled FAR AWAY AND LONG AGO, the other was the familiar OREGON TRAIL. The interesting story of the books and their printing history was enjoyed by all.

Mr. Weikert displayed the 1879—$4 gold piece, two $20 gold pieces with Arabic and Roman numerals. Mr. Weikert also gave us an interesting talk on the life of Augustus St. Gaudens.

The President raised his voice in wondering why more people who were not numismatists were on the assay commission.

Mr. Atwood displayed types of double eagles and a few pieces from his collection of early Roman and Grecian coins.

Lt. Com. Nettleship displayed a book gotten from the collection of the late Col. Green with notes of our allied countries.

A letter was read from Col. Sigler wanting to be remembered to all the members and told a little of his life in Alaska.

Major Ball rendered his opinion of the meeting and hoped to have more like them, Mrs. Ball said her interest was in numismatics too but in a different way.

Mr. Cope asked the question of the ratio of the ducat to American money and Mr. Cullem answered that it was about $4.80.

Doc. Moore told of someone finding $20 gold pieces with the center hollowed out and filled with platinum and others wished to know more about them.

The meeting adjourned at ten o'clock and every one enjoyed looking over the exhibitions that were on the table in the front of the room.

—D. E. SUHRIE, Secretary-Treasurer.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY COIN CLUB—The 128th regular meeting was held at the New Rochelle Y. M. C. A. on February 20. The meeting was called to order by President Weidhaas, with ten members and one guest present.

The Oregon Numismatic Society letter asking for consideration of submitting a resolution to the A. N. A. covering the preparation of a numismatic encyclopedia was read and thereafter discussed.

It was the opinion of all present that despite the value of such a reference work it would be virtually impossible to make it universally valuable and at the same time cover the enormous scope of such a subject in a comprehensive way. The cost of such a project would be extremely high and far beyond the means of the A. N. A. The secretary was instructed to so advise the Oregon Numismatic Society.

The topic for the evening was "Washington Coins and Medals," and we were favored by having Joseph B. Stack as our guest speaker. Mr. Stack's hour-long talk was extremely interesting to all, being well sprinkled with anecdotes and stories relating to his subject and superbly supported by a large exhibit of choice Washington pieces.

Other exhibits presented were as follows:

Wm. Dewey: Collection of Civil War cards and tokens with portraits of Washington; 1937 A. N. A. convention badge—Washington, D. C.; Washington medal, "foremost farmer"; 1783 Washington and Independence cent; 1900 Washington-Lafayette dollar; 1926 Washington & Coolidge half-dollar; 1932 Washington quarter-dollar; facsimile of bank check (Bank of Alexandria) bearing Washington's handwriting.

S. Notes, Series 1928-1935A—bust of George Washington; 30 Washington medals in various metals together with one of 61 mm. size in walnut.

E. Weidhaas: Various commemorative medallions of George Washington; Collection of store cards and tokens depicting Washington; Military pass dated February 10, 1778, signed by George Washington.

The topic for the next meeting will be "Westchester County Items," a large unrestricted field. Mr. Skipton graciously promised to prepare a talk on this subject.

—WM. PEARSON, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB—The February meeting was held at the Central Y. M. C. A., February 14th. The meeting was called to order by President Funkhouser.

At this meeting, with a total attendance of 31 members and guests, we had the pleasure of having with us Lewis M. Reagan, General Secretary of the A. N. A., and A. Kosoff, of New York.

Mr. Reagan gave an interesting and instructive talk outlining the work and aims of the A. N. A. We were glad to hear him state that he considered our club a most active one and that he was cognizant of widespread and aggressive interest in numismatics throughout this section of Maryland, Pennsylvania, and W. Va.

Mr. Kosoff exhibited a number of slides of English coins of the various rulers from about 400 A. D. to the present time. While he talked Mr. Reagan displayed the pictures of the coins. He also showed pictures of Maryland coins and Pioneer gold.

A DISTINCTIVE COLLECTION OF

It may not be known to many collectors that we specialize, among general foreign coins, in the odd medium of exchange used in the 17th to 19th centuries in many less civilized parts of the world.

Several books have been written on this subject definitely listing all these items (bracelets, spears, necklaces, knives) as money and detailed descriptions and evaluations compared to the English pound are available for each item.

As time goes on, we intend to specialize more on this subject and we would suggest that new collectors interest themselves in this particular series.

BLOOD MONEY

Well, fellows, may I say my little swan-song-speech and confession and get it over with? I know that you collectors feel that many dealers have forgotten how to be nice and have been kicking collectors around in general, and blaming it on the shortage of help, etc. Also you are shocked by the number of little dealers (such as I) who have been starving to death for years—and now have become "Full Page Big Shots" because of the War boom.

Frankly, I'm ashamed of my part in it. Rather than bragging about my success, I want to dig a hole and crawl in. The volume of coin business has nearly reached that of the Commemorative boom days. BUT, every dollar of it is BLOOD MONEY, and while our boys die we sit back here and profit on easy dollars.

I'm realizing it more and more because I have a little hole-in-wall retail store here in San Antonio where we have a great hospital for the returning boys. They come in my store with an arm or leg shot off or an eye gone. I can't help feeling they gave so much, and I—made a thousand bucks. My conscience is getting the best of me—I'm quitting for the duration.

This little confession is made for two reasons:

1st. To let my customers know how much I really have enjoyed doing business for the past 13 years with each and every one of you. I sincerely look forward to a pleasant resumption of our dealings after Victory is won.

2nd. Something for you other dealers to think about. Lot of us have really become "High-Hat" during this boom—and it can cause hard feeling that will take years to mend. Let's remember all this "Good times" didn't happen because you and I were smart—a lot of guys are paying for it in BLOOD. How about all of us turning over a new leaf and becoming a little meek and understanding for the duration?

I plan to keep the retail store open on a part time basis, and will buy merchandise for "Tomorrow." Will therefore appreciate your offerings of anything you have for sale, IF YOU PUT YOUR PRICE ON THEM. Would also like any dealer's retail or wholesale list and auction catalogues.

I still have in stock about $20,000.00 face value uncirculated in rolls on which I am paying interest, and should sell. All persons on my mailing list will receive an offering on these shortly.

Again—many thanks for your patience and patronage.

Until later,

NORMAN H. BROCK

COINS OF THE WORLD

Second Edition

Collectors will welcome the second edition of this indispensable reference work on modern coins. The first edition (1938) has been out of print for the past three years, and a great many new collectors have never been able to obtain a copy. Those who own an original copy will find the second edition revised, corrected, and brought up to date with many new listings and illustrations. Values have been adjusted to the present day market.

COINS OF THE WORLD is a compilation of numismatic knowledge gathered over a long period of years, and the original publication of this work gave collectors the first authoritative reference on modern coins. Outstanding authorities, collectors, and dealers have contributed their knowledge to the production of this book, making it as nearly complete and correct as possible.

Approximately 4,000 coins are listed and described, with their values given, and nearly 1,500 halftone illustrations show the types of all issues.

FIFTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

FRENCH FISHERMAN THROTTLES ADOLPH

Joseph Silverman, with the American Army in Europe, has sent a most unusual French 20 franc note to Lewis M. Reagan, General Secretary of the A. N. A.

He reports that large quantities of these notes were in circulation when the Germans were occupying France. They were made by pasting a postage-stamp portrait of Hitler behind the French fisherman's rope, thus producing a clever bit of subtle noncollaboration. The Germans were aware of these notes but did nothing about them as they did not want to admit they had noticed them.

The note illustrated was autographed for Mr. Silverman by one of his French friends.

Entered as Second Class Matter at the Federalsburg, Md., Post Office under the Act of March 3, 1879.

NOTES AND QUERIES

Only Two to a Customer—

In reply to the most popular question of the month, we can state that the U. S. Treasury does sell new coins to collectors.

Most of the issues of 1944 and 1945 are obtainable. Collectors should write to the Treasury Department, Washington 25, D. C. for a list of dates and mint marks available and detailed instructions for ordering.

Only two coins of each variety are allowed a customer. "The Treasury cannot undertake to furnish coins that are free from tarnish and scratches." Coins become scratched in the necessary counting and packing at the Mint, and they become tarnished after being stored at the Mint for a short time.

Readers on the Alert—

That readers of THE NUMISMATIST are always on the alert and ready to offer assistance in the identification of a coin is shown by the splendid response to the query "What Is It?" page 210 of the March, 1945 issue.

H. E. Deats, A. N. A. No. 15, writes:

"That square piece looks to me like the work of a silversmith's apprentice. The crown can perhaps be identified by studying illustrations in one of the books on New York silversmiths."

Mabelle M. Graves, A. N. A. No. 6494, writes:

"I have a Communion Token of New York City similar to the piece in question. Mine is 18 mm, rudely square and evidently made by hand. The obverse reads: N. Y. 1786. Reverse: A. S. C. The letters are unevenly spaced and not quite in line. The S has been punched upside down. My token has no crown, but in 1786 I do not think a crown would be used."

Various other theories have been made and every suggested source is being investigated. The editor is going to track this piece down if it takes him all summer.

Has a lot of Trouble—

Sir:

"I recently picked up an unusual 1944 Lincoln head cent. With a strong magnifier I can see the faint outline of a cigarette in Lincoln's mouth. I'd like to know if this has been discovered by other collectors.

If you want to please a lot of us collectors, you should print the "Reports of Club Meetings" in a much larger type. They give me a lot of trouble."

—S. T., CHICAGO.

Something New has been Added—

Farran Zerbe tells of the time he was exhibiting at a bank, the doors of which were to be opened at 7:30 p. m. Outside, an excited woman broke through the waiting line and began pounding on the door. The guard told her, "Lady, you're too early, the exhibit won't be open to the public for another twenty minutes."

"I didn't come here to see the coin exhibit," said the woman, "I want to talk to that numismaniac who owns it."

Silver 3-Cent Pieces—

The U. S. silver three cent piece of 1851 weighed 12⅜ grains and was .750 fine. It contained the least proportion of silver of all U. S. silver coins. On March 3, 1853, an Act was passed increasing the silver content to 900 and decreasing the weight to 11.42. The coinage was discontinued in 1873.

Different Classes of Membership

A number of enquiries have been received regarding the different classes of membership in the A. N. A. If our correspondents will consult Mr. Reagan's article, pages 122 and 123 of the February, 1945 issue, they will find a complete listing.

Notes on the Early and Late Proof Sets of 1936—

Dear Sir:

"Here is my donation to this department. So far I haven't been able to find the answer and no one has been able to answer it for me. Possibly the answer is so simple that I can't see it, but anyway here it is."

"What is the difference between the early and late proof sets of 1936?"

Thanking you,

ORVILLE A. ROBERTS

A. N. A. No. 10482

Answer:

There is no simple answer to the above question. Experts have been consulted and here is what they have to say:

"It is difficult to describe the difference between the early and the late proof sets of 1936 unless you have them both together. The first issue is not quite as brilliant or as sharp as the second. That is about the only description I can give of them."

—B. MAX MEHL

"There is not much I can tell about the 1936 proof sets, except that the first run of them was not very brilliant, and the later runs were normal. There is no way of telling the difference unless you have them both together for comparison."

—WAYTE RAYMOND

"The difference is difficult to describe. The early issue has the appearance of buffed or polished coins. The late issues have sharper details, especially the nickels. Comparison is the best test. I believe they were made by two different methods."

—LEWIS M. REAGAN

"The difference is slight. The early issues appear to be polished. The later issues resemble the proofs of 1915 in that they show sharp details. This is especially noticeable in the nickel and quarter-dollar."

—MARTIN F. KORTJOHN

Slow but Sure—

All questions and comments are given equal consideration. Naturally this takes time and our correspondents are asked to be patient. As an example, the question regarding the difference in late and early proof sets of 1936 involved much correspondence, yet it is a matter of minor importance.

Final Notes on Cents of 1922—

In 1922 the U. S. Government coined 7,160,000 Lincoln head cents at the Denver mint. None was coined at Philadelphia or San Francisco. Some of these cents are poorly struck and show only a faint outline or no sign of the D mint mark. That's all there is to the story. Collectors who feel they "must" own a 1922 cent with an obliterated mint mark should use a tack-hammer on the mint mark of a well struck specimen. With a little practice they will become as expert as the next fellow.

Disagrees with "A Disgusted Collector"—

Editor THE NUMISMATIST
Sir:

After a repeated perusal of "A Disgusted Reader's" vitriolic discourse in April's Notes and Queries, the writer has convinced himself that this little literary gem merits further mention.

Presumably our new editor of THE NUMISMATIST has lost his "fat-salaried" job, and this is very distressing to those of us who enjoyed so much his article on "The Condition of a Coin."

Dear Disgusted Reader, reluctantly we release you from our organization, but your effort was not in vain, for you have reduced innumerable waistlines by the exercise given to so many abdominal muscles.

KENNETH COOK,
Elkhart, Indiana

P.S.: We hope that you may have the opportunity of reading this in the public library.

Aside to the editor: Keep going, Ed. THE NUMISMATIST is getting better every issue. And, by the way, it is quite all right to publish my name, if you wish.

WAR-PRISONER MONEY AND MEDALS

Internment Camp Money

The guarantee of humane treatment for prisoners of war is an achievement of modern international law. This interesting and important legal problem was discussed at great length at several international conferences at the end of the nineteenth and the beginning of the twentieth century. A kind of ethical and legal code resulted consisting of a comprehensive body of rules and regulations, both written and unwritten. The International Red Cross played an important part in the development and crystallization of those humanitarian ideals as they are embodied today in the provisions of the international law concerning prisoners of war. Its rules have been explicitly or tacitly accepted and to a great extent put into practice by most of the civilized nations of the world. Their disregard, as in the recently reported case of 115 helpless American military prisoners of war murdered in cold blood by the Germans near Malmedy, or in the notorious death camps of Oswiecim and Belsen-Bergen, is a relapse into barbarism, characteristic of the Hitlerite hordes. As a rule, however, the status of prisoners of war is universally respected and they receive a fair treatment from all nations, in accordance with the rules of international law. They may be employed by their captors for certain labors, but must be accorded fair living conditions.

Considerations of war economy and corresponding military precautions created the necessity of issuing special money for the use of prisoners of war. A shortage in currency is often an unavoidable result of national war conditions. It would be greatly increased, of course, if the actual use of national currency would be permitted also to the rising numbers of captives. The issuance of special currency for the exclusive use of war prisoners is therefore an act of national defense in wartime. The use of this special type of money, for which both paper and metal are employed, is restricted in a twofold way. Its circulation is limited to war prisoners, and—even more strictly—to definite internment camps. The prisoners' specially made money, often easily distinguishable through a round or square hole in the center, is excluded from general monetary circulation. The prisoner is not able to buy articles in the ordinary channels of the national commerce. Moreover, he is left without means in case of escape.

These are the ideas and motives underlying the issuance of separate money for prisoners of war.

During the First World War such money was produced by the warring nations of Europe. In Germany, where 635,000 allied prisoners were confined at the end of the war, it was called Gefangenenlagergeld; in France, with the greatest number of German war prisoners (400,000), it was known as monnaies des camps de prisonniers. In Germany production reached tremendous amounts and resulted in almost unbelievable varieties, far surpassing the needs dictated by war economy and military policy. Röttinger's catalogue of German internment camp money lists about 1360 different places of issue and authorities competent to issue such money. There were thousands of types and varieties. All kinds of material were used and all types of style imaginable were represented.

Austrian War-Prisoner Money
Used in the Officers Prison Camp Mühling
(Courtesy of the American Numismatic Society)

From these facts another motif comes to light which prompted that mass production of war prisoner money. Apparently this new type of currency quickly attracted the attention of numismatists, first in the lands of its origin, then in the adjacent neutral countries, and later in the entire world. The interest of collectors and students once awakened was soon exploited by the German government through a mass export of complete sets of prisoner currency to foreign countries. Thus a means was provided of obtaining valuable and badly needed foreign exchange for a worthless kind of currency. In fact it was a practically worthless kind of money, worthless even from the numismatic point of view. For the almost innumerable varieties impaired the collector's interest who could not entertain any hope ever to obtain a complete collection. While Germany continued this practice for the duration of the war, in line with her general inflationary policy, Austria-Hungary seems to have kept the issuance of her war prisoner money within the limits of the actual war needs.

The hypothesis of the partly inflationary character of the German internment camp money during the First World War and of its doubtful numismatical value, as set forth here, is borne out by several other observations. There were very few complete or almost complete collections of "Gefangenenlagergeld" even in Germany, the most important ones being that of the Reichswirtschaftsmuseum in Leipzig, where one specimen of each type of Notgeld was officially deposited by the Reich as issued, and that of a private collector, Doctor Arnold Keller of Berlin, the publisher of Dr. Arnold Kellers Notgeldbücher. In Holland, there was also a collection outstanding because of its completeness, namely that of Mr. Paul Daub of Utrecht, a private collector. The American Numismatic Society, in due recognition of the given situation, rightfully did not care to acquire complete sets of this money, either during or after the war, but contented itself with a few specimens only. There have been a few private collectors in the United States none of whom seems to have attained great achievements in this field. None the less, the interest is still kept alive to some degree in collectors' circles through the "International Emergency Money Club" of New York City, the only club of its kind in existence, founded in 1936 in New York City, with an active membership of thirty in 1942.

Different Types of War Prisoner Money

Beginning as early as January 1917 the well known firm of J. Schulman of Amsterdam offered complete sets of such money in a series of consecutive catalogues on war money, entitled La Guerre Européenne 1914-1917. Here collectors could obtain almost all sets available which were probably secured from the official authorities of issuance in Germany. The international reputation of the firm of Schulman in Amsterdam is too well established to permit reflection on the ethics of its business transactions. Merely for the sake of clarity it should be stated that none is implied here.

Obviously, numismatic interest turned quickly to the items of this previously little known type of war emergency money. In the very beginning, most probably, everyone thought that it would be a quickly passing numismatic phenomenon. No one could at that time realize the dimensions that production of war prisoner money would finally reach. All this notwithstanding, the literature on this special kind of money is scarce, incomplete and widely scattered. The appended select bibliography might therefore be welcome to those interested in this field of collecting which probably will be revived soon after the return of peace. It is needless to state that no claim is being made of completeness in the bibliographical data offered below.

No doubt, in the present war, too, internment camp money has been issued. Scanty news on such money issued in Great Britain, particularly in the Isle of Man internment camp for civilian and soldier prisoners of war, has already been brought to the attention of numismatists. A member of the Czechoslovak State Council in London, Mr. Ernest Frischer, recently informed the present writer that internment camp money is in use in the ill-famed concentration camp of Terezin (Theresienstadt) in Bohemia, where about 50,000 Jews are being held by their German "Protectors." According to information received by the War Department in Washington, on the other hand, "no special type of money is issued for the use of prisoners of war held in this country. However, prisoners of war are issued 'canteen checks,' a form of script which is given them in lieu of cash. This script is redeemable for merchandise at prison camp post exchanges. This script is not uniform, each of the several Service Commands procuring it and issuing it to camps within its jurisdiction. No photographs of the canteen checks are available."

Naturally, more detailed and definite information will be available only after the termination of hostilities and the restoration of unimpeded research channels.

European War-Prisoner Medals

With regard to war prisoner medals, the numismatic situation is completely different from that outlined here for internment camp money. True, there may have been also a "mass production" of such medallic items in Europe during the war of 1914-1918. But it never could have paralleled that of the emergency money for internment camps.

Two motives, above all, caused the issuance of war prisoner medals: the raising of funds for the support of prisoners of war or the amelioration of their condition; and the creation of the commemorative tokens or medals for presentation to captives after their liberation. It is doubtful and highly improbable, that the "mass production" of such medals ever reached in quantity a volume equal to that of war prisoners money. The number issued may well run into hundreds, at most a few thousands, but certainly not many thousands. For, to the best of this author's knowledge, no commemorative war medal in the form of an official decoration to be given to all war prisoners in general was issued by any of the states participating in the First World War. Nor did any of the European states that remained neutral and held members of the belligerents in internment camps, issue commemorative medals for internees. This suggestion may well deserve the attention of the United Nations' military authorities. After the present war a special commemorative medal of honor should be issued, intended for those who had to endure the great hardships of captivity for their country, often suffering undescribable physical and mental restraint. Such a token of gratitude would show to these heroes that they, too, had not been forgotten and that their sacrifice is duly appreciated and will permanently be remembered.

It seems that in the last European war prisoner medals were issued privately only. The extensive search for such medals carried on by the author in numismatic literature and dealers' catalogues as well as through interviewing of collectors and dealers, yielded only four items. Three are of German origin, only one is French. None of these medals has aroused as yet the attention or curiosity of numismatists in general or of collectors of medals in particular.

Because of its medallic representation a typically German "war medal" will be mentioned first. No specimen was available to this writer.

German Capture Medal by L. Gies

None is found in the Museum of the American Numismatic Society in New York City. It is a unilateral bronze medal, measuring 64 millimeters in diameter, designed by the German artist, Ludwig Gies, whose initials L.G. appear on the obverse. It is one of the numerous "war medals" created by him in the beginning of the First World War. It depicts the act of capture. A German soldier is shown capturing and taking away a French, a Russian, an English, Belgian, Serbian, and a colonial native prisoner of war. A brief description, but no reproduction of this medal, is found in J. Schulman's Catalogue LXV, of April 1916, p. 82, No. 809. It is pictured among the artist's other war medals in Max Bernhart's Die Muenchener Medaillenkunst der Gegenwart, Plate 15, No. 102, wherefrom the reproduction is made.

The medal reproduced here as No. 1, another German war prisoner medal, is a silver medal, of 37.67 grams, measuring forty-one millimeters in diameter. The obverse depicts the full figure of a German prisoner of war, dressed in his uniform, on which a sign PG (French: prisonnier de guerre) is visible. Standing on the shore of a river, being of course the Rhine, he holds his hands stretched out to express his fervent longing for his home country. Not only the mountains of the latter are visible on the opposite shore but also the home village with its little church in the foreground. The inscription in the left upper space of the medal, before the soldier's eyes, reads: SEHNSUCHT (longing). The reverse bears the following inscription in a quadrangular space surrounded by ornaments: VOLKSBUND/ZUM SCHUTZE/DER DEUT-

SCHEN/KRIEGS u. ZIVIL/GEFANGENEN, meaning, "National Society for the Protection of German Military and Civil Prisoners of War."

No. 1

German Volksbund for Prisoners Medal

On the rim of the medal name and place of the producing firm are visible: C. Poellat, Schrobenhausen. The designer's name does not appear on the medal. No year is given. In accordance with the aims of the issuing society the medal was probably destined to promote interest in and support of the German prisoners of war in enemy land. No records or accounts of the activities of this society were available in this country. Nevertheless it is safe to assume the following. Sending of food parcels from Germany was possible only in the first years of war. But even later, in the period of grave food shortage, funds were still needed and actually raised for clothing, and particularly for books, which were continuously sent to prisoner camps in great quantities. A specimen of this medal is in the collection of Dr. Bruno Kisch, New York City.

There is a French counterpart to this medal. A small medal, 26 millimeters in diameter, similar to No. 1 in its motives, but apparently more artistically designed, is known to have been struck in France. No specimen is available in this country. According to the brief description in J. Schulman's Catalogue LXXIII it was designed by O. Yencesse and executed in a silvery white metal. The obverse shows a French soldier seated in an attitude of despondency. The inscription reads: POUR NOS—PRISONNIERS, that is: "For Our Prisoners." On the reverse a dove is visible bearing in its bill an olive branch. Below is the date 1916. The motive of the issuance of this medal was patently fund raising.

No. 2 is a medal made of hard white metal, and struck for the German prisoners of war interned at Douglas, Isle of Man, to commemorate their detention there. Its diameter measures 46 millimeters. On the top there is a rectangular vertical loophole. The obverse shows the Douglas prison camp, in the foreground its barracks and huts, also an unfolded banner is visible; in the background a fortress at the left of the beholder, and a lighthouse at the right. Between the fortress and the lighthouse is the Manx triskelion or triquerta, occupying a prominent place in the upper center. The entire picture on the obverse is enclosed by a surrounding wreath of barbed wire. The reverse has a wreath of leaves with a panel in the middle. The inscription reads, in the upper segment: WELTKRIEG 1914-1915 ("World War 1914-1915"); in the lower: DOUGLAS ISLE OF MAN; in the middle: ERINNERUNG AN DIE KRIEGSHAFT ("In commemoration of war detention"). No artist's name is given. Specimens of this medal are found in the museum of the American Numismatic Society, New York City, and in this writer's collection. The first mentioned specimen is in an (original) plain wooden case with no ornament. Other wooden cases are known, on the cover of which an inlaid design is visible representing an open-jawed snake as the symbol of war. The words Weltkrieg 1914/15 are added on the case. This medal was pictured and briefly, though not exactly, described in The New York Times of August 26, 1916. In THE NUMISMATIST of March 1916, a reproduction with a few explanatory lines was also published, the medal having been exhibited at the January meeting of the New York Numismatic Club.

German Camp Douglas Medal

Douglas, Peel and Knockaloe had been chosen as sites for the detention camps on the Isle of Man. Here many an alien who for years had followed some profession or trade in Great Britain was interned in 1914 for the duration of the war. The English and German Relief Committees with the active cooperation of the American Young Men's Christian Association succeeded in performing what seemed to the New York Times correspondent at that time to have been an unheard-of feat under the existing conditions: the establishment of an art school for prisoners of war at Camp Douglas. Beside wooden boxes done in chip carving and in wood intaglio, the commemorative medals for German war prisoners were certainly the most artistic objects produced there. Through a strange irony of fate, they were strictly "made in England." "Some day they will be of historic value," said the New York Times correspondent in concluding his article. The art school was established in 1915. From the inscription on the medals "1914-1915" it is clear that they must have been designed and executed in the latter year, three years before the war came to an end.

No other war prisoners medals dating back to the First World War have come to the attention of the present author. Yet, there may be some that eluded him. He therefore would appreciate any additional information that readers should be kind enough to send him (address: 415 West 115th Street, New York 25, N. Y.)

American War-Prison Tokens and Medals

1. "Historical Tokens"

The study of European money and medals issued for prisoners of war in 1914-1918, aroused—little wonder—the curiosity as to whether similar items came into existence in this country too. No war prisoners money or medal originating in the last war is known to the author. In his collection, however, five related items are found, four small tokens and one large medal, which are deserving the historian's and medallist's attention. All of them picture war prisons of ill fame. Four pertain to the Revolutionary War, the fifth to the Civil War. Thus it is pertinent to consider them all in this connection.

No. 3A

The Old Provoost, New York

Nos. 3 A, 3 B, 4 and 5 are copper tokens, each 31 millimeters in diameter. They are not "historical" items in that they have come down to us as immediate witnesses from the period of the Revolutionary War. They are rather medallic creations of an outspoken commercial character, but nevertheless "historical" tokens. Nos. 3 A and 3 B are identical with No. 1 of a series of fourteen "Historical Tokens" issued by August B. Sage, a well-known New York coin dealer, in 1859. No. 4 in the present numbering is identical with No. 2, and No. 5 with No. 5 of the same series. On the first page of his Catalogue of Coins, Medals and Tokens, No. 1, of February 1859, Mr. Sage announced that "this series will consist of about 25 tokens, each one giving a correct representation of some public building around which there is anything of an historical interest." No more than fourteen tokens were actually issued of this series. All of them were advertised in Mr. Sage's later catalogue of June 1859. They were executed in copper plain edge and in copper and brass with reeded edges. In 1859, the set was offered for sale for $4.00. Mules in copper, brass, and tin are known. Of No. 1 and No. 6 two dies were made: in both cases the original die showed some mistakes in picture or legend which were corrected in the second die. In Chapman's catalogue of the Bushnell collection a specimen of No. 1 in silver is listed as No. 462. It was described as of "weak impression, but very rare."

1945 NOMINATIONS AND OFFICERS' MEETING

"At least 90 days prior to a convention, the President shall issue a call in the official magazine for nominations for officers. Nominations for any office may be made by any member, or by a corporate member. All nominations shall be sent to the General Secretary, who shall immediately write the nominees, notifying them of their nomination and requesting their acceptance in writing. If the nominee does not accept the nomination in writing, such nomination shall not be placed upon the ballot."

So states Article IV Section 2 of the By-Laws. In compliance with the By-Laws it is my duty to issue this call for nominations. Due care and consideration should be given in your selection of those members who are to be your officers for the next year.

Though the Constitution and the By-Laws provide for the holding of an annual convention, the recent order of the Government forbidding the holding of conventions has made impossible the holding of a 1945 American Numismatic Association convention of the kind held in the past. In its place the officers will meet in New York City at the end of August. So that the Association may fully comply with the Government order, no further announcement of the time or meeting place will be made. However, so that the important function of the election of officers may be taken care of, the ballots will be counted at the officers' meeting by a committee still to be appointed.

Nominations will close on July sixteenth.

IOWA WANTS COMMEMORATIVE HALF-DOLLAR ON CENTENARY OF STATEHOOD IN 1946

Editor of THE NUMISMATIST:

I have just noticed in the March 24th issue of the Weekly Philatelic Gossip, apparently quoting from an item by James B. Hatcher of the New York Journal-American, that Congressman Karl M. LeCompte, of Iowa, is attempting to secure the passage of a bill to permit the coinage of a commemorative half dollar for the Iowa Statehood Centenary in 1946.

I hope such a bill may be approved and that the President will have a change of heart and give us collectors a chance to add a worthwhile coin occasionally. A statehood centenary is of enough political and historical importance to merit such recognition. However, I should like to see this limited to one issue of a reasonable quantity and from one mint only.

Yours very sincerely,

E. A. FIMMEN, A. N. A. 9136

CONDITION COLLECTORS

Editor THE NUMISMATIST,
Sir:

Score a point for "A Confirmed Crank" whose letter appeared in the April issue of THE NUMISMATIST. Inasmuch as he held the dealer who sold the coin in such high esteem, he should have returned it. Of course that is not his real complaint. He objects to the "system" used in classifying coins. Certainly the "system" used has its faults. How would it be for him to suggest a better one? I would like to devise a better system myself but am stopped dead cold by the high cost of printing. My average commission is 20 per cent. Thus when I sell a coin for 50 cents my commission is ten cents. Printing costs for each lot runs slightly better than 30 cents. Naturally I lose money on cheap lots, and that loss must be compensated by my commission on the higher priced lots. Copy for a coin catalogue has to be condensed, otherwise the cataloguer will lose money. Under the present system it is impossible to describe minute defects. The late Henry Chapman often said, "Coins are classified with the naked eye, and not with a high-powered magnifying-glass."

Condition collectors have their place in the coin-collecting fraternity, but it is not a place of importance as only the smallest fraction of worthwhile coins are in perfect condition. Greek, Roman, Medieval, early English, or early American Colonial coins rarely, if ever, come in perfect condition. Certainly none of them would be called perfect by "A Confirmed Crank."

BOOK REVIEW

CURRENCY IN ROMAN AND BYZANTINE EGYPT. Louis C. West and Allan Chester Johnson. Princeton University Press, 1944. $3. 195 pp., no illustrations.

This book is the result of careful and extended researches into the economic problems of Egypt while it was a part of the Roman Empire, the solutions and attempted solutions of these problems and of the coinages in circulation during that period. Original documents of the period were freely and exhaustively consulted as well as numerous other works on the same and related subjects. The style and content of the book are scholarly, with numerous footnotes and full bibliography of references and sources. It is a substantial contribution to numismatic and economic literature.

The Roman coinage included some gold, but gold coin seems not to have been in general circulation in Egypt. The Roman silver coinage is described and the special tetradrachms struck in and for Egypt are discussed in detail. These tetradrachms, familiar to all collectors of Roman coins, contained 13 grams of silver, most of them dated according to the year of reign of the Emperor, and they did not circulate outside of Egypt.

The unit upon which most transactions were based was the Ptolemaic silver drachma of six obols, the tetradrachm being equivalent to about 28 or 29 obols. In some private transactions, it appears that the drachma was reckoned as 7 to 7¼ obols.

Taxes were supposed to be paid in silver but when bronze was accepted a premium was usually charged. The bronze currency is described and classified, the ratio of value for copper to silver varied from 300:1 to 500:1, often appearing as 480:1.

Chapter V contains an interesting and rather complete account of the methods of mathematical calculations used in commercial practices. In Chapter VI is a description of the monetary terms found in the Papyri, an interpretation of them, and their relationships with each other. Reference is made in Chapter VII to several coin hoards found in Egypt, the contents of which throw some light on the problems under discussion. Chapter VIII is called "Price Levels in Roman Egypt" and is a study of economic conditions of the period including such things as living standards, wages, inflation and public works. Chapter IX is a history of Egyptian and Imperial Exchange, the manner and amount of collection of Imperial revenue, poll taxes, special taxes, duties and tariffs, and is a most enlightening discussion of these problems. The later chapters deal with the Byzantine issues and the frequent changes in coinages from A. D. 296 to 337. The issues are described and classified and this part of the book will be most helpful to students and collectors of the Byzantine coinage. Byzantine papyri were examined for references to monetary terms and a surprising variety of such terms is reported. The last two chapters deal with local gold standards and the relation of gold to bronze.

Seven tables and a list of Documents examined constitute the Appendix, not designated as such. Table I is a detailed arrangement of the weights of tetradrachms of Tiberius; Table II, of weights and fineness of the Alexandrian Tetradrachms; Table III, Monetary Equivalents; Table IV, Frequency Table Showing Sizes of Bronze Coins; Table V, Sizes and Weights of Bronze Coins; Table VI, Hoards of Egyptian Tetradrachms; Table VII, the Silver Coinage from A. D. 305 to 450. These tables will be especially useful to collectors interested mostly in the numismatic aspects of the period.

The book is nicely arranged, neatly printed on a good quality of paper and has a reasonably substantial cloth binding. Students of Roman history and economics will find the book invaluable, and numismatists with special interests in Roman and Egyptian coins will welcome its addition to their libraries.

LEWIS M. REAGAN.

NEW OR RECENT ISSUES

By ERNST KRAUS

BELGIUM. The 5, 10, 25 centimes in nickel of 1938, were replaced in 1941 by zinc coins of the same design. Obverse L for Leopold and reverse three shields grouped around the centre hole.

COMMONWEALTH OF THE PHILIPPINES. The new "Victory" coins for the Philippines were made at the San Francisco and Denver mints in the United States. The set at hand consists of the 50, 20 and 10 centavos in silver. The obverse shows the arms of the Commonwealth, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and the date 1944. Reverse: The traditional female figure standing, holding a hammer in her right hand, which rests on an anvil, at right a volcano, top value, bottom FILIPINAS. The same design for all three silver coins. Five centavos in a composition similar in appearance to our 5 cent pieces. Obverse: Arms as on silver coins of 1937 and 1938. Reverse: Female seated.

EGYPT. A new hexagonal two piastre silver coin made its appearance last year. The design is similar to the round one of the same denomination. The obverse has the bust of King Farouk to the left. Reverse: Leaf design around the inscription and date, 1944-1363. Value on top.

MONACO. The mint at Paris struck a one franc aluminum coin without date for the principality of Monaco. The obverse shows the head of the reigning prince to the left, inscription around: LOUIS II, PRINCE OF MONACO. The reverse: Arms, value and mint mark.

LUXEMBURG—(Letzeburg). One of the new coins issued shortly before the war started in Europe came only recently to the attention of American collectors. It is a one franc nickel coin dated 1939. The planchet is slightly larger than the previous issue of the same value. The obverse shows a woman standing holding a bundle of wheat in her left arm and a sickle in her right hand, value and date. The reverse shows a crowned monogram CH for grand duchess Charlotte and the new name for Luxemburg, Letzeburg. This name appears also on a 20 franc note, printed by Waterloo Bros. in London in 1943 and issued for the Allied Invasion Armies during the occupation of Luxemburg.

SALVADOR. The new bronze one centavo dated 1942 is replacing the nickel coin of the same value. The design is similar to the 1940 issue. The obverse: Head of Morazan to left. Reverse: Value in wreath.

SLOVAKIA. From a Slovakian labor battalion captured on the western front by one of our officers of the 7th U. S. Army, have come to our attention two new pieces of Slovakia. One is the 50 halierov in nickel dated 1941. Obverse, arms, reverse plow and value. The planchet is the same size as the Czechoslovakian 20 halierov dated 1938. The second one a 20 halierov 1942 in aluminum. It is the same design and size as the bronze coin of 1940 and gives a view of Neitra on the reverse and arms on the obverse.

THE EDITOR'S CORNER

What To Collect

Much time and money can be saved if the beginner gives careful consideration to his likes and dislikes before selecting his particular field. The experienced collector usually advises careful consideration of the opinion of others, a study of the various fields of collecting, a survey of the coin market and the reading of outstanding numismatic literature. If you were to take such advice literally you would be quite well along in years before completing such a task, too far along perhaps to start a coin collection.

In the beginning, it is not wise to take your avocation too seriously. Proceed carefully but without fear. Make numismatics an escape from your worries, not an addition to them. "What to Collect" is not a difficult matter to solve.

It is not logical that an artistically inclined person should collect barbaric coins, or that a person interested in ancient history should spend his time trying to complete a long, dull series of modern coins. Do not be alarmed by the pompous phrase "artistically inclined." If your eye is pleased with things of natural beauty, with bold, handsome designs and with skilled workmanship, you will like artistic coins. The term "interested in ancient history" has no deep implication either. You need know nothing about it. If you are at all curious about such names as Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, Marc Antony, Nero, Marcus Aurelius or Constantine the Great, you will learn ancient history without effort. If these famous names leave you cold, it is just as well to consider some other series closer to your interests.

For Collectors of Paper Money

James J. Curto has promised an article on "The Restoration and Preservation of Paper Money." This should be a real aid to those who have encountered difficulty along this line.

A Numismatic Encyclopedia

The proposal of the Oregon Numismatic Society that the A. N. A. sponsor the publication of a Universal Numismatic Encyclopedia has been the subject of much discussion. We have yet to hear any objections on the grounds that it is not needed, for even the advanced specialist agrees that it would fill a long felt need.

Those who lack enthusiasm for the project feel that it is too ambitious an undertaking. Some feel that the compilation and editing would require an enormous amount of work and that the cost of printing would deplete the treasury of the A. N. A. before such a work was one-tenth finished.

Without discussing the merits or either side of the question, we would like to commend the Oregon Numismatic Society on the originality and boldness of the proposal. It has done much good. It may be a long time before we have a U. N. E., but we now have a concrete idea to work on.

Proposed the Peace Dollar

The Peace Dollar, which was designed by Anthony de Francisci, and first coined in 1921, was proposed by Farran Zerbe. The A. N. A. backed the proposal and was largely responsible for the coin being issued. None has been coined since 1935.

Split-Infinitives Worry Professor

A correspondent who signs himself "Professor of English," is indignant over the publication of "Suggestions to Contributors" in the March issue. In particular, he points out that the split-infinitive was not even mentioned and that collective nouns "most frequently misused by students," ought to have been given "prominent mention."

(And another matter we forgot to mention, Professor, is that of anonymous letters—or do you consider them in good taste?—Editor).

Reports of Club Meetings Of Real Importance

The response of club secretaries to the "Suggestions to Contributors," which appeared in the March issue, is most heartening. Many of them have made a real effort to prepare their meeting reports in a manner that requires little if any editing. This is more important than it appears. Aside from relieving the editor of an enormous amount of last-minute rewriting and typing, an original report is always more interesting than one that has been blue-pencilled to death.

There are readers who care nothing for reports of club meetings, and would eliminate them entirely. We believe that reports occupy an important place in the interests of the majority and do much to promote a real fellowship among members even though they live in widely separated communities.

As an ex-club-secretary we are well acquainted with the work the office involves. The writing up of exhibits is always a tedious task and one in which the secretary is most apt to encounter difficulty. In an effort to avoid this it is a good plan to give each exhibitor a slip of paper and have him describe his own exhibit. This system is used by the secretaries of many clubs and does much to ease the task of writing reports.

Important Work Underway

Loyd B. Gettys, 902 First National Bank Bldg., Davenport, Iowa, is doing some research work on "The Designers of United States Notes." Collectors having source material are urgently requested to send it along to Mr. Gettys. This is a long neglected numismatic subject and we can look forward to the result of Mr. Gettys' research work with more than ordinary expectations.

100 Years Ago—

Political campaign tokens were much sought after by collectors. If one of the old-timers could return to the earth long enough to meet the average collector of today he would wonder at the lack of interest shown in the series. What is more he would be alarmed at the way the bottom had dropped out of the market for that once popular item.

He would advise those who are bored with "penny-boards" and those who are frantic because they do not own a 1932 D quarter-dollar, to ask the A. N. A. Librarian Ted Hammer for a loan of the book Hard Times Tokens, by Lyman H. Low, and The Standard Catalogue of U. S. Coins, by Wayte Raymond, 1942 Edition. It contains an illustrated and priced list of such tokens.

The old-timer would be rightly surprised for the field of political tokens, once so deservedly popular, is now strangely neglected. Get the books mentioned and ask your favorite dealer to send you a selection of tokens on approval.

You are in for a numismatic treat or the editor misses his guess.

Plans a Study of Dimes Issued from 1796 to 1944

Henry Evanson, 113 Rock Street, Norwood, Mass., writes that he contemplates writing a treatise on United States dimes. Having specialized in them for over 15 years, Mr. Evanson has a fine collection, yet he would need the co-operation of other dime collectors in order to treat the subject in a comprehensive manner.

It is hoped that members having fairly complete collections or unusual varieties of dimes will afford Mr. Evanson an opportunity to study them.

Few Medals Being Issued

For the last several years the production of medallic art has been almost at a standstill. This is due entirely to the stringent regulations placed on the use of metal, by the countries involved in the war. Medals, aside from those awarded to our soldiers, are not a necessity. Yet this is little consolation to the medal collector who has nothing in his cabinet related to contemporary history. This condition is regrettable. It is understandable only when we realize the terrible responsibility resting on the shoulders of those who are conducting the war.

NOTES OF THE TRADE

The Celina Coin Co., (T. & C. Brandts), Celina, Ohio, have issued a price list of rare gold coins. It offers many unusual pieces and advanced collectors will find it of real interest.

A. French, 20 State St., Troy, New York, held a mail sale on April 14th. The 581 lots included a decent selection of U. S. minor coins, as well as some fine gold pieces.

On April 13th, M. H. Bolender, 1126 Benson Blvd., Freeport, Illinois, conducted a mail sale of some 1700 lots. Included were the collections of Lt. Col. Grover R. Smith, and P. E. Wickes. Of special interest was a fine listing of U. S. large size notes.

The Tatham Stamp & Coin Co., reports a highly successful public sale held April 27th and 28th, at the Hotel Charles, Springfield, Mass.

A mail sale of 2043 lots was conducted by Walter F. Webb, 202 Westminster Road, Rochester 7, N. Y., on April 14th. Included was an interesting collection of foreign and ancient gold and silver coins. Mr. Webb's descriptions are concise and easy to read.

Stack's of 12 West 46th St., New York City 19, will conduct the sale of the George H. Hall collection on May 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19. We have seen proof of the catalogue, which is profusely illustrated and offers one of the finest collections of U. S. coins ever formed. A charge of $1 is being made for the Catalogue and List of Prices Realized.

D. O. Hughes, 257 Chestnut Ave., Bogota, N. J., reports the recent acquisition of several small collections containing many desirable U. S. coins. He invites your want-list.

A price list of 1200 different German notgeld tokens in metal and porcelain, issued 1914 to 1921, has been put out by Frank J. Katen of the Milford Coin and Stamp Co., 486 State Street, New Haven 10, Conn. As far as we know, this is the first comprehensive price list of such pieces ever published in this country and Mr. Katen is to be complimented on his industry and patience. The issue is limited. Interested collectors should write at once, enclosing cost of postage.

Wayte Raymond of New York City has announced that the second edition of Coins of The World will be ready for distribution sometime this month. The first edition, published in 1938, has been out of print for several years and collectors and dealers alike will welcome this revised edition. It may be ordered from any dealer at $3.50, plus postage.

L. W. Hoffecker, past president of the A. N. A., recently visited Mexico to buy up a few coin collections. He reports that fine numismatic material is as scarce south of the border as it is here.

The Numismatic Gallery (Messrs. Kosoff and Kreisberg) had an exhibit at the National Antiques Show held March 12 to 18 at Madison Square Garden, New York. The show had an attendance of over 100,000 and Mr. Kosoff reports highly satisfactory results.

W. C. Saunders, 5 Harding Place, New Haven, Conn., has sent us his list of Numismatic Publications for Sale. It will interest collectors who need odd copies of THE NUMISMATIST and other numismatic magazines. Mr. Saunders carries a fine stock of "back numbers" and can usually supply what you need. Send postage for a copy of his list.

FROM THE DESK OF THE GENERAL SECRETARY

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP

Applications are now being received with dues payments of $1.50 for last half of the year, with membership effective from July. It must be clearly understood that the subscription to THE NUMISMATIST also starts in July, and if previous copies are desired an additional remittance at the rate of 25c for each copy is required. Subscription may start with any issue after January. The January issue can no longer be supplied.

MEMBERSHIP DIRECTORIES

A copy of the Membership Directory is mailed to each member as new editions are published and to each new member on the date the membership becomes effective. Additional copies may be obtained but at a cost of $1.00 each.

REINSTATEMENTS

Members who are suspended for non-payment of dues beyond March 15 are automatically reinstated (unless charges are pending) upon receipt of the payment, and such reinstatements are not published. If membership has lapsed either through suspension or resignation for more than one year, an additional fee of $1 for each of the years during which the membership was lapsed is required in addition to the full dues for the current year. THE NUMISMATIST is not furnished, for those years during which the membership was lapsed. If this period exceeds two or three years it is advisable to make a new application and receive a new membership number. This does not apply to those on the Inactive List who may be reinstated on request and payment of dues for the current year only.

PROPER ROUTING OF MAIL

Matters pertaining to advertising in THE NUMISMATIST should be directed to the Business Manager. Club Reports, changes or additions to the Organizational Directory, and other matters pertaining to the reading matter in THE NUMISMATIST should be directed to the Editor. Changes of address, dues payments, requests for single copies or membership directories, non-member subscriptions, applications for membership, etc. should be directed to the General Secretary. Do not direct mail to the publication office in Federalsburg, Md. THE NUMISMATIST is printed there and the bulk mailing is made from there, but no single copies, back numbers, changes of address, or any replies to membership or subscriber mail are made from there. Misdirected mail is forwarded but that delays it.

Mail directed to a post office box number should not be sent Special Delivery. It does not speed its delivery and just wastes the extra postage. Air mail for urgent communications is advisable.

NOMINATIONS

Elsewhere in this issue appears a notice to the effect that nominations for officers and members of the Board of Governors for the next year are now in order. They should be sent to the General Secretary and must be received before July 16. They will not be acknowledged but a full report of all nominations received will appear in the June, July and August issues. The nominee will be advised of his nomination and a prompt reply in writing is required. It is desirable that the nomination be either accepted or declined immediately, and that the status "Open" be not used. Nominations which remain "Open" until the last minute and are then declined prevent the nominator from making a second nomination for that office. Nominations will be accepted from all classes of membership but persons nominated must be regular members or life members. Junior members, associate members and honorary members (except those who are also regular or life members) are not eligible for office. The nomination and election of the officers who administrate the business affairs of the Association are not only important privileges of your membership but are duties as well, and your careful attention to these details is respectfully requested.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS

Keeping the mailing list of THE NUMISMATIST up to date is the most difficult task of your General Secretary. Each month there are more than 300 changes to be made. Each month 30 to 50 copies of THE NUMISMATIST are returned by the Post Office as undeliverable. When a copy is thus returned the person to whom it was directed is removed from the mailing list unless and until a new address is furnished. Please notify the General Secretary of any change in address and allow sufficient time for correction of the mailing list. When you receive your next copy, please examine the envelope in which it was mailed. If your name and address do not appear there exactly as they should, cut out the part bearing the name and address, mark on it the corrections, and send to the General Secretary. Also be sure that your postal zone number is included if you have one. Your cooperation on this is essential if you want the best possible service.

General Secretary.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space. Because of changing the deadline from the 15th to the 10th of the month a number of club reports arrived too late to be published in the April edition. These we have included in this issue and thus we have more than one report on some clubs. Hereafter, secretaries are requested to send in their reports promptly as it is not possible to publish accumulations of reports.

BUFFALO NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The 400th meeting was celebrateed March 12th, by a dinner at the Forty and Eight Club, 891 Delaware Avenue. The dinner was at 8:30 followed by the meeting with special events for the occasion. President Albert Gullian presided with 15 members present and two guests.

Mr. Williams made a vote of thanks to Dr. Wild for planning and making the arrangements for this 400th Meeting; seconded by Dr. LeWin.

Dr. Wild made the motion that Robert Lloyd be made a Life Member for his active work since the founding of the Club in 1927; seconded by Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Davenport gave a most interesting talk on the metals of The Society of Medalists of the Architectural League, 115 East 40th St., New York City. Two of the most outstanding designs are struck each year. The first issue was of 1930 and the present issue of 1944 is the '30 issue. These metals are of large size, consisting of various shades of color treatment of mostly copper alloy. These metals represent the works of this country's most outstanding artists and designers. It is most significant that the work of these artists is extended into the designing of the commemorative coins. The characters designed represent the theme or story rather than the use of lettering, mottoes, or symbols used on coins. This leaves the story to the imaginative powers of the artist and can be appreciated by the varied designs. Some have low relief while others have extremely high relief. In striking those of high relief metals. they have to be struck twice, the first strike with a "forming die" and the second with the "finishing die." These medals represent the artist's expression of thought and can be classified into the following fields: classical, symbolical, American, animals, and special, by means of the type of design, type of drawing, and type of relief. This interesting talk was accompanied by the display of 20 medals

Mr. Lloyd gave the history of the Club, stating that the first meeting was in the Spring of 1927, and was held for a time at John Aldred Music Shop, 691 Main Street. After they had gathered twelve to fourteen interested coin collectors they expanded to the Central Y. M. C. A., and have continued to hold their meetings there to this date. In celebrating this 400th Meeting, Mr. Lloyd told of the gradual growth and problems that they had to face, similar to all clubs, stating that the first hundred meetings were the hardest. There has been as high as 60 members on the roll and as many as 40 active members. In 1932 at the 100th Meeting, the first tokens were struck, originated by the late Mr. Hopkins, and later, the tokens back to the founding were struck, one token for each year, bearing the names of the officers for each year.

Mr. Lloyd illustrated how the interest in coins has increased and read prices for coins from a 1932 catalog, which are as follows: 1877 proof set sold for $11.00; 1858-1862 cent set unc. at 22c each; 1912-P. D. S. nickels unc. at 18c each; 1877 proof nickel $4.25; 1877 proof three cent $4.10; 1877 proof cent $1.90, and 1916 standing Liberty quarter $2.10.

As a closing thought and looking ahead to another one hundred meetings, Mr. Lloyd left for our consideration two outstanding improvements for our continued growth—first: a planned program; second: better quarters for the meetings.

EXHIBITS: Mr. Williams: Bryan Dollar by Gorham 1900.

Dr. Wild: $5 paper notes seriees 58, $5 series 69, $10 series 49; $1 series 21; $1 series 1899.

Mr. Lloyd: 1856 double eagle unc.; 1907 double eagle unc.; 1913-s quarter unc.; 1916-d dime unc.; 1867 nickel with rays, unc.

Mr. Taylor: Large collection of pattern coins.

—SIGEL F. HEPP, Secretary.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—Twenty-five members and guests were in attendance at the 205th meeting held April 3. Among other matters of business, mention was made of the observance of National Coin Week; also of an exhibit of Japanese coins on display at the offices of the Bureau of Water and Power.

Announcement was also made of the annual Hobby Show to be held this month by the Orange County Coin Club and which will be attended by several members of the California Coin Club.

The speaker of the evening was Major Wallin, who for many years was in governmental service at Washington, D. C. Major Wallin's experiences in the capital city were listened to with great interest, and in a delightful manner the speaker told of his acquaintance with four presidents, namely, Taft, Wilson, Coolidge and Harding. President Taft was famous for his smiling countenance; Wilson was a lover of the theatre; Coolidge was the man of silence, and Harding the human and approachable president. The history and geography of the city of Washington was mentioned, the martyrdom of President Lincoln, the building of the Washington monument, and many other intriguing important facts were touched upon. Attention was called to the fact that although all the currency is printed in Washington, none of the coined money is made there.

Mr. Budd gave an interesting account of his recent visit to Nevada where he conferred with the Governor at Carson City.

—EARLE K. STANTON, Secretary.

CANTON COIN CLUB—The 114th meeting was held March 13th at the Y. M. C. A., C. T. Bolus presiding. Eight members and one guest were present.

Fifteen minutes later the meek president and his blushing bride tip-toed into the clubhouse.

"I'm sorry I'm late," chirped the bridegroom, "but the little lady and I were married yesterday and since then we have been 'uncirculated'."

While no 1856 cents or 1804 dollars were given to President Efker, he and his charming bride were given a glad hand by the members.

It is gratifying to report that interest continues to grow in our club. We took in three new members at this meeting including a young captain of the Army Air Force.

More and more of our members are bringing displays of their particular types of coin collections to our meetings. This, I believe, is most important because it gives other collectors ideas and chases unusual collections out into the open so all may see.

Coins hidden away in bank vaults or dresser drawers do not give much pleasure to any one; but coins attractively arranged and displayed will help make new coin collectors.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB—The regular monthly meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A., Cumberland, Maryland on March 21, with ten members and four guests present. The meeting was called to order by President Funkhouser.

Note was taken of the death of our beloved honorary member, Frank Lee Carl. Remarks were made by Cessna and Wilson and others calling attention to the fact that Mr. Carl was one of our most loyal members, and had contributed much to the success of our club. President Funkhouser called on all members to stand for a minute in reverence to Mr. Carl's memory. The Secretary was instructed to send flowers.

This was "favorite coin" night, and the various members submitted the following coins with appropriate talks on their special merits and interests.

W. L. Wilson: 1856 small cent.

A. Fuller: 1909-S V.D.B. cent.

C. Morris: English sovereign which he inherited at birth, and which was the nucleus and cause of his collection.

H. Cessna: Greek stater, being the first silver coin struck on the continent of Europe; also his first coin cabinet, which was made by his father.

B. Charles: Duplicate of a famous and large-size Chinese coin.

L. Hutter: 1864 cent with L. on ribbon.

A. Hutter: Three notes from the Savings Bank of Connersville, Indiana dated 1855.

M. L. Johnson: Justinian gold coin issued 527-540 A. D.

B. Norris: Bank note issued by predecessor of the bank in which he now works.

—M. L. JOHNSON, Secretary.

DISTRICT SECRETARY PEREZ SURVIVES PRISON CAMP

The following letter has been received from District Secretary Gilbert S. Perez, of Manila, P. I. It is addressed to Frank G. Duffield, who was editor of THE NUMISMATIST at the time of the Japanese invasion of the Philippine Islands, and has been forwarded for publication by Mr. Duffield.

Editor, THE NUMISMATIST
Dear Mr. Duffield:

Your District Secretary is still alive, but if the boys had not come in on February 3rd he would not be writing this now. We were dying at the rate of three or four a day from malnutrition, a polite word for starvation. Besides, the Japs intended to liquidate us all on the 6th.

After three years of systematic looting on the part of Jap soldiers and officers, what was left of the big collections here went up in smoke since February third in the fires started by the fanatical and desperate garrison.

I had divided my collection of coins among six of my Filipino collector friends, and I regret to state that not only were they all lost, but in every case lives were also sacrificed. Dr. Banting, whose collection of Philippine coins was only excelled by my own, lost both his collection and mine, and in addition, his wife, two sons and a daughter were killed. Another friend, Mr. Purissima, of the Trade School, who had my stamps, lost all by fire and he and two sons were murdered by Japanese machine gunners. My housekeeper, who had my clothes and some of my collection of prints was handgrenaded when she tried to escape from her burning home, which was set afire by the Japs. The home of another friend, where I had my numismatic library and my antique furniture, was burned to the ground and he is still among the missing.

My apartment, which still had a few of my things, was dynamited and over 200 civilians killed there.

I do not think that my Philippine collection can be duplicated as it was the work of over two decades, but I have already started on a new collection, using as a nucleus a rare 1728 Barilla which all of us have been trying to locate for years and which I luckily found in the internee garden at St. Tomas when I was digging a ditch. It was mentioned and described in Blair and Robinson, but none of us had seen it or records of it in catalogues and lists.

The A. N. S. photographed my collection of countermarked coins of the P. I. (about 250 different) but that collection is gone.

The surviving P. I. collectors are not downhearted and we are beginning again. We shall build better collections and a greater Philippine nation. Already we are making our list of wants to send out as soon as postal facilities are resumed. We will also get back numbers of THE NUMISMATIST, as the Japs have not even spared our national library.

Starvation diet reduced my 255 pounds overweight to 139 pounds, and the swollen ankles of beri beri were rapidly developing when the gallant boys of the 1st Cavalry made their sensational entry into our prison gates.

God bless them and America, and best wishes to numismatic friends.

Sincerely,

GILBERT S. PEREZ

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 10th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Business Manager (see above). Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

Gentlemen:

I want to thank you for your check of $2000.00 paid me for my remaining stamps which were delivered only today. This is only one of the several very satisfactory transactions I have had with you in the past and it is very gratifying to do business with a concern that is so prompt in paying and so fair in its offer. I feel that I would probably not have gotten as much elsewhere and as I have been a collector and dealer for many years I know the stamp market thoroughly.

Wishing you continued success in your large and rapidly growing business, I remain

Very truly yours, B. A. Oppenheimer.

Do You Have ANY ROLLS FOR SALE? If so, please list as to denomination, date and mint mark, with price per roll. If the entire lot is less than $10,000 I will buy and pay you cash immediately.

The fact that I have one of the best stocks of rolls to be found with any dealer in the country is no indication I will not buy more of the same thing. Try me when you want to sell for cash, or exchange rolls unc. coins for other unc. rolls. I trade even, based on my selling prices when I can use the rolls you have to offer.

I do not sell single coins that I sell in rolls, so there is no chance of the select coins having been picked out and the average left for the collector of rolls.

My stock changes every day, if I do not have the coins you need today, they may come in tomorrow.

Orders under $5.00 add postage. All items sent insured.

If you buy moderately priced coins of the better class

I have just purchased a collection of U. S. coins, strong in specimens in very nice condition: Half Dollars in early dates, a choice lot of extremely fine Half Cents, a good lot (no rarities) of desirable early large Cents.

Plenty of 2, 3, and 5 Cents (nickel), Half Dimes, and many eagle and Indian head Cents—all good coins, at prices that will enable you to purchase them.

This ad will not interest scalpers who may think I am a beginner and do not know values. Let me say that I started my first collection of coins in 1885; I attended all the coin auctions in Chicago for many years, and have broken up a number of valuable collections.

COINS OF THE WORLD

Second Edition

Collectors will welcome the second edition of this indispensable reference work on modern coins. The first edition (1938) has been out of print for the past three years, and a great many new collectors have never been able to obtain a copy. Those who own an original copy will find the second edition revised, corrected, and brought up to date with many new listings and illustrations. Values have been adjusted to the present day market.

COINS OF THE WORLD is a compilation of numismatic knowledge gathered over a long period of years, and the original publication of this work gave collectors the first authoritative reference on modern coins. Outstanding authorities, collectors, and dealers have contributed their knowledge to the production of this book, making it as nearly complete and correct as possible.

Approximately 4,000 coins are listed and described, with their values given, and nearly 1,500 halftone illustrations show the types of all issues.

FIFTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

PAPER MONEY RESTORATION AND PRESERVATION

By J. J. CURTO

Just about every collector of paper money, obsolete bank bills, scrip et cetera, has had the experience of finding some rare item he wanted, but in a condition so soiled, stained or worn, as to make him cringe at the thought of adding it to his collection, ashamed to exhibit it if he did and actually take little or no pride in its possession.

Collectors of manuscripts and documents on the other hand, will acquire items in similar or even worse condition and take great interest and delight in their restoration and preservation, besides pride in ownership.

It is along this line, to acquaint the collector of numismatic paper items with: 1, The dangers of deterioration confronting their specimens, plus a few emphatic don'ts, and 2, The necessity of assuming a reasonable attitude in respect to the preservation and repair of rare items worn or new by knowing something about preservation, its advantages and disadvantages, that this article is intended.

DANGERS

While we all know and realize the danger of careless handling, little has been written on the less obvious hazards of internal origin, the important causes of paper deterioration and the available methods of minimizing them together with details described so that interested persons can guard against them without professional assistance.

Increased deterioration or natural aging is accelerated by the presence of one or more of the following factors: light, heat, dryness, dampness, acidity, the presence of sulphur dioxide or ozone in the air, dust, dirt, prespiration, and the nature of encasement.

Light, we realize, has a tendency to either bleach or yellow a paper, depending on its ingredients, and to cause embrittlement of the fibers of the paper. We have all seen examples of this, at one time or another, in paper items in store windows. Sunlight and artificial sources of light, high in ultraviolet rays are especially destructive. Paper also ages rapidly becoming yellow and brittle when exposed to high temperatures, even for a short period. The newspaper left on the radiator is a common example. Temperatures of 65-75 degrees Fahrenheit are ideal to retard aging according to the best authorities on this subject.

If kept in a dry place for indefinite periods, paper will dry out and become weak and brittle and if in a damp place for even a short period, growth of mould is encouraged. A free circulation of air is essential for preservation.

The presence of ozone in the atmosphere is detrimental in that it accelerates oxidization. Sulphur dioxide on the other hand, absorbed readily by the paper fibres, combines with the oxygen and moisture in the air to form sulphuric acid which attacks and destroys fibrous structure. Dust and perspiration stains leave an acid residue which acts similarly. It is especially necessary to guard against this last nemesis, acidity, as it is most highly destructive if allowed to remain. In order to guard against it, it is obviously necessary to use some non injurious method of neutralizing the acid. This is best accomplished by; 1. Placing the item in a bath of 15% solution of calcium hydroxide for about 20 minutes to effectively neutralize the acid, 2. By then placing it in a 20% solution of calcium bicarbonate, to carbonate the excess hydroxide and precipitate calcium carbonate into the fibers of the paper to act as a buffer agent against the absorption of acid at a later time, 3. To let dry thoroughly.

A few emphatic don'ts" are in order at this time to briefly conclude this phase on dangers.

1. Do not store in celluloid envelopes under any circumstances or use celluloid in place of glass in mounting. Celluloid deteriorates slowly giving off fumes of nitric acid which are absorbed by the paper causing early destruction. Sheets kept in celluloid envelopes have gone to pieces entirely, the fibrous structures completely breaking down in a relatively short time.
2. Do not use rubber bands or clips when storing away. Rubber bands deteriorate and leave a brown stain and clips corrode and leave a rust stain, both of which are very hard to remove.
3. Do not use scotch tape. The residue left is extremely sticky and runs out at the edges. It is difficult to remove even with recommended solvents.

To summarize, it may be concluded that while ideal conditions are impossible for most of us, we can keep our collections well housed in albums, protected from light and in a location in our home where temperatures and humidity are most constant and least affected by radiators, flues, heaters, dust, water vapors, excessive dampness, and fumes and safe from soiled hands and careless rummagers.

RESTORATION AND PRESERVATION

It may be generally stated that any piece of paper money that can be handled at all can be reinforced and restored to a state which again will withstand normal handling and present a pleasing appearance.

The methods advocated by the National Archives, Washington, D. C. and used in the repair and preservation of their manuscripts and documents, are very well adapted to paper money items.

The process of restoration may be divided into these general steps, 1. Cleaning and preservation, 2. Flattening, 3. Reinforcement.

Cleaning is generally a matter of choosing the proper solvent to remove stains and the following will serve as a guide for the removal of stains most commonly found:

1. Pencil—Art gum.
2. Dust and dirt—Art gum.
3. Adhesive tape—Carbon tetrachloride or benzene.
4. Oil—Carbon tetrachloride or benzene.
5. Lacquer—Acetone.
6. Paste—Water.

Paper money disfigured with ink, rust stains or rubber stains is better left alone, as it is difficult to select the proper treatment for each case and generally more damage than good results.

The cleaning operation should be carried out in a well ventilated room, away from any open flame.

When cleaning with art gum, the strokes should be light and from the center outward in one direction only, to avoid damage to edges.

Luke warm distilled water is preferable when washing with water to remove acids, pastes and glues. The residues should be carefully sponged away with absorbent cotton and the item then well rinsed in clear water.

Before using any solvent it is well to test the fastness of the ink to that particular solvent to make certain that it it will not run or smear. This is easily done by touching a tiny drop of the solvent to a point along an ink line, let stand for a few minutes and blot with clean blotter. If color is absorbed by the blotter, beware!

In using a solvent, the item should be laid face down on a clean blotter and the selected solvent sponged on from the back with clean absorbent cotton. This eliminates the risk of spreading the stain as the solvent and dirt is absorbed by the blotter. Move to a clean part of the blotter and repeat as necessary.

Items treated with a solvent generally dry very quickly but when treated with water, it is best to dry with blotters as much as possible and then run through a mangle or press out with a hand iron, just moderately hot.

In drying and pressing with a hand iron use a hard flat surface cushioned with a white blotter to prevent breaks in the paper from the edge of the iron, and also protect the surface from direct contact with the iron by a damp white paper.

Flattening, which is the removal of folds, wrinkles, and curls, is accomplished by this method. While both cleaning and flattening will not restore the item to a new condition, a marked improvement will result which with experience and care, will be even more pronounced.

To eliminate folds or wrinkles to a marked extent, it is unnecessary to soak in water but only to dampen. Paper absorbs moisture readily so this is easily accomplished by placing between wet blotters or by suspending above water in a covered container, etc.

When thoroughly dampened, press either with a mangle or as previously described with a hand iron.

The last step, reinforcing torn or brittle paper, may be done in a number of ways, each of which has both limitations and advantages. Mounting, we all know about, and since it is generally frowned upon, we forego any further discussion. Crepeline, a thin silk gauze applied with a transparent paste or glue or egg white, has been accepted for many years here and abroad as a satisfactory method of reinforcement. The item treated so is stiffened, strengthened, and rendered extremely resistant to the wear of use. While it does this, it does not protect against deterioration or aging. The paste is attractive to insects and the gauze eventually rots and is not recommended. Transparent tissue used similarly, while also strengthening the paper, does not add anything to its permanence and to some extent obscures the ink and increases considerably the thickness and stiffness of the paper. Thus it is not completely satisfactory.

The method of restoration and preservation now generally accepted as most stable and lasting is by first removing the acidity from the item and then sealing it between sheets of plastic foil. This relatively new transparent cellulose foil with adhesive, made extremely thin and flexible, appears to be ideally suited for the repair and strengthening of fragile and damaged paper money items.

The material is perfectly clear, colorless, thin and strong and has a high degree of permanence. A satin surface resists dirt and stains and is almost impervious to air and moisture. The foil has a special adhesive of a highly plasticized resin base, which is protected by a paper sheeting. The paper sheeting is first removed and the foil laid against the item to be covered. The foil is carefully smoothed down and rubbed on with the fingers which creates enough heat to melt the adhesive adhering the foil to the item. The adhesive does not deteriorate or darken appreciably on exposure to light or heat, and the satin finish gives it a beautiful sheen.

There are several commercial kinds of this type of sheeting such as Celluseal, Clearseal, Dulseal, and Cometex differing mostly in the surface finish from glossy to a dull sheen. Dulseal is recommended. It is necessary to cover both sides of the item and advisable, in order to secure a complete seal to leave about a 1/16 or 1/32 inch margin around the edge where the 2 foils join. If only one side is coated the sheet will curl more or less as the humidity of the air increases or decreases.

The only disadvantage of this method is that the applied sheeting increases the thickness, but to a much less degree than most other like materials.

By far the best and most permanent method of reinforcing and preserving is the lamination process. In this method, after treatment for acidity and curling, a protective foil without adhesive is added by melting the foil into the paper by heat and pressure alone. The cost of the initial equipment needed, however, is high and beyond the reach of most of us.

The most recent and improved machine, used in the Barrow Method simplifies to a great extent the necessary equipment.

In the Barrow Method, the item is coated on both sides with a solution of cellulose acetate, then covered with a thin tissue and run thru an electric roller which fuses the tissue directly into the item. Small holes can be filled with a pulp compound, previous to treatment, and the result is astonishing!

The Burton Historical Library in Detroit is contemplating purchasing a machine and should the purchase be consummated, intend to solicit work of this nature to be done for a small fee.

It would be an interesting experiment for collectors to have a specimen so treated and draw their own conclusions on the appearance and the advisability and value of paper items thus preserved.

In this article, I have refrained from commenting or incorporating anything in regard to cellophane or similar envelopes and holders because of my limited knowledge of them.

No doubt, there are holders manufactured with materials entirely devoid of destructive ingredients or properties, and conducive to preservation for such purposes as ours. Also no doubt, there are holders manufactured with injurious or destructive properties, for purposes other than ours.

I, for one, cannot tell one from another. For the most part they look alike, feel alike and have the same good things said about them, made especially for whatever purpose wanted!

Along this line, in conjunction with the physical preservation of records and the use of proper containers and the proper disposition of the materials in the containers, the Division of Information and Publications, National Archives, Washington, D. C. has this to say, quote, "Celluloid, cellophane, pliofilm and vinylite resin sheeting and groundwood papers or fiberboard are not permanent. These materials will discolor and embrittle papers in contact with them and must therefore be avoided." Bulletin #5 P. 48.

To avoid further confusion and doubt, I suggest that the manufacturers of such holders be requested for the collectors benefit, to issue statements regarding the safeness and the preservative qualities of their products. Also, that manufacturers stamp their trademark on such holders together with a distinguishing code mark, properly advertised if such holders are also made for other purposes.

THE EARLY HISTORY OF GREENBACKS

"Texts of scripture have often been inscribed upon coins. One of the most remarkable is on a copper coin issued by the Papal government, on which are the words, "VAE VOBIS DIVITIBVS—('Woe to you who are rich!') When the greenbacks were first issued by the United States, Mr. Chase, then Secretary of the Treasury, consulted, among others, the president of one of the Philadelphia banks in regard to placing a motto upon them—such, for example, as has since been impressed upon the five cent pieces—"In God we trust." After mentioning several scriptural texts that had occurred to him, the Secretary asked our banker's opinion. "Perhaps," was the reply, "the most appropriate would be; 'Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee!'" The project was abandoned."—Lippincott's Magazine, November, 1869.

No. 3 A shows on its obverse a three-story building. On top a fourth-story attic is added with four dormer windows. Above the roof rises an octagon-shaped tower surrounded by a balustrade and surmounted by a cupola ending in a cross. On the front side of the building at the level of the main floor an empty space is visible. It was probably designated in the draft for a gate or entrance door which is, however, missing. The building is surrounded by a fence. In the lowest part of the obverse, a large asterisk is placed between two smaller ones. The top space contains the inscription: THE OLD PROVOOST, N. Y. The reverse has the following legend arranged in five lines A/ BRITISH/ BRISON/ DURING THE/ REVOLUTION. The third word reads *B*rison, and not Prison. This inscription is placed within the chain of shackles in a wreath-like arrangement. The endings converge but do not meet, in the lower part of the obverse. Between the open ends one reads: NO. 1, and underneath in smaller letters parallel to the rim: AUG. B. SAGE'S HISTORICAL TOKENS.

No. 3B

The Old Provoost, New York
(Revised Edition)

No. 3 B, of the same type and make looking almost identical with, but differing in details from No. 3 A, must be considered as a "revised edition" of the latter. The obverse is identical with that of No. 3 A with only one deviation: No. 3 B has an entrance door instead of the empty space in the front wall of the building. The reverse shows more divergencies. The wording and arrangement of the main inscription are identical with that of No. 3 A. But the mistake in the word PRISON is here corrected, the B having been replaced by a P. In 3 B the surrounding open chain occupies only the upper half of the margin, while the title of the token series takes its place in the corresponding space in the lower half: "AUG. B. SAGE'S HISTORICAL TOKENS." The half-circles of the chain in the upper part and of the series title in the lower part thus form a kind of wreath surrounding the main inscription of five lines. The numeral, No. 1, appears here in the lower part and is separated from the last line of the inscription, REVOLUTION, by a small asterisk between two brief exergual lines. Asterisk and lines are missing in No. 3 A.

Both types of the token, 3 A as well as 3 B, have on the obverse below the left corner of the fence, the initial L, representing the name of the engraver, George H. Lovett, who is listed in the New York City Directory of 1859 as die-sinker at 131 Fulton Street. He executed all the Sage tokens and several very pretty Washington medals.

The medallic picture of the "Old Provoost" is undoubtedly based on Alexander J. Davis's (1803-1892) drawing that was engraved by Alexander Anderson (1775-1870) and reproduced in The New York Mirror of September 10, 1831, in John Pintard's article, "The Old Jail."

The site of this "modern bastille" was City Hall Park. It was built as the second jail, in succession, in the City of New York in 1757 and completed in 1759. In the revolutionary period it was memorable during the occupation of the City by the British forces, from 1776 to 1783, as a British military prison, known as "Provost" and later as "Martyr's Prison", still later as "Debtor's Prison". In 1830 it was reconstructed and fitted to receive public records, henceforth known as "Register's Office" or "Hall of Records". It was finally demolished in 1903 to make way for the Subway. Coins, buttons and human bones were found in the excavation. A tablet, erected in 1907, on a granite monument in the Park still marks the site of the "Old Provost."

This British military prison, under the superintendence of the ill-famed Captain Cunningham, Provost-Marshall—from whom it took its name—and his deputy, Sergeant Keefe, was the scene of great brutalities to American, or, in the language of the times, "rebel" prisoners during the Revolution. The Provost was destined, as John Pintard, the meritorious New York historian, tells us, for the more notorious rebels, civil, naval, and military. An admission into this prison was enough to appall the stoutest heart. On the second floor, called derisively "Congress Hall," prisoners of note were confined, citizens of distinction and many American officers, among them the famous Colonel Ethan Allen and Judge Fell, of Bergen county, New Jersey. Could these dumb walls speak, John Pintard exclaims, what scenes of anguish, what tales of agonizing woe, might they disclose. In his aforementioned article he gave a vivid account of the "Old Jail's" history well known to him from the personal reminiscences of many a distinguished prisoner still living in his day.

For naval "rebels" a similar function as that of the "Old Provost" for civil and military "rebels" was fulfilled by "prison-ships." On board of such vessels seamen were subjected to every possible hardship, to compel them to enter into the British service. As is well known, prison-ships were old vessels-of-war which had been condemned as unseaworthy, and unfit for store or hospital ships, and converted to this, the last use to which they could be applied. One of them has gained medallic interest, the "Old Jersey Prison Ship," which was included as No. 5 in A. B. Sage's series of "Historical Tokens." It is No. 4 in the present essay.

The Old Jersey Prison Ship

On the obverse the center of the medallic space is occupied by a representation of the Jersey as it is found on contemporary engravings. In the upper space one reads: THE OLD JERSEY. Underneath the ship an anchor is pictured between two skulls and bones. The engraver's initial L is missing on this token. The reverse shows the same arrangement as found in all Sage's prison tokens. The open shackles in half-circle in the upper space together with the half-circular designation AUG. B. SAGE'S HISTORICAL TOKENS surround the following legend: A/ BRITISH/ PRISON/ DURING THE/ REVOLUTION. The last word stands between two ornamental lines, the lower consisting of three big stars flanked on each side by a group of three small stars. Underneath one reads: No. 5.

The prison-ship Jersey built in 1736 was a fourth-rate ship of the line, mounting sixty guns, and carrying a crew of four hundred men. She was first used as one of the Channel fleet, later sent repeatedly to the Mediterranean Sea, to Spain, the West Indies, Newfoundland, and was active in several naval engagements. Already in 1747 the Jersey was laid up as evidently unfit for active service. On the renewal of hostilities with France, in 1756, she was refitted for service and again operated in the Mediterranean. She continued in active service until 1763 when she returned to England and was laid up once more. But in 1766 the Jersey was again commissioned and sailed for America in 1769. At that time, the active duty of that ship appears to have been brought to a close, since she remained out of commission from 1769 to 1776. In this year the Jersey was ordered, without armanent, to New York as a hospital-ship. In the latter part of the year 1781 she was fitted as a prison-ship and was used for that purpose during the remainder of the Revolutionary War. "She remained until the termination of the British authority in New York, when she was abandoned to the fate to which she was justly entitled, and was subsequently overwhelmed in the mud of the Wale bogt, where she remains to this day.'' An abundant literature of memoirs, letters, and lists of the prisoners tells the story of this prison-ship and its inmates by whose blood and sufferings the independence of the United States and the civil and religious privileges all of us can now enjoy, were achieved and purchased.

City Hall, Wall Street, New York

Two more of Sage's tokens have undertaken to memorialize other Civil War prisons. In design and execution they are similar to the tokens described here. No. 2 of Sage's ''Historical Token'' series pictures on its obverse a large building and has the following inscription: CITY HALL, WALL ST. N. Y. ERECTED IN 1700/ DEMOLISHED/ 1812. The obverse is very similar to that of No. 3 A, the uncorrected No. 1 of Sage's historical series, two skull and bones emblems having been added. A specimen is in the author's collection. I. N. Phelps Stokes' Iconography of Manhattan Island: 1498-1909 (Vol. VI, 1928, p. 539, s. v. City Hall) does not give, however, any evidence that this building was used as a British prison during the Revolution. It is different in the case of Livingston's Sugar-House, which was located on the South side of Liberty Street, New York City, adjoining the Dutch Church graveyard east of Nassau Street. This building was chosen by Mr. Sage as the subject of another token, No. 2 in his series ''Odds and Ends,'' executed in the very same manner as all the other tokens. Its obverse bears the inscription: OLD SUGAR HOUSE LIBERTY ST., N. Y. FOUNDED 1689/ DEMOLISHED 1840.

2. Historical Medals

In contrast to the aforementioned tokens, No. 6 and No. 7 are historical medals in the specific meaning of this term. No description or mention of either of them have come to this writer's attention.

The medal No. 6 measures forty-four millimetres in diameter and was struck in silver, bronze, and white metal. The American Numismatic Society has a specimen of each type in its collection. The obverse shows the ''Old Sugar House, Rose Street, N. Y.,'' a large five-story building, of which the front and side are visible. The space between the third and fourth story of the front is occupied by the number 1763, the year of its foundation, as the legend says. The space between the uppermost window on the gable front and the two lower windows has as inscription these letters: BRS. All windows are grated. Above the representation of the building one reads the following half-circular inscription: OLD SUGAR HOUSE ROSE ST. N. Y. Below, there appears this inscription: FOUNDED 1763 DEMOLISHED 1892. On the reverse the half-circular legend, A BRITISH PRISON, is placed above a small representation of the frontside of the gable. The latter shows the uppermost window in the highest corner, and underneath two more grated windows in a row. Above the left window the initial I, above the right one the initial S are visible. The lower part of the reverse is occupied by a key in horizontal situation being the ill-famed prison-key, underneath shackles are placed. The ornamental arrangement is in symmetrical correspondence with that in the upper part. In the middle of the space one reads in two lines: DURING THE/ REVOLUTION.

Old Sugar House, Rose Street, New York

The "Old Sugar House Rose Street, N. Y.," which stood on the corner of Rose and Deane Streets in New York City, was erected by Henry Cuyler, Jr., for his heir, Barnet Rynders Cuyler, probably in 1763. This date, which appears on the medal twice, is based on an authority "who had opportunity to observe." John Austin Stevens stated from personal recollection "that he saw the date 1769 high upon the brick wall in iron figures." The good engraving which is reproduced in James G. Wilson's Memorial History of the City of New York and may well have been the model for the engraver of the medal, shows the year 1767 on the wall of the building. As disputed as the date of its erection is also its use as prison during the Revolution. Wilson writes: "The date and the architect's initials are still to be seen on the side of the building, worked in wrought-iron characters, quaint and old. The Rhinelander family has owned the property since 1790, and much of the land around it has been in their possession much longer than that. When first erected the house was used as a sugar-house, but the great interest in the old building is in the memory of the use to which it was put in revolutionary times. The grated windows, the dungeon-like underground cellars, the general air of solidity and impregnability which impress the observer at first sight, bear out the assertion, which has become a creed among the neighbors, that during the Revolution the sugar-house was diverted from its legitimate use and turned into a British prison, where many an American patriot suffered not only imprisonment, but cruelties and starvation.'' This was written by Wilson in 1892 in commemoration of the then recent demolition of the structure. It seems that it was the very same occasion that caused the issuance of the medal, bearing the year of the building's demolition. Nevertheless, the use of the Rhinelander sugar-house as a prison during the Revolution was ''denied by Stevens and others, who have presented testimony to disprove it,'' as Stokes tells us. It seems almost impossible to decide the issue which, in turn, renders the historical justification of the issuance of the medal also doubtful.

No. 7

(Obverse)

No. 7 is the only medal known to the author referring to a military prison in the Civil War. No specimen of it is found in the museum of the American Numismatic Society. Nor do the catalogues, guide-books, and other pamphlets published by the Libby Prison War Museum Association in Chicago mention this medal that was probably issued by this very association. There is nothing about it in the files of the Chicago Historical Society. The Chicago newspapers of 1893 might have some article or note. But as they are not indexed it would take a great deal of time and labor to search through them.

The very heavy medal measures seventy-one millimetres in diameter. It is made of type metal, coated with a bluish-black lacquer. The obverse shows in its upper part the following legend: LIBBY PRISON; and in the lower part: WAR MUSEUM/ CHICAGO 1893. The space in the center is occupied by the picture of Libby Prison as it stood in its original place in Richmond, Virginia. Four prisoners' tents are visible in the foreground. Of course, no barbed wire and not even a fence are indicated. Instead sentries can be seen in front of the main building as well as of the tent-barracks, their number being six in toto. The picture is that well known from contemporary drawings or etchings.

(Reverse)

The reverse of the medal bears an extensive legend in eighteen lines. These are surrounded by a circular panel, showing on top clasped hands, at the bottom crossed sabres. The panel inscription reads: NO SECTIONALISM - 1861 - NO NORTH - NO SOUTH - 1865 - NO ANIMOSITY. The eighteen-line legend gives an historical account of Libby Prison and its transformation into the Chicago War Museum:

The history of Libby Prison as sad as it is romantic is too well known to be retold here even briefly. The New York Public Library has in its Americana collection no less than 222 items on Civil War prisoners and prisons. Many of them are devoted exclusively or partially to Libby Prison. The selected bibliography appended to this article will guide historically interested readers. With reference to the medal under consideration it is surprising that the famous commander of the prison, Major Thomas P. Turner, found no mention in its historical legend. He "was always a gentleman," as one of the former prisoners wrote in his memoirs.

In view of the fact that the medal is dedicated to the Libby Prison War Museum in Chicago, the history of the removal of the building from Richmond may be of interest. The following quotation is an excerpt from the pertinent introductory chapter in the now rare Catalogue and Program of the Libby Prison War Museum, first published probably in 1889 and later reprinted in the early nineteen-nineties:

> "The removal of Libby Prison from Richmond, Va. to Chicago was a project never before equaled in the history of building moving and one that will not be surpassed for years to come. This famous old structure as a Confederate prison is too well known to need the repetition of its history, and it is enough to state that it was the palace prison of the South, and during the late war it held more than 40,000 Union officers and enlisted men as prisoners. The project of removing Libby Prison to Chicago was thought of by a well-known Chicago business man who interested a syndicate of his business associates, and as a result they visited Richmond in the latter part of 1888 and took a thorough look over the ground . . . Mr. Louis M. Hallowell, a well-known and experienced Philadelphia architect, was engaged to work on the spot. He made all of the working plans for taking the structure apart, shipping it to the cars and rebuilding it in Chicago. The work commenced in December, 1888, and as the building was taken apart each board, beam, timber and block of stone was numbered and lettered in such a manner that there was not the least trouble about placing these > parts correctly together again in rebuilding . . . Sending to Chicago required 132 twenty-ton cars . . the re-erection of Libby Prison . . . was completed early in September. The Museum was opened to the public September 21, 1889. . . . It contains the most complete and valuable collections of Confederate relics in existence.''

The museum was situated on Wabash Avenue between 14th and 16th Streets. The enterprise proved a failure, however. The Libby Prison War Museum was torn down in 1899, according to information received from the Chicago Historical Society. The Coliseum was erected on the site. The prison wall on the Wabash Avenue is now incorporated in the facade of the Coliseum all other material used having been disposed of.

The officers of the Libby Prison War Museum Association whose names appear on the medal, are identifiable from their advertisements on the covers of the Catalogue. The President, C. J. Gunther, was a confectioner who advertised his candies; the Vice President, L. Manasse, an optician; and the secretary-treasurer was a member of the law firm, Schuyler and Kremer, ''attorneys at law and proctors in Admiralty.''

One would expect to learn that the medal was struck on some occasion connected with the Libby Prison War Museum, either on the completion of its rebuilding in Chicago or on its opening. This was, however, not the case. There is no other indication as to when the medal was executed except the year 1893 appearing on its reverse. It proves that the medal must have been struck in connection with the Columbian Exposition held in that year in Chicago. This is all that could be explored of its history.

Finally a token should be mentioned that refers to Civil War prisons, though indirectly only. It is representative of a whole group of similar tokens. In 1864-1865 a special committee of the United States Sanitary Commission published the gruesome results of an inquiry into the privations and sufferings of United States officers and soldiers during their war imprisonment. It aroused, of course, the public at that time. The United States Sanitary Commission, established in 1861, to cooperate with the army, arranged a series of great fairs, popularly termed ''Sanitary Fairs,'' in order to raise funds for the relief of sickness, the improvement of hospital sanitation, and the promotion of the health conditions among the armed forces in general. The Commission distributed during the war supplies to the value of fifteen million dollars, and funds amounting to five million more were received into its treasury, at least two-thirds of which were obtained from the numerous ''Sanitary Fairs.'' The first was held at Chicago in 1863, and many other cities followed.

Tokens of the kind of that pictured here as No. 8 were given to the ''cheerful givers.'' The obverse of No. 8 shows Washington's head facing the right, at each side four stars, the legend being: GEO. WASHINGTON/ PRESIDENT. The reverse has the following inscription in nine lines, the first three and last one curved: GOD LOVETH A CHEERFUL GIVER / GREAT FAIR / IN AID OF THE / U. S. / SANITARY / COMMISSION / NANTUCKET / MASS. / AUGUST 1864. The size is twenty-four millimeters. Specimens were struck in silver, copper, brass, nickel, and tin.

"Sanitary Fair" Token

To be sure, the present essay represents but a very modest contribution to the discipline of medallic history. If through the methodological approach of a specific problem it would aid in stimulating further research in this little cultivated field, the author would consider this a highly gratifying reward.

THE SOVEREIGNS OF ENGLAND

By Marion E. Harrison, II

By most historians Egbert (800-836) is recognized as the first English sovereign. However, since numismatic specimens are very scarce dated back that far, we can for numismatic references consider William I (1066-1087) as the first English sovereign. To him we owe the origin of the modern English language more than any other sovereign, and likewise he is related to every other English sovereign following him. He therefore is often called "The Father of English Sovereignty."

Many of the English sovereigns never accomplished anything outstanding while on the throne and for that reason in this article I am mentioning only particular ones. However, at the close of the article there is a complete dated list of the English sovereigns beginning with William I (1066).

The next sovereign deserving mention is Henry II (1154-1189) who founded the Plantagenet Line. "The name Plantagenet comes from the peculiar badge, a sprig of broom plant (plante de genet), adopted by one of the early members of the house."[1]

Richard I (1189-1199) known as "The Lion Hearted" is famous for his great military ability and spirit, and his successor John (1199-1216) was made famous due to the Magna Carta which was signed in 1215 against his will. During the reign of Henry III (1216-1272) the House of Commons was established, although not without Royal opposition. That was the second important step toward the granting of freedom to the commoner.

In 1399 the Plantagenet Line succeeded to the House of Lancaster, Henry IV becoming King. The House of Lancaster lasted until 1461 when Edward IV founded the House of York as the ruling house. No one in this house performed anything historically significant, and therefore I will not mention any of them in particular.

In 1485 Henry VII founded the House of Tudor. This house had such great sovereigns as Henry VIII and Elizabeth. It is famous for not only the progressive period of English history over which it ruled, but also for the abolition of the Catholic Church and the founding of the Episcopal Church (Church of England).

The year 1603 saw the death of Elizabeth and the succession of James I who founded the Stuart Line. In 1649 the Commonwealth was formed and Oliver Cromwell became Lord Protector (1653-1658) and was succeeded by his son, Richard (1658-1659).

A year of anarchy followed and in 1660 Charles II restored the Stuart Line. William III and Mary II ascended the throne jointly in 1688 (House of Orange). Anne became Queen in 1702 founding what some historians call the second restoration of the Stuart Line. The year 1714 saw the House of Hanover being founded by George I.

George III deserves mention as the king during the American Revolution and Victoria deserves mention for many reasons. She was the first English sovereign to become Empress of India and she also ruled for a longer period than any other sovereign, 64 years.

Upon her death (1901) her son founded the Saxe-Coburg Line as King Edward VII. He was the first Emperor of India. When George V ascended the throne however, he had the name changed to the House of Windsor, which name now applies. His eldest son, Edward VIII, succeeded him in 1936, but gave up the throne to marry the former Miss Wally Warfield, now the Duchess of Windsor. His brother then succeeded him as George VI.

Many historians consider all the sovereigns from George I (1714) on as a part of the House of Hanover.

NONE TOO SMALL

"Fortunately for those who follow numismatics as a calling, the inducements to collect are manifold indeed. There may be said to be no piece so destitute of commercial value, so insignificant in aspect, so artistically and historically trivial, which does not meet with a home, if not with an admirer. Poor specimens are frequently of the greatest use to the student in settling a moot point of detail. You cannot, as with a book, make a good coin out of two bad ones; but you can complete a legend or type; and instances are on record where it has asked half-a-dozen more or less imperfect pieces to supply the whole reading and story."

FIRST CONFEDERATE CURRENCY PRINTED IN NEW YORK

Editor of THE NUMISMATIST:

How does it happen that the first Confederate bills were engraved not in the South but in the North by the National Bank Note Co., New York? And here we were supposed to be at war—or at least trying to suppress the Secession.

Wouldn't you consider it strange if Hitler or Tojo had their bills made in the U. S. subsequent to Pearl Harbor? Perhaps P. H. Chase can give us the answer!

Yours very truly,

STEPHEN H. BIBLER

P. O. Box 1913, Seattle, Wash.

Editor of THE NUMISMATIST:

I think that an adequate answer to this inquiry is given in Dr. Lee's book, back in 1875, which I quote:

> "It will be seen from these notes that the Southern Confederacy in their first issue relied upon the skill of Northern workmen, in the shape of the National Bank Note Company, and May 1, 1874, these facts were developed in an interesting manner before the Committee on Banking and Currency of the United States House of Representatives, while considering the question of allowing bank note companies to prepare the United States Treasury notes. Letters were produced from the rebel archives; one from the Secretary of the National Bank Note Company, dated April 16, 1861, acknowledging the receipt of $540.22, in specie, and mentioning the fact that one thousand impressions of Treasury notes of the denominations of $50 and $100 had been sent to the Hon. C. G. Memminger on the previous day and per Adams Express. Another, from the same source, dated Bank of the Republic, New York, April 15, 1861, signed G. B. Lamar, and addressed to the Hon. C. G. Memminger, implicates also the American Bank Note Company in the preparing of loan certificates and bonds, stating that both companies took the risk of delivering all, including the plates, at Montgomery. The Southern Bank Note Company, at New Orleans, with this issue furnished very handsome and creditable notes of the denominations of $50 and $100."

Reference to histories of the Civil War will make clear the confusion of thought and lack of unanimity in both the North and the South regarding the merits of the dispute between the two sections. Further, at the beginning of the War and for some time thereafter there continued to be considerable contraband traffic between the North and South. This traffic in Confederate currency was merely one manifestation of such traffic.

I think it is clear that the situation was radically different in 1861 than in World War II following Pearl Harbor.

Sincerely yours,

PHILIP H. CHASE

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

NUMISMATIC REVIEW. (Stack's) for January-March. Thomas Ollive Mabbott, the Editor, offers in this issue one of the finest examples of original numismatic writing we have come across during the last decade. The title of his article, "The Meaning of the Types of Roman Republican Bronze," might lead the reader to expect a rehash of long established facts or, at best, a few timid guesses as to the meaning of the types used. Dr. Mabbott believes that the types employed were not the whims of the moneyers but had been carefully selected by the authorities who were anxious to pay tribute to the "founders and protectors of the city, who also might be appropriate patrons of copper money." The six divinities originally chosen for this purpose were Janus, Saturn, Minerva, Hercules, Mercury, and probably Virtus. While showing proper consideration for the theories entertained by other writers, Dr. Mabbott does not hesitate to project theories of his own and he backs them up with a keen logic and a profound knowledge of ancient mythology. His conclusions must be given serious consideration, if not accepted without reserve, until they have been definitely disproved.

E. Gallo-Ruiz offers a few theories on a medal thought by some to have been made in Mexico before the time of Cortes. Other contributors include Henry J. Stein, Edward Gans, C. C. Vermeule, T. H. Hilton, Max M. Schwartz, Hans Holzer, P. F. Klaasesz, J. B. Stack, H. D. Gibbs, H. Schulman, and J. Barnett. As usual the magazine is nicely balanced, well illustrated and edited with much care.

NUMISMATIC SCRAPBOOK (Hewitt Bros.) for March. Edgar Levy discusses our standing Liberty quarter dollar in a manner indicative of much time spent in research. He concludes his remarks with—"They are a virile coin, made to take its place in industry and trade and not merely to be hidden in a cabinet." John S. Davenport describes a two thaler piece of Saxony, issued in 1872 to commemorate the Golden Wedding of John and Amalie. Paul Pennington continues with his articles on ancient coins, treating in this issue, "False Relief on Coins." Under the heading "The Story Behind the Token," B. Morgenthau has no end of fun conducting an imaginary radio broadcast devoted to the lighter side of his hobby. R. S. Yeoman continues with his articles on "Private Gold," covering in this number the coinages of The Bechtlers. The article is synoptic yet profusely illustrated. Other articles are by E. D. Larkin, "Uncle Ben," and Emil Di Bella.

SCHOOL BOARD SCRIP OF DEARBORN, MICHIGAN

By J. J. CURTO

A new and interesting form of scrip, new at least to some of us, is the Tax Anticipation Notes issued by the School Board of the City of Dearborn, Michigan during the Depression Days of 1933. It was issued against the unpaid school taxes of 1931 and was ordered redeemed in numerical order as quickly as the revenue of these anticipated payments was received. The notes were 6% interest bearing.

PRESIDENT, BOARD OF EDUCATION

BY Calvin M. Bryan
SECRETARY, BOARD OF EDUCATION

WE HAVE EXAMINED THE PROCEEDINGS FOR THE ISSUE OF THIS SERIES OF NOTES AND ARE OF THE OPINION THAT NOTES NUMBERED FROM 1 TO 13,800, INCLUSIVE, ARE A VALID OBLIGATION OF THE FORDSON SCHOOL DISTRICT, IN THE CITY OF DEARBORN, MICHIGAN.

MILLER CANFIELD, PADDOCK AND STONE,
ATTORNEYS

The School Board of the City of Dearborn was known as the Fordson School Board probably in tribute to the old City of Fordson which consolidated with the City of Dearborn in January of 1929.

Dearborn, Michigan, is a beautiful and enterprising city of approximately 85,000 inhabitants bordering the western limits of the City of Detroit. A city of international renown as the home of the Ford Motor Company, it is also the place called "home town" by Henry Ford.

Famous and wondrous Greenfield Village is another of Dearborn's claims to fame,—and rightfully so. Created by Mr. Ford it is truly Epic American. Here he has gathered and reconstructed literally brick by brick and board by board, many of the quaint and historically important workshops, inns, mills and homes of many famous Americans.

All of these laboratories and mills are fully equipped with much of the original machinery and tools. The homes are authentically restored and completely furnished.

The Museum at Greenfield Village houses thousands of interesting historical items of all types. Its scope of interest is hard to surpass.

The whole is arranged in an early American manner in a setting of natural beauty. Should anyone wish to live for awhile, amidst many famous scenes of Early America all magically brought adjacent to one another in one vicinity, he ought to plan to spend a few days visiting Greenfield Village and his wish would come true.

Returning to the scrip, the story of the need, necessity and reason for its issuance cannot be told any more clearly or interestingly than as told by S. H. Watkins, President of the Board of Education in an open letter dated, March 17, 1933, to the school employees which read as follows:

March 17, 1933

To the Employees of the Fordson Board of Education:

When the Governor's Banking Proclamation was issued February 14, all arrangements which had been made for the usual short term loans were set aside, and at the same time, bank balances were tied up amounting to more than $275,000 of general funds.

This situation left the Board of Education in a position where one of three alternatives had to be decided upon. First, there was the possibility of closing the schools and letting the employees shift for themselves. This was discarded, because it would be an acknowledgement of defeat and would so seriously affect the welfare of children attending our schools. The second alternative was that of attempting to operate until conditions became normal again on a credit basis. This proposition was discarded because the business institutions could not be expected to finance the operation of the school system and extend necessary credit for living expenses for all of its employees. The third alternative was a possibility of issuing tax notes under the provisions of Act No. 26 Public Acts of 1931. This proposition was decided on favorably because the legislation providing for the issuance of such notes so amply protected the persons accepting them, and because of that fact, it was thought that these notes would serve a good purpose as a medium of exchange.

The first issue of notes are 1931 delinquent tax anticipation notes issued in accordance with section 1, subdivision 3, of Act No. 26 above referred to. This Act provides that the borrowing against delinquent taxes of any previous fiscal year shall be limited to 60%. There are now outstanding $194,-535.38 of 1931 delinquent taxes due this district, and notes will be issued in the amount of $116,000.00 which is slightly less than 60% of this amount in denominations of $1.00 and $5.00, to become due on or before May 1, 1935 and to bear interest at 6%.

The next provision of this subdivision provides that a sinking fund be established and that all tax collections against which such delinquent tax notes are issued shall be placed in such sinking fund until it represents a sufficient amount to retire notes already issued, or until the due date of said notes.

The next provision, and perhaps the most important from the note holder's standpoint, is the provision that if the tax collections for the year against which notes have been issued have been insufficient to retire such notes including interest when they become due, the general funds of the district shall be advanced to the sinking fund in the amount necessary to pay off the notes.

All of the other provisions of this Act have been complied with, including securing the approval of the State Loan Board for notes to be issued; a certificate from the State Treasurer's Office authorizing the sale of the notes; and additionally, the Board of Education secured a legal opinion covering the validity of the notes from Miller, Canfield Paddock & Stone, attorneys of Detroit, who are commonly conceded to be the best authority on the legality of municipal obligations in the State of Michigan.

In addition to taking every precaution to make these notes entirely valid and having their payment when due amply secured, an effort has been made to make them excellent investments by having them bear an interest rate of 6%. We do not believe that anyone can find any safer or better investment. Even postal savings cannot offer any better security, and the return on these notes is three times as much.

It will be noted that these notes carry a provision permitting the Board of Education to redeem them at any time upon the publication of a notice ten days in advance of the date of redemption. This provision has been made so that as fast as 1931 delinquent taxes are received the notes may be recalled in numerical order, and it is entirely possible that they will be retired before the date they become due.

In the printing of these notes an effort has been made to prevent the possibility of counterfeiting by the use of processes hard to duplicate, specially prepared inks, etc. It has been stated by printers that the counterfeiting of real currency would be even less difficult.

No doubt other tax notes will be issued if the financial situation does not clear up to some extent, and we wish to state now that if they are, you may be assured that the Board of Education will be just as careful to make them entirely valid and secure as it has done in connection with the 1931 delinquent tax anticipation notes.

We sincerely trust that these notes will serve the purpose they are intended to serve, and we want you to know that we appreciate very much the spirit of whole-hearted cooperation in which they are being received.

S. H. WATKINS, President
Fordson Board of Education

The first issue of $29,000 was all that was issued of the total $116,000 authorized. The notes of $5.00 denomination were numbered from 00001 to 03800, and the $1.00 denominations from 03801 to 13,800.

When payment was made, the number of the check issued to the holder was placed after "Bearer" as a future check on payments.

For various and sundry reasons, $478.00 has not been turned in for redemption.

My thanks are herewith extended to H. S. Mitchell, Business Manager of the School Board, who cooperated so graciously to aid in recording for posterity the story of this scrip.

NINETEENTH CENTURY CROWN SIZE COINS OF EUROPE: A SERIES

By JOHN S. DAVENPORT, Buffalo, N. Y.

IX. RUSSIA

The old Russian royal line ended with the death of Theodore in 1598. The following years were troubled by a succession of false heirs to the throne and spreading chaos in the sprawling realm. So it was with almost universal approval that the young Michael Romanoff was elected to the vacant throne in 1613. During the succeeding two centuries two of Michael's successors distinguished themselves—Peter the Great (1686-1725) and the German born wife of Peter III, Catharine II the Great (1762-1796).

Catharine was succeeded upon her death in 1796 by her son Paul I, who bitterly hated her and all her policies. Of unsound mind, the new tzar with his tyrannical and oscillating behavior raised every kind of opposition and fell a victim to a palace plot against his life.

Alexander I succeeded his father on the throne in 1801. He began his reign as a visionary liberal, a role which developed into one of a nationalistic autocrat as Russia engaged in the Napoleonic wars, annexed Finland in 1809, and underwent invasion in 1812. The years 1813-1818 saw Russia emerge as a European power under Alexander's leadership. The last years of his reign found the tzar a full-fledged reactionary, the chief mover in the Holy Alliance. The three basic types of rubles issued during Alexander's reign do not differ very much in design. During the years 1801-1810 there was prepared an extensive series of pattern rubles with the tzar's head or bust.

Alexander's brother Constantine had renounced his rights to the throne in 1823. On the tzar's death in 1825 several months passed during which the succession seems to have been in doubt. Nicholas, the third brother, didn't want the position but finally accepted it as a national necessity. Only too well aware of his unfitness and shortcomings, Nicholas felt his way unsteadily along for the first five years. The Polish insurrection of 1830-1831, however, changed him into a violent reactionary. The peasant revolutions which followed and the more general disturbances of 1848 confirmed his conservative leanings. He died just before the conclusion of the Crimean war. In addition to the two regular rubles issued during his reign, a 1½ ruble with value in Polish money was coined for circulation in that country. Of the same size and value is a family ruble, with the tzar's portrait on one side, and on the other his wife, who had been the Princess Charlotte of Prussia, surrounded by their seven surviving children—four sons and three daughters. Nicholas also issued a ruble in memory of his brother, and a 1½ and a 1 ruble to commemorate the battle of Borodino fought on September 7, 1812, during which the Russians lost 42,000 men and Napoleon 32,000. The tzar himself dedicated the monument on the battlefield to Prince Bagration, one of twenty-two Russian generals who lost their lives in the encounter.

The weak, good-natured, well-intentioned Alexander II succeeded his father just in time to conclude the treaty agreements of the Crimean War. Opening his reign as a reformer, he liberated the peasants, re-organized local government and law courts, and pursued a liberal policy until after the Polish insurrection of 1863 when he turned conservative. From 1865 on despite persistent agitation for more liberal reforms and amid marked industrial progress, Alexander supported Germany against France, made war upon Turkey in 1877-1878, and was finally blown to bits in 1881. Following the precedent established earlier, he issued a ruble in honor of his father upon the dedication of a monument to the memory of Nicholas I.

Alexander III apparently had no liberal period like the two earlier Alexanders. A reactionary from the start, he persecuted the press, all religions except the orthodox, the liberals—everything not firmly established in the Russian way of life. He did encourage a peaceful foreign policy and switched from a German to a French alliance. Surrounded by a corps of guards he lived almost like a prisoner until his death in 1894.

His son, Nicholas II, the last of the tzars, was a modest, bashful man with few of the qualifications of a ruler. His reign was one of unceasing trouble. Bolshevism was gradually on the rise, spurred on by the disasters of the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-1905 and the defeats of World War I. Nicholas and his family ended their unhappy lives before a firing squad of his own subjects. Alexander III had not lived to see the completion of the monument to his father, and the usual ruble was issued by Nicholas at the dedication in 1898. In 1912 Nicholas honored his own father in the same fashion. Also in this year, came a ruble to commemorate the defeat of the invading French armies one hundred years before and the retreat from Moscow. Nicholas celebrated the 300th anniversary of the Romanoff dynasty in 1913 with a ruble depicting himself and his earliest royal ancestor, Michael Feodorovitch. Coming just before the outbreak of World War I was a ruble for the second centennial of the battle of Gangut (Hangoudd) in which Peter the Great defeated the navy of Sweden.

The Bolshevik regime, which came into power in 1917 but which really settled down into a stable government only in 1921, has issued two types of rubles: one picturing the red star and the hammer and sickle, and the other symbolizing industry and farming on the obverse design. There have been no large silver pieces since 1925.

The Russian coat of arms appears on the reverse of many of these coins. The double headed eagle is triple crowned and holds a sceptre in one talon and an orb in the other. The center shield depicting St. George killing the dragon represents ancient Moscovy, the home of the Romanoffs. The six smaller shields shown up to 1858 represent, from left to right, the provinces of Astrakan, Novogorod, Kiev, Wladimir, Siberia, and Kasan. Then the shields were increased to eight to include on the left side Kasan, Poland, Chersonese-Taurida, and Kiev-Novgorod-Wladimir; and on the right Finland, Caucasus, Siberia, and Astrakan.

REPORT OF THE ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE ROCHESTER NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION

On Saturday evening March 24, 45 members and friends of the Rochester Numismatic Association gathered at the Seneca Hotel for the 33rd Annual Banquet. The R. N. A. was honored in having as its guest Mr. Mosher, editor of THE NUMISMATIST and Mrs. Mosher. Mr. Mosher gave a talk on numismatics and told about the aims of THE NUMISMATIST. He brought with him a large selection of coins from his collection.

Mr. Judson, President of the R. N. A. served as toastmaster and presented to Mr. Hutchinson the retiring president, a bronze copy of the Hutchinson Presidential Medal. This practice of honoring presidents has been carried out since the club was organized in 1912.

A number of prizes were given out to those present holding the lucky numbers, among the winners were Alphonse Kolb who received an uncirculated gold dollar, Mrs. S. C. Place who won a 1799 large cent and Mr. Newell who received an uncirculated Liberty head five-cent piece.

Following the banquet a fine series of games were arranged by Barney Bloom, Chairman of the Banquet Committee.

AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY HOLDS SPRING MEETING

An exhibition of Roman coins from the collection of its late President, Edward T. Newell, was featured at the regular Spring meeting of the American Numismatic Society at its Museum on Saturday, April 14. The coins, which filled the cases in the Museum's larger exhibition hall, remained on public view for two weeks.

A guest at the meeting, Miss Moyca Newell, a sister of President Newell, spoke briefly of her recollections of Mr. Newell's beginnings as a numismatist, telling of a trip made with their parents to Algiers, and cities of North Africa, in 1890, when Mr. Newell was not more than five years old. The trip by train to Tunis and thence to ancient sites included Bistra and Timgad, and coins were among the acquisitions made by Mr. Newell—the interest he displayed having resulted in the Arabs bringing many pieces to him. Miss Newell also spoke of the training Mr. Newell had given himself in drawing—something of which she had been reminded in noting the beautifully drawn symbols on the tickets accompanying coins in his collection. She attributed the amount of work he accomplished to his powers of concentration.

The main speaker of the meeting was Louis C. West, who read his paper on "Inflation Reflected in Roman Coins." (Editor's Note: This splendid paper will be published in full in a forthcoming issue of THE NUMISMATIST). At 4:00 P. M., the reading of the paper was interrupted and the members of the Society stood for the minute of silence shared by Americans throughout the world, as a testimony of respect for Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose funeral services in Washington were being held at that time.

At the business portion of the meeting the resignation of Harrold E. Gillingham as a member of the Society's Council was reported. By unanimous vote Mr. Gillingham was named an Honorary Councillor for Life, in recognition of his service on the Council for more than a quarter of a century and for many years as Treasurer.

NOTES ON AN EARLY COIN COLLECTION

"Busied myself to provide Catalogue of Coins from Mr. Curwin's Collection for Mr. Winthrop. Such Collections are rare in this country & in some parts utterly unknown. This is the largest that I have ever seen. The real antiques in silver, are an Athenian City, a Greek City, a Consul, Scipio, Juba, Julius Caesar, Augustus, Tiberius, Claudius, Hadrian, Marcus Antoninus. There are also a considerable number of copper and Mantuans, which the connoisseurs must distinguish. Among the modern is to be found a MARYLAND coin, Cecilius C L'd Baltimore. A Specimen is to be seen of all the modern coinage in this collection."

Diary of William Bentley of Salem, Mass., October 23, 1795.

"Last night departed this life Samuel Curwin, Esq., aet. 87 . . . He was a merchant of Salem . . . The times of the American Revolution were no times for him . . . he left America and went to England . . . The remains of a valuable Library were sold just before his return by his nephew Richard Ward, Esq. and it was sacrificed. A rich collection of Coins was robbed of its best pieces . . . He was an excellent antiquarian and I profited much from the few things he had saved from the destruction which befell his library, cabinet and private papers."

Diary of William Bentley of Salem, Mass., April 10, 1802.

Petrarch was the foremost coin collector of the 14th century.

The following were present but not included in the photograph: Major J. Moss, U. S. A., President of the Washington Numismatic Society; J. R. Kern, Jr.; C. W. Hass; Mrs. C. W. Hass; Miss D. Carl; S. Maynard; Mrs. S. Maynard and P. Wiley.

The 10th Annual Banquet of the Baltimore Coin Club was held Saturday, March 24th at 7 P. M. in the Ballroom of The Hotel Stafford with 47 members and guests, including the ladies, members of the Washington Numismatic Society and the Western Maryland Coin Club. A photograph was taken of the group prior to the Banquet.

Joseph P. Smyth, Club Vice-President, officiated as Toastmaster in his own inimitable style. After a few brief remarks, he called on George W. Williams, the Club's first President, as the first speaker of the evening.

Philip G. Straus, Club President, welcomed the guests and reviewed briefly the progress of the Club during the past year, commending the Officers and the Committees for their work during the year. Mr. Smyth then introduced Major Moss, President of the Washington Numismatic Society, who congratulated our Club on its ten years of progress and invited all present to visit the Washington Society.

The Toastmaster then introduced the feature of the evening, "Dr. N. Q.", a "first cousin" of Dr. I. Q. of radio fame. Dr. N. Q. (Dr. Numismatic Quizzer) proved to be none other than our congenial auctioneer, Charles E. McCormick. Dr. N. Q. was complete with cap and gown and was seated before a microphone with a bag of new coins which his assistants, John R. Sheckells and Plummer Wiley, awarded to those present who gave correct answers. His assistants worked through the audience with portable microphones. Dr. N. Q.'s questions were complete even to the biographical sketch and the "thought twister." He asked the members rather difficult numismatic questions but the ladies were asked such questions as, "What is the maximum number of coins you ever took from your husband's trousers while he was sleeping?" or "What are the disadvantages of being a numismatist's wife?" Many present thought they were actually "on the air" until the program was over and the Toastmaster burst the bubble by announcing that it was only a mock broadcast.

Each person present was presented with a souvenir envelope containing uncirculated 1935 and 1945 coins, commemorating the 10th Anniversary of the Club.

Many favorable comments were made concerning the program and appreciation was extended to the Committee, consisting of Elmer Schmidt, Chairman, Plummer Wiley, John M. Cook, and to "Dr. N. Q.", Charles E. McCormick.

NOTES AND QUERIES

Not a Matter of Money—

Dear Mr. Editor: For over quarter of a century I have been collecting coins and have what I consider as fine a collection as ever put together by "a plain ordinary working man." I make the same money now as I did before the war, and what with the increased cost of living and withholding taxes, I've been forced to limit my coin buying.

What gets me are these fellows "in the money" who think they can walk out and buy whatever they want in the way of coins. A while ago, I was in the shop of (. . . a Chicago coin dealer) and a fellow came in with a list of coins he wanted. First he wanted an uncirculated silver dollar of 1795, type of '94. The dealer didn't have it and he says "Order me a copy, I'll leave a deposit." He asked for a lot of other early coins in uncirculated condition. The dealer didn't have them either. This fellow gets very much annoyed. He pulls a big roll out of his pocket and says "What's the matter, isn't my money any good?"

After he left, I got to talking to the dealer, and he told me he had persons like that coming in every once in a while. They think all they need to collect choice coins is the money.

I can tell them different. Once in a dog's age, when a big collection is being sold a millionaire can perhaps get the uncirculated coins he wants. But the average collector has to be on the lookout over a long period of time. These newcomers should realize that money isn't everything when it comes to collecting choice coins.

—A SMALL-SHOT COLLECTOR.

A Worthwhile Suggestion—

Edward Gans, New York, suggests that new members of the A. N. A. be more definite in stating their collecting interests. This will enable dealers to better understand their wants and aid in conserving paper. The term "general," should be used less frequently, as it is entirely too indefinite.

Engraved Many Dies—

The signature MICHAUT on the French 1817 five francs of Louis XVIII, is for the engraver Auguste Francois Michaut. Born in Paris in 1786, he died there in 1879 at the age of 93. He engraved the dies for many coins, patterns, and medals. His signature is also found on some of the coins issued by Holland during the reign of William I.

Brilliant Uncirculated but— Showing Cabinet Friction

I've bought lots of "brilliant uncirculated" coins with the so-called "cabinet friction." In my opinion all of them were picked from circulation.

Dealers could well leave out "cabinet friction," as there are better known terms for describing coins that are not "uncirculated."

—H. C. GLICKERT

Roosevelt Play Money—

Howard H. Kurth forwards a bronze token bearing the portrait of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and bearing on the reverse the denomination 1, and the inscription LUCKY PLAY MONEY. It's 16 mm in diameter, about the size of a ration token.

Mr. Kurth has no idea where or when they were made and would appreciate hearing from anyone knowing the source.

More than one Bovy—

Your confusion over the signature BOVY on the two Swiss medals you own is understandable. The name is that of a famous family of Swiss medalists and engravers connected with the mint at Geneva during the 19th century. The list of medals and coins bearing the Bovy name is a lengthy one and could not be given here. Antoine Bovy signed his medals A. B. or A. Bovy. He died in 1877. It was Hugues Bovy, 1841-1903, who designed the Shooting Fest medal of 1898.

Bland Dollar—

"The popular name for the silver dollar issued in the United States from 1878 to 1904 inclusive (and 1921). It owes its origin to the Bland-Allison Act of February 28, 1878, which provided for a minimum monthly silver coinage of two million dollars, and established this coin of 412½ grains troy as legal tender. The Act takes its name from Congressman Richard Bland of Missouri, and Senator William B. Allison of Iowa."

From A DICTIONARY OF NUMISMATIC NAMES by Albert R. Frey.

Roman Bronzes and U. S. Cents—

Roman bronzes are not unlike U. S. large cents in that their value depends largely upon condition, striking and color. Further comparison might be made by mentioning that the rarity of reverse types of Roman bronzes is not unlike the comparative values of die varieties of large cents. As an example, a fine Roman portrait might be obtainable for $10 yet the same portrait combined with a scarce reverse might easily bring five or more times that amount.

Barton's Metal—

Was made by gilding very thickly a plate of copper, and then rolling it out to proper thickness for the coin; the ductility of the gold being such as always to preserve a uniform surface of that metal, however thin, and to whatever extent it might be requisite to roll the copper.

Proofs of the English gold coinage of 1825 and 1826, as well as some of the silver issues, were struck in Barton's metal. It was also used in striking proofs of France and Greece.

Coin Weights in Grains and Grams—

	Grains	Grams
Silver Dollar	412.5	26.73
Half-Dollar	192.9	12.50
Quarter-Dollar	96.4	6.25
Dime	38.5	2.50
Nickel	77.1	5.0
Cent	48	3.11

After the Hegira—

There are various methods of transposing the A. H. (Anno Hegira) date to our A. D. (Anno Domini) date. The least cumbersome is to subtract 3 per cent of the A. H. date and add 622. Thus: 3 per cent of 1363 is 41. Subtracting this from 1363 leaves 1322. Adding 622 gives us 1944 which corresponds to the Mohammedan date of 1363.

Shows Patience and Perseverance—

A young fellow recently showed us a complete collection of Lincoln cents from 1909 to 1944 which he had picked from circulation. He had worked on it every week-end for the last two years, yet his collection was about 90 per cent complete six weeks after he started "collecting."

He wanted to know what it was worth!

Nearly all of us have been confronted by the same question and it is a difficult one to answer. Such a "collection" of circulated coins has little monetary value. The experience gained in forming it is of real value and never for an instant should it be underestimated. Any person with the patience and perseverance necessary to pick a complete set of Lincoln cents from circulation has one of the things it takes to become a real coin collector.

Viktoras Barnauskas—

Better known as Victor David Brenner was a Lithuanian by birth and was born in Shavli, Lithuania, June 12th, 1871. He came to the United States in 1890 and died here in 1924.

Can't Make Any Profit—

Sir:

Two years ago I bought 100 Robinson half dollars from a coin dealer. Now that the price has gone up I tried to sell them back and he had the nerve to offer me less than I paid. I think this type of dealer gives the A. N. A. a black-eye. Can't something be done about this kind of business? How about it?

(How about what?—Editor).

AN ATTRACTIVE DISPLAY

This attractive exhibit was put on in the main lobby of the Anglo California National Bank, San Francisco, Cal. It was arranged by D. F. Barreto of the foreign exchange department and includes numerous large gold and silver pieces of the Americas.

Aside from honoring Pan America Day the exhibit did much to promote National Coin Week. It was of real interest to many of the delegates attending the San Francisco Conference of the Allied Nations.

The added attraction is Miss Dorothy Robinson, a member of the Bank's staff.

A NUMISMATIC BOMB?

Opening a German dud bomb in the city of Nijmegen, Holland, last week, authorities found to their amazement that the "bullets" inside were pre-war Dutch silver and copper coins instead of shrapnel. So short have the Germans run of munition metals.

From the Newport, (R. I.) County Sentinel. Forwarded by William D. Morrill, A. N. A. No. 2203.

A CURIOUS COINAGE

The Mexican 50 peso gold pieces which have been coined in considerable quantities during 1943, 1944 and 1945 have a curious status. Do they have any relationship at all with the monetary system of Mexico? Where does Mexico get the gold to put into these large pieces? Why is it that a country in such moderate circumstances can issue gold coins while the richest country in the world has a law which prohibits its citizens from owning a single ordinary gold coin?

Perhaps our numismatic friends in Mexico would be kind enough to give us some information on the subject.

NUMISMATIC BOOKS ON DISPLAY

An exhibition of numismatic literature has been installed in the library of the Museum of the American Numismatic Society. It is displayed in twenty-four cases on the second floor gallery in the library. Six of the cases are devoted to books by the great numismatists, Eckhel, Head, Heiss, Lelewel, Fraehn and Crosby, whose names are cut in the architrave of the Society's building. Other cases contain a parchment monetary document executed by Louis XIV, a handwritten volume on coining, numismatic books bearing sixteenth century imprints, seventeenth century English and Dutch broadsides warning against contemporary counterfeits and decrees regulating exchange values of current coin.

ALFRED A. McCARTY'S COLLECTION DAMAGED BY FIRE

According to a report by the Burlington Free Press (Vermont) dated April 23, the residence of Alfred A. McCarty, in the town of Berlin, was burned along with its contents which included a valuable collection of coins.

Mr. McCarty, who is well known to many members of the A. N. A., only recently moved to Vermont from Thornwood, New York. His loss is an unfortunate one, and we extend our sympathy.

BARGAINS STILL OBTAINABLE

Dear Sir:

Recently, I visited New York and made a round of the coin dealers. Contrary to what I had been hearing and certainly expected, I was able to pick up some real bargains. I bought over 50 foreign coppers, that I had been wanting for years, at ridiculously low prices. They would have cost me three times as much 30 years ago. I bought all the artistic medals I could carry for a dollar or two each. My collection has been enriched beyond my fondest hopes, and the entire works didn't cost me as much as some collectors spend for a pattern cent of 1856. Maybe I'm a fool for telling you this, for the next time I go coin-shopping I'll probably be out of luck. I got a big kick from a remark made by one of the dealers. He said, "It's a pleasure to do business with someone who is not trying to corner the market in 1877 proof nickels." He seemed disgusted with speculators, but he had a nice stock of coins and medals.

I'm mighty proud of my collection. If you ever visit Detroit, I want you to see it.

—Signed,

A GENERAL COLLECTOR.

SUPPLEMENTARY TERMS

Proof Surface—

Formerly applied to coins, generally foreign, have a surface similar to proofs struck at the U. S. Mint. Now frequently applied to coins that are in need of a couple of kind words. A good example are the Liberty seated dollars struck from 1840 to 1873. Most of them were struck from sharply cut dies and even when slightly worn have an attractive surface.

When catalogued as "about uncirculated and having a proof surface," inexperienced bidders often presume that the cataloguer has made a mistake and that the coin will turn out to be a gorgeous proof after it is "cleaned up a bit."

Dealers anticipate this presumption and generally do right handsome by themselves.

Was a Proof,
Now Uncirculated—

While this is one of the most recent additions to our Dictionary, we are unable to trace its origin. Nor have we the remotest idea what it means. Perhaps the dealers who employ it would be good enough to supply a definition.

*A Polished Proof—

Such coins as we have seen described as "polished proofs" have been strictly home-made. Fie on those who use the term and may confusion follow those who make proofs "to order."

Expertize—

A spurious hybrid in use as a verb. Probably confused with the French noun "expertise" meaning a survey or valuation by experts. Rather a popular word nevertheless.

First I have Seen—

A popular expression calculated to enhance the value of a coin at the risk of establishing the cataloguer's lack of knowledge and experience.

Flan Bruni—

A French numismatic term corresponding to our word 'proof.'

Private Collector—

A term employed almost exclusively by cataloguers when they wish to keep the source of coins anonymous. Probably derived by the illiterate from "private collection" which distinguishes the collection of an individual from the collection of a public museum.

Unpublished—

Meaning that an issue has never been recorded in a coin catalogue or other numismatic publication. Unless stated on reliable authority this remark must be regarded with much suspicion as it is greatly overworked.

KETTLE IMITATIONS

Every so often, and all too frequently, there appear for sale, "Patterns in Brass for U. S. $2½ and $5 Gold Pieces, Dated 1803."

Little is known of their origin. Dealers and collectors alike can justify their lack of knowledge because the origin and reason for these pieces is somewhat obscure.

Someday an energetic collector will decide to explore the subject and in anticipation of such a time, the following pertinent notes are offered:

UNITED STATES PATTERNS. Under this heading, lot number 797 of the Bispham Collection, sold by S. H. & H. Chapman in 1880, we find "1803 Kettle 2½ and 5 Dollar gold pieces. Also an English token with name "Kettle" in field, which shows these pieces to have been of English origin. "Brass. 3 pieces." (The 3 pieces brought 6 cents each).

ADAMS & WOODIN, U. S. PATTERN, TRIAL and EXPERIMENTAL PIECES, 1913. "There are two imitations of the United States half and quarter eagle, which are accredited to an engraver by the name of KETTLE, this name being shown on the obverse of the coins, to the right of the date. They are supposed to be of English origin, and having nothing to do with the pattern issues of the United States Mint."

THE NUMISMATIST, Page 19, January, 1922. Under the title "The "Kettle" Coins," the $2½ piece is illustrated, and a member requests information.

THE NUMISMATIST, Page 131, March, 1922. Under the caption "Some Light on the "Kettle" Coins," we have a comment of more than ordinary interest. Quote—"In response to our inquiry in the January issue as to the origin of the brass imitations of some of the early U. S. gold coins, known as the "Kettle" issues, we are in receipt of a letter from one of our readers, from which we take the following:

"I was interested in the "Kettle" copy, in brass, of our quarter eagle, illustrated in the January issue. I am sending six pieces that may be of interest to your readers. Kettle seems to have been the name of a die sinker, probably English, who made dies for several varieties of counters or jetons so popular at the beginning of the last century, just as Lauer, of Nuremberg, copied many current coins in miniature at a later date.

This was not to deceive, but as "spiel munze" or "play money." To get the plated copy of the quarter eagle I am sending I chased through several townships, thinking from a boy's description that I was after a fine dime of 1803. You can imagine my disgust when I caught up with it. That was more than 40 years ago. The writer of the above sent six specimens of the "Kettle issues," all having the name of Kettle on one side or the other of the piece. One of them had the name on both sides. The date on one of the pieces indicates that it could not have been struck earlier than 1837. The brief descriptions of the six pieces follow:

Two specimens of the $2½ gold, similar to the piece illustrated last month. Five-dollar gold piece, 1803, similar in type.

Jeton Obv. bust of King William IIII. Inscription, "William IIII. Died June 20, 1837. Rev., St. George slaying the dragon. Inscription, "By Trampling on Liberty I Lost the Reins."

Jeton Bust of George III. Inscription, "God Protects the Just." Rev., a crown, rays above. Inscription, "Fear God, Honor the King."

Jeton Rose, shamrock and thistle. Inscription, "Prosperity to the United Kingdoms." Rev., two clasped hands, a crown above. Inscription, "England and Ireland United."

BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF MEDALLISTS. By L. Forrer. Page 145, Vol. III. KETTLE & SONS (Brit.) "Die-sinkers and Counter Manufacturers of Birmingham; in the early part of the nineteenth century. Their signature K. & S. occurs on the following pieces which I have come across: Medal on the Peace of Paris, 1814, with busts jugate to r. of the Tsar, the King of Prussia, the Duke of Wellington, and the Marshal Blucher;—Imitation Seven-Shilling Piece, 1798, signed H. K. (H. Kettle);—Imitation Spade Guinea of George III., in brass, struck to commemorate various Musical Festivals in the Provinces, etc. Most of Kettle's counters are in brass and the medals in tin."

A few other notes on hand add nothing to the above information. The pieces in imitation of the U. S. $2½ and $5 gold coins are variously described as "game counters," "gambling tokens," "counterfeits," "counters," "jetons," "patterns," et cetera. The pieces are well struck and appear to be the work of an engraver of considerable ability.

It would be interesting to learn of additional pieces bearing the name of KETTLE, or as Mr. Forrer states, K. & S., or H. K.

PLANS WORK ON AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATICS

Being engaged upon research work upon Australian numismatic specimens, and upon which it is hoped, something authoritive will be published at the termination of the war, I would be grateful if you could publish in your magazine, a request for information, something on the lines indicated below:

> Information upon, and location of, any unpublished, scarce or unusual numismatic specimens of Australia. The information is required in the compilation of manuscript for publication. Particularly references to "Adelaide Ingots"; "Adelaide Sovereigns; Patterns, Trial Pieces; and proofs of Australian coins," together with the pedigrees of rarer specimens. Location, date and original "peso," its inscriptions, mints and assayers marks are wanted in the case of "Holey Dollars"; also whether the "Five Shilling" stamp is on the obverse or reverse of the original peso, and whether divided by an ornament. Rubbings of specimens would be appreciated.

Yours sincerely,

COUNTERFEIT COINS

"A man who buys coins, trusting merely to his theoretic perusal of medallic books, will find himself woefully mistaken. He ought to study coins first, where only they can be studied, in themselves. Nor can it be matter of wonder, or implication of caprice, that a medallist of skill should, at one perception, pronounce upon the veracity or falsehood of a medal; for the powers of the human eye, employed in certain lines of science, are amazing. Hence, a student can distinguish a book among a thousand similar, and quite alike to every other eye; hence, a shepherd can discern and characterize every ram and ewe in his flock, tho they strike everybody else as uniformity itself; hence, a sailor can know of what country a vessel is at an immense distance; hence, anyone knows his friend, tho in a crowd at the further end of a street, where any marks of him were unattainable to an indifferent spectator; hence the medallist can in an instant say, "this is a false coin; and this is a true," tho to other people no distinction be perceivable."

NEW DIME TO HONOR ROOSEVELT

On May 17, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau announced that the current Mercury head dime will be replaced with a dime featuring the portrait of the late President Roosevelt. He expects the Roosevelt dimes to be ready about the end of this year.

"COINS OF BIBLE TIMES" THRILL CHURCHMEN

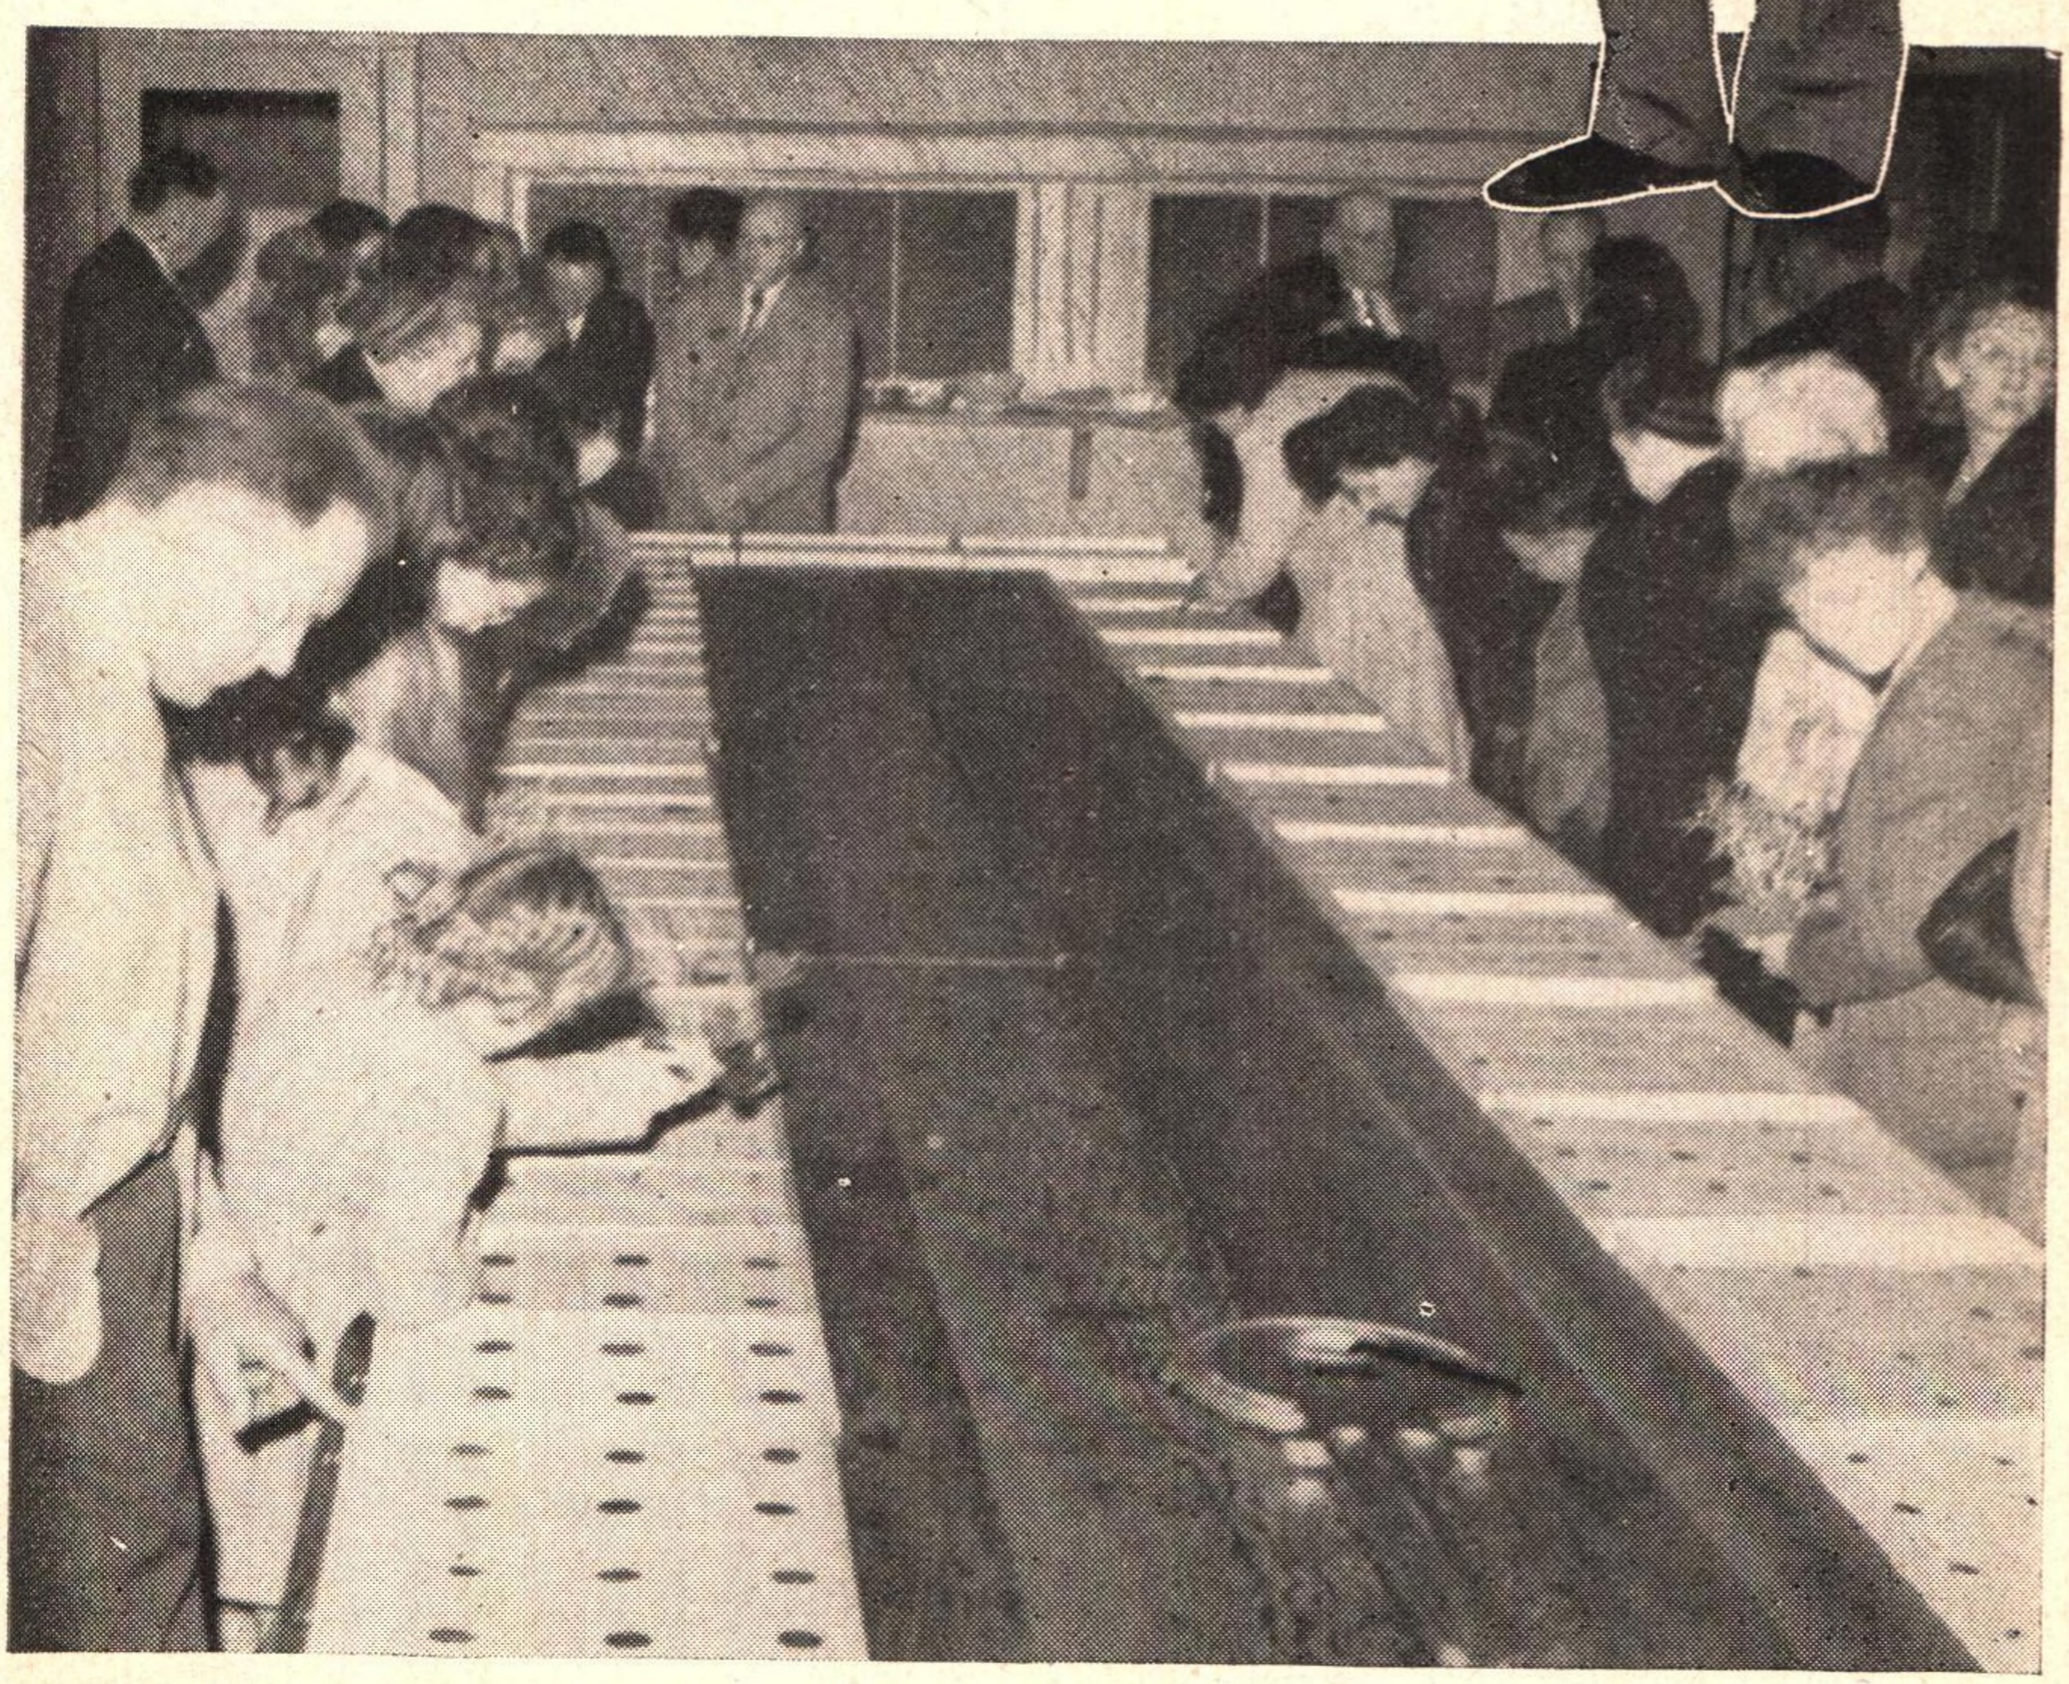

"Coins of Bible Times" was the subject of an illustrated talk given by Dr. C. Glenn Curtis, secretary of Orange County Coin Club, last month at Brea (California) Congregational Church.

The president of the board of trustees of the church—who introduced Dr. Curtis—called him a "coin exhibitor and a coin sharer" as well as a "coin collector" because Dr. Curtis has spent so much time and money in making it possible for others to enjoy his large collection of coins from all over the world. Instead of telling about the coin itself, Dr. Curtis had prepared a one-minute talk about the historical background of each coin. These talks were supplemented by colored photographic slides of both sides of each coin greatly enlarged on a screen in front of the church.

The first coin shown by Dr. Curtis was the "daric" of ancient Persia's Darius the Great. Then followed coins of Philip II of Macedon, Alexander the Great, Ptolemy, Cleopatra, and others down to Hadrian. The "widow's mite" also was shown.

A large key (see photo at right) was given to Dr. Curtis. An engraved silver plate said "the key was to open the hearts of the members of the church for Dr. Curtis." After the illustrated talk the two hundred persons present browsed among an elaborate exhibit of coins owned by the speaker. (Part of exhibit shown below).

DEATHS

David H. Graham, A. N. A. No. 7117, passed away on March 8, at Brandon, Manitoba. He was in his 55th year.

Born at Murray Harbour, Prince Edward Island, he moved to Ontario at an early age.

He entered the services of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad as a telegrapher and in 1907 left to work for the Canadian Northern Railroad. At the time of his death, he was freight and passenger agent for the latter Road, having been stationed at Flin Flon, Manitoba, for the last 15 years.

Mr. Graham specialized chiefly in Canadian and British coins.

One of the older members of the A. N. A., Lafayette Fridy of West Philadelphia, Pa., died on April 23. He was a member of the A. N. A. since 1922 and held membership No. 2332.

Mr. Fridy was born and raised at Mountville, a small town about six miles out of Lancaster, and as a young man, took employment with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He lived at Columbia, Penna., a few miles from Mountville; during his early years with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company—about 50 or more years ago, he moved to Philadelphia, for a more convenient location to his employment, having for a number of years been locomotive engineer running express trains from Philadelphia, to Harrisburg, and return.

For many years Mr. Fridy was greatly interested in the collection of broken bank bills and transportation tokens, of which he had quite a large collection.

For possibly 20 years he was retired from employment, after serving about 50 years with the Penna. Railroad Company, since which time he devoted much time to his collection.

NOTES OF THE TRADE

A Special Price List has just been issued by Lu Riggs, 604 Race St., Cincinnati 2, Ohio. It offers an interesting assortment of U. S. coins, being especially strong in minor denominations. A copy will be sent without charge to those who send a 3 cent stamp and their address.

French's of 20 State Street, Troy, N. Y., will conduct a mail sale on June 16th. The catalogue offers many modern U. S. coins in desirable condition. They too, have discontinued charging bidders 5% commission for executing bids. Catalogue sent on request.

Bulletin Number Three has been received from Frank Causey Wilson, 751 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. Aside from offering recently issued U. S. coins in quantities, it contains the advertisements of various dealers. Mr. Wilson's Bulletin is attractively printed and appears to be edited with unusual care.

Sol Kaplan, 18 E. 4th St., Cincinnati 2, Ohio, conducted a mail sale on May 21. The catalogue listed a number of interesting consignments and Mr. Kaplan reports satisfactory results. He has another sale planned for the near future, and will send catalogues to those who request them.

A Public Auction of coins was held on April 27, and 28, at the Hotel Charles, Springfield, Mass., by the Tatham Stamp & Coin Co. Included in the sale were coins from the estate of Myron Parsons.

A special list of military decorations has been issued by Kenneth W. Lee, 623 Security Bldg., Glendale 3, Calif. While the offering is not extensive, it contains some desirable items. Mr. Lee spends seven days a week working in a defense plant, but he will do his best to answer your request promptly.

The Celina Coin Co. (T. & C. Brandts) of Celina, Ohio, have just issued their No. 14 Price List. It offers a nice selection of Colonial and early U. S. coins in better than usual condition. The issue is limited so send for it at once.

The 1945 edition of "The American Catalogue of all U. S. Coins" is now obtainable from the publisher, R. A. Wilson, P. O. Box 385, La Tijera Station, Los Angeles 43, Calif. The catalogue is unusual in that it gives the number coined, the prices paid, as well as the prices asked. Such an arrangement presupposes certain discrepancies and while they appear, they are not of major importance. Interesting reading for the beginner and critic alike.

On March 13, the Wm. A. Knapp collection was sold by B. Max Mehl of Fort Worth, Texas. It contained many desirable pieces in choice condition, and realized a total of $23,930.76. Some of the prices realized are as follows:—

COLLECTORS ASKED TO BE ON THE LOOKOUT FOR NEW ISSUES OF COINS

The last five years have been rather unproductive ones as far as new issues of coins is concerned. The few that have appeared were mostly issued to replace coins struck in a more useful metal, and generally they are wretched things, comparable to our own steel cent which proved so unsatisfactory.

The time will come, God speed the day, when the war will cease and nations will be able to devote their time and energy to peace and neglected domestic problems. As in the past, we will have post-war monetary problems. This coming situation is bound to produce new monetary systems, new denominations and new coin types. The joyful nations of the world will have many reasons to issue commemorative coins. Collectors who today grumble because of inactivity will find themselves unable to keep up with new issues.

THE NUMISMATIST is anxious to record all new issues as soon as they appear in circulation. Ernst Kraus, who is Editor of New Issues, has done a splendid job during the last year but he will need the help of every member of the A. N. A. as soon as foreign mints start working on full time. Any collector receiving an unrecorded coin is requested to get in touch with Mr. Kraus. If you have relatives or friends in the Armed Forces abroad, ask them to be on the lookout for new issues of coins. Report all new issues to Ernst Kraus, 444 Madison Ave., New York City.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

James Clark of Jamestown, N. Y. The stamps were of the most choice material, mostly all proofs, and of many varieties. They represent a life's work of collecting this country's most valuable stamps. This can also be said of Mr. Clark's coin collection. The display of the early copper cents was most interesting; varieties for each year from 1793 to 1800, extremely fine to uncirculated. The gold display started from a $4 gold piece up to medals five inches in diameter; coins and medals that you seldom will see in any museum.

The subject—"RESOLVED: That the Prices of American Coins Are Very Much Inflated and Soon Will Drop"—brought out much enlightening information.

It was generally agreed, however, that the price of coins has risen because (1) there are so many more coin collectors now; (2) speculation in coins because of increased buying power of the people; (3) coins are a sound investment; (4) there is no sales tax on coins.

General opinion of the 65 members present was that the price of coins will not go down until there is a general drop of commodity prices.

Many unusual exhibits of coins were shown and the usual coin auction was well, happily and noisily patronized.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular meeting May 7, was held in the meeting room at the National Museum and the new place was well accepted by all members. Thirty-eight members answered the roll call.

Our speaker for the evening was Lewis M. Reagan, Prof. of Math. at the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, and general secretary of the A. N. A. He had as his subjects the A. N. A. and numismatics in general. Mr. Reagan was found to be a very interesting speaker and his history of the A. N. A. from its beginning to the present day, the problems due to the war was enlightening as to why our magazine came to us a little late at times. The reason we have coin clubs brought to light an explanation that was interesting to hear and a good reason to tell the one that stays at home. They were for friendship, good times and for learning more about the coins and paper money in use today and in the past. He announced the addition of slides for use of the societies for descriptive work of the old and rare and unusual coins.

No coins were missing in his collection as he had a series of almost 40 specialties and he could easily start another with the addition of a series of five or six new coins to start it. One of the series was of famous women and the coins on display showed his good judgement in choosing this group. Another was of ecclesiastical subjects as they showed great works of art by the artist, of yesteryear. The interest in numismatics was greatly increased with the war and also a boon to dealers. A more pleasing and interesting speaker on this subject would be hard to get and the club gave a rising vote of thanks for his visit to our club and invited him down any time his duties allow him as the door will always be open and the latch string will be out and handy for him.

Three new members were taken into the society, they were Mrs. Nels H. Nelson, Harvey David Wolf, and Joseph Jay Wolf.

Endorsement of exhibitions for the invitation to display our material in the Washington Cathedral was given by Mr. Weikert, Major Ball,

Mr. Conger, Mr. Leachman, Mr. Jones, and President Major Moss.

Mr. Jones was made Publicity Chairman sending notification of change of address to the papers and to see that all notices were given plenty of space.

The guests for the evening were Dr. Walter W. Davis from the office of Strategic Services, George Patterson, Civil Service Commission and John M. Telleen of the Office of Censorship and of Ridgewood, N. J.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

Advertising Contracts: These are available, covering periods of three, six and twelve consecutive months for display space as listed in the above Table of Rates, and are necessary if the schedule of reduced rates is to apply. If the advertiser prefers not to accept the Contract, such reduced rates will be granted only upon payment in advance for the period desired.

References: All advertisers who submit copy for the first time are definitely requested to furnish therewith banking or other satisfactory references.

Available Space Units: Practical considerations restrict the allocation of space units to those listed in the above table. Any amount of space is available IF these units or a combination of them are used. Unless contrary instructions are given, copy will be cut if found too full for the space designated; if no designation is made, it shall be understood the amount of space is left to the discretion of the Editor.

Classified Ads: To meet the desires of those who may require less space than the minimum display of one-eighth page, a classified section has been established. The cost is computed at three cents per word each insertion; initials (two), numbers and abbreviations to count as words. Remittance must accompany copy. These will be set in 6 point Roman; no display type.

Deadline: Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue.

Miscellaneous: Please furnish copy separately from your letter of transmittal. Advertising copy included in the body of a letter usually has to be re-typed for the printer; this should not be required.

Advertising copy should be prepared with minute care. Carelessness invites error—something which both advertiser and publisher are anxious to avoid. Use only one side of the sheet.

In the absence of an Advertising Contract, when payment in advance for any number of consecutive months has been made, if change of copy has not been received by the 10th of the month for the next issue, the latest preceding advertisement will be run.

Advertisers may use a trade name, but, except in the case of an incorporated concern, the name of the proprietor or of some other responsible person connected with the firm must also appear in the advertisement.

The right to edit copy, to require payment in advance, and to decline any advertisement is specifically reserved. Superlatives prohibited.

All correspondence relating to advertising should be addressed to the Business Manager (see above). Make all remittances payable to the American Numismatic Association.

Very Important Public Auction Sale

June 30th, 1945

OUTSTANDING COLLECTION of United States large copper Cents. Fifteen different varieties dated 1793, including such great rarities as Crosby 8 F, only a few known to exist; also Liberty cap type Crosby 12 K and 13 L. Over 30 different varieties dated 1794, including an outstanding specimen of Hays 3. Also Hays 8 showing all of the stars on reverse between the milling, both of which are ranked among the very finest known.

IN ADDITION to the above are a pair dated 1799, perfect and overdate, both specimens far superior to many offered in recent years; also an unusual pair of 1804 perfect and broken dies. Other choice cents from 1801 to 1814 inclusive will be offered, many of which equal or excel Cents sold recently in New York from the celebrated Newcomb collection.

VARIOUS OTHER CHOICE and interesting numismatic items, among which are two uncut sheets of Fractional Currency, one of the 5c Jefferson and the other a 3c Washington (dark curtain), with not a crease or wrinkle to mar their beauty. Two very rare uncut sheets of National Bank notes (large size), also many other choice and desirable items, such as United States coins from the Half Cent up to and including the gold Double Eagle denominations.

Those NOT on my mailing list who wish to participate in this important sale, may secure a catalogue promptly by sending name and address to

Gentlemen:

I was so well pleased with the results you obtained in selling my duplicates in November of 1944 that I have decided to place my collection of large cents and half cents with you. You may use your own discretion in describing and selling the collection.

The formation over a period of years afforded me considerable pleasure and I greatly appreciate the effort you spent in helping me assemble this collection.

Should I decide to dispose of any other portions of my collection at some future date you may be sure that you will be consulted.

Sincerely,

(Signed) C. DAVID PIERCE.

If you buy moderately priced coins of the better class

I have just purchased a collection of U. S. coins, strong in specimens in very nice condition: Half Dollars in early dates, a choice lot of extremely fine Half Cents, a good lot (no rarities) of desirable early large Cents.

Plenty of 2, 3, and 5 Cents (nickel), Half Dimes, and many eagle and Indian head Cents—all good coins, at prices that will enable you to purchase them.

This ad will not interest scalpers who may think I am a beginner and do not know values. Let me say that I started my first collection of coins in 1885; I attended all the coin auctions in Chicago for many years, and have broken up a number of valuable collections.

DO YOU COLLECT U. S. CURRENCY?

If so, you need the Philpott Tables, showing Registers, Treasurers, and Secretaries of the Treasury, and their tenure of office.

Which is the rarer combination: Bruce and Jordon or Rosecrans and Morgan?

How long and for what years was the Jeffries and Spinner combination current?

And there are a thousand other perplexing questions on U. S. Currency signature combinations which the Tables answer.

With the Philpott Tables the student can intelligently study the 46 different signature combinations which appear on U. S. Currency, beginning with Chittenden and Spinner in 1861, down to Julian and Morgenthau in 1945.

Due to a recent "find" of this material I am able to supply virtually all bills in lots of 10 or 100 in v.g. to unc. crisp condition. COINS OF THE WORLD

TWENTIETH CENTURY ISSUES

Second Edition

Collectors will welcome the second edition of this indispensable reference work on modern coins. The first edition (1938) has been out of print for the past three years, and a great many new collectors have never been able to obtain a copy. Those who own an original copy will find the second edition revised, corrected, and brought up to date with many new listings and illustrations. Values have been adjusted to the present day market.

COINS OF THE WORLD is a compilation of numismatic knowledge gathered over a long period of years, and the original publication of this work gave collectors the first authoritative reference on modern coins. Outstanding authorities, collectors, and dealers have contributed their knowledge to the production of this book, making it as nearly complete and correct as possible.

Approximately 4,000 coins are listed and described, with their values given, and nearly 1,500 halftone illustrations show the types of all issues.

FIFTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

THE FIRST UNITED STATES INDIAN CHIEF PEACE MEDAL

By DAMON G. DOUGLAS

"Records relating to agreements and treaties between the British and the Indians date back as far as 1664."[1] It became customary to distribute "to the chiefs of Indian tribes, with whom treaties were concluded, medals bearing on the obverse the effigy of the reigning British sovereign, and on the reverse friendly legends and emblems of peace."[2] "They served to gratify the love of the savages for white man's finery and appealed to them as emblems of fealty or chieftainship."[3] Because of this latter function "each government caused a search to be made for, and replaced with its own, the medals issued by its predecessor."[3] Thus at the successful termination of the revolution it became highly expedient for the Confederation of the now independent and sovereign colonies to mark the transfer of Indian allegiance by such an exchange of medals.[4]

On April 24, 1784, Dr. Arthur Lee of Virginia was appointed by the Continental Congress as one of the Indian Commissioners.[5] He left Congress June 3, 1784 to assume the duties of this new post. On February 27, 1785 the New Hampshire delegates in Congress, in a report to the president of their state said "that on the 23rd instant the honorable Arthur Lay [Lee] Esqr. arrived in this city [New York] and presented to Congress several medals given by the King of Great Britain to the Indians of the middle district which they had delivered to the commissioners for settling a treaty with them."[6] Mr. John Kean, delegate from South Carolina, on April 28, 1786, moved: "That the Board of Treasury ascertain the number and value of the Medals received by the Commissioners appointed to treat with the Indians, from the said Indians, and to have an equal number, with the Arms of the United States made of silver and returned to the Chiefs from whom these were received." The Congress "Ordered That the above Motion be referred to the Board of Treasury to take Order."[7]

The matter received further attention from Congress on July 21, 1787 when it was "Ordered, That the Secretary of War report to Congress the number of medals large and small and gorgets necessary for the chiefs of the five Nations and other Northern and Western tribes and the four Southern Nations with the form of a commission to be presented to the same in the name of the United States."[8]

"In a conference of the Chiefs of the Cherokee nation with the Secretary of War, January 5, 1792, Bloody Fellow . . . presented the Secretary of War with two silver medals. 'These medals were presented by Colonel Martin, about four or five years ago, but as some disturbances have since happened, they are now returned, to obtain others from the United States . . .' (Joseph Martin was one of the four commissioners sent in 1785 to treat with the Creeks, Cherokees, and other Southern Indians. What these medals were like is not known today.)"[9]

There has hitherto appeared no published record of any steps having been taken toward the actual production of such medals for the United States by the Confederation. Writers upon the subject seem to have assumed that the matter was held in abeyance until after the institution of our present federal form of Government and that those issued during the Presidency of George Washington were the first prepared for this purpose by the United States.

However a previously unpublished memorial to Congress establishes that some further action had been taken by the Confederation. It reads:

To the Honorable the Congress of the United States[10]
The memorial of Thomas Goadsby humbly sheweth.

That a contract in behalf of your memorialist was made with the Board of Treasury for the furnishing of two Dye's (at a stipulated price) for the purpose of striking medals for the Savages—

That your memorialist at a very considerable expence had the dye's executed, (he conceived agreeable to contract, and the orders of the Board of Treasury) which he presented together with the proof medal herewith enclos'd, but that for reasons, your memorialist is uninformed of the Board of Treasury refused payment.—

Your memorialist therefore prays that Congress will order an enquiry to be made why the engagement of the Board of Treasury with your memorialist shall not be fulfill'd, And that he may have an opportunity of being heard should any thing be contradicted, set forth in this his memorial.

And your memorialist as in duty bound shall ever pray.—

Thomas Goadsby

The original document bears the following endorsement:

"Read May 8, 1788
Referred to the board of treasury to report with [blot] medal"

And, in a different hand:

"Reported June 18th—1788—"

The report appears in the Journals as follows:

"Report of Board of Treasury on memorial of T. Goadsby[11]
The Board of Treasury to whom was referred the Memorial of Thomas Goadsby
Beg leave to Report
That the agreement referred to in the Memorial was made by the Board with Mr. Albion Cox late of this city; in his own person; and as the Board conceived in his own behalf.

That when any person duly authorized by Mr. Cox shall apply for a fulfilment of the conditions entered into on the part of the United States, the Board will be ready to execute the same.

All which is humbly submitted.

Walter Livingston
Arthur Lee

No further record of the transaction has yet come to light. Whether the contemplated manufacture and distribution of silver copies of the medal ever took place is not known. There seems to be an absence from the record of Indian Archeology of specimens of silver medals not already satisfactorily attributed to European or our later Federal government. However, in Goadsby's memorial and in its endorsement we have indisputable evidence that at least one impression was produced from the "Dyes."

The accompanying photograph and description are those of a medal, hitherto unattributed, which suggests itself as a production from these dies. The poor quality of the impression, a double struck specimen, may argue against its use as a proof copy by Goadsby in his attempt to collect for the dies. But a comparison of its devices with those of known Indian Peace medals of the period immediately preceding the Confederation evinces the suitability of their general design for meeting the requirements that had become traditional for such pieces.

The first essential was a portrayal of the sovereignity to which the Indian fealty was to attach. The Confederation and its Congress lacked a chief executive and recognized no individual whose likeness could appropriately typify it. Thus the device of the arms of the United States, surrounded by the familiar thirteen linked chain, would seem an excellent solution.

For the opposite die, the friendly scene of Quaker and Indian smoking peace pipe, of the widely distributed 1757 medal of the "Friendly Association for Regaining and Preserving Peace with the Indians by Pacific Means,"[12] had been followed, in 1764 and 1766, with the "Happy While United," British Officer and Indian, issue of George III.[13] Thus the scene depicted on the present medal was in this tradition except for the change to a female figure as the Indian's companion. A similarly emblematical female appeared on what are believed to have been the first Indian Peace medals of the Washington administration in 1789.[14]

The general impression of commercial crudeness in the execution of the dies is not inconsistent with the state of the art in New York in the mid 1780's. On September 3, 1785 Rufus King at New York had written of "a company here who brought with them from England the various machines and implements for a coinage."[15] James F. Atlee, die sinker later for the Machin's Mills coinage, had established some kind of business relationship with Albion Cox as evidenced by their joint legal actions in the New York Mayor's Court in 1786.

The die work of the "proof" medal, while somewhat more ambitious in the design of the obverse, is quite compatible with the level of attainment of the sinkers of the dies for the contemporary early state coppers and token issues. Both obverse and reverse eagles are similar in execution to those appearing on several of the New York productions. Thus it appears that the talent required for the execution of the medal dies was available in or near New York at any time between the date of the Congressional order and that of Goadsby's memorial.

In conclusion, the reader may decide for himself whether the title of this article may be correctly applied to the illustrated medal or, if not the same, to that submitted by Goadsby with his memorial or to some other. But it may be accepted as established that at least one United States Indian Peace medal was produced on order of the Continental Congress under the Articles of Confederation.

The medal, here described, has been in the private cabinet of Mr. Wayte Raymond for many years and his kindness in furnishing the cuts for its illustration and in giving his permission to here publish them for the first time is gratefully acknowledged.

Obverse: Two central figures standing, partly facing; the left, an Indian wearing only a breech cloth and feathered bonnet, hands partly extended, under his left foot, a tommy hawk: the right, a partially draped female, hair flowing, right hand extended holding a pipe of peace below which an olive branch is extended from her left hand, above and around her head a cluster of stars, her right foot resting on a cluster of arrows, behind her a staff capped with a pileus: between the figures and in the background, two human heads; to the right, upon a heap, a spread winged eagle: to the left of the Indian, a grove of trees beneath which (indistinctly) Indians.

4 During the war, in 1780, Virginia distributed to various Indian Chiefs medals bearing the arms of the state and figures of a white man and an Indian. An earlier committee report in the continental congress in 1778 had recommended "that also a silver Medal be presented in the name of Congress to Capt. White Eyes, [Chief of the Delaware Nation,] to perpetuate the memory of that great esteem which Congress have for his Merit." THE LAST COLONIAL AMERICAN COBS, 1823-24

(Ne Plus Ultra)

By ARNOLD PERPALL

It seems to be the opportunity, possibly the duty of science to reduce things to simplicity, and in the field of numismatic research many discoveries result indirectly from trial and error. This observer suggests more of the trial and less of the error of premature conclusion. As New York at this time appears to be the center of interest in Hispano-American numismatics, he feels impelled to initiate further investigation into the case of the coins attributed to Mendoza (City and Province, The Argentine). This attribution of the specimens illustrated herewith is generally accepted in this vicinity and the group includes all the known and available pieces, some indication at least of their scarcity; occasional pre-war sales in Europe not only gave them to Mendoza but also described them as of the greatest rarity. Further detailed discussion of the coins is now omitted purposely as the pictures should quite suffice.

Solely from the material evidence it is reasonable to assume the validity of the coinage, as we have here the ½, 1, 2 and 4 reales denominations in silver with varieties all linked together by one or more elements in the design, convincingly indicating a common place of origination.

However there is lacking and now needed the evidence and authority of actual documentation, preferably of a contemporary nature (1823-24). It is the hope that as the result of this presentation, some students of Argentine history will appreciate the advantage of cooperative research and graciously contribute any missing information they may have, particularly from among those collectors in the Argentine itself, who no doubt are in the best position to supply the necessary confirmation. "Taullard," "Rosa" and "Medina" lend encouragement but not conviction to this writer, which perhaps may be from the difficulties of interpretation, definition as well as from the lack of illustrations.

Should sufficient additional information be forthcoming in response to this article, it may be assumed that a further article in summation will follow in due course, the whole to constitute an adequate permanent record of the last serious issue of the cob coinage of the Colonial American Era.

Historically there is a peculiar combination of circumstance as to Mendoza, sometimes called the "Valley Forge of South American Independence," and it is difficult to reconcile the fact that the Liberator San Martin passed through there about the year of 1810 with the mintage of 1823 now the subject of discussion, the design of which perpetuated the Pillars of Hercules and the Royalist Coat of Arms.

This attempt at pooling knowledge for the benefit of all is frankly an experiment and the result is anticipated with interest and some curiosity. If possible the case should be proven beyond question, but in any event each student or collector may be free to draw his own conclusion on any point lacking in proof.

Photographs selected and arranged by the Author who wishes to thank the following for their kind co-operation: American Numismatic Society; New Netherlands Coin Co.; Wayte Raymond; and Hans M. F. Schulman.

ARGENTINA'S NEW MINT

The new Argentine Mint in Buenos Aires was inaugurated on December 27, 1944, with appropriate ceremonies, attended by His Excellency, the President of the Republic and the Minister of Finance.

The old building of the Mint was constructed in 1881, and remodeled in 1911 to meet the growing demand for coins, paper money, and other official values, but eventually outgrew its quarters and a new building became an imperative need.

The new structure is modern in every respect and will meet the requirements of the country not only in respect of coinage, but also in the engraving and printing of notes and other official documents for many years to come.

The inauguration of this new Mint is the crowning achievement of the able Director of the Argentine Mint, Dr. Antonio A. Garcia Morales, who since he took office in 1927, has labored incessantly to make it a reality.

It was not until 1937, however, that a plot of government owned land in the New Port District of the Federal Capital was set aside by official decree as the site of the new structure. On August 24, 1940 bids were invited for the construction of the Mint on the basis of the general plans and specifications drawn up by Dr. Garcia Morales, and work was begun on June 10, 1941.

The plot of land is 234,189 square feet in extent, of which 123,216 square feet are occupied by the building, which consists of four floors, a large covered patio, two basements, and nine vaults.

The Mechanical Section houses the Coinage Department including equipment for melting the metal, rolling the strip, and cutting and striking the blanks; the Engraving Department for the production of engraved notes; a General Printing Department with rotary presses, and the Lithographic Department.

Aside from elaborate administrative and executive offices, and complete machine shops, the Mint is equipped with two large dining rooms for employees, adequate kitchens, and rest rooms.

The structure is a monument of modern industrial architecture, and, as the newest of the world's great mints, will no doubt serve as a model for similar institutions throughout the world in the reconstruction period following the war.

The following table shows the production of Argentine coins by the Mint from its establishment in 1881 to November 30, 1944:

HERALDRY

By DUDLEY BUTLER

Installment IV

Unusual, Curious and Modern

In my previous articles I have adhered rather closely to the stereotype charges and rules governing the practice of heraldry. I have tried, as well as I could, to pick out the high-lights and yet give a general view of the subject. In this article I propose, with the readers' permission, to touch briefly upon unusual and curious charges as well as some of very modern creation.

One of the charges which occasionally appear on escutcheons is the "Manche." (See figure G) This curious charge, which, to the uniniated, looks like nothing at all but a grotesque figure, is intended to represent a sleeve. During the 13th and 14th centuries it was the custom to wear long hanging sleeves and this device was intended to represent it. Why it should have been adopted as a heraldic charge I have no idea.

Another curious charge is the "Clarion" or rest. (See figure F) Some authorities claim that it represents a part of the armor of a Knight, an addition or attachment to the breast-plate on which he rested his lance. Others claim that it represents a musical instrument, such as the Pipes of Pan.

In figure A I give an illustration of a curious and unusual crest depicted in Gelre's "Wapanboeck" which is of German origin. It is a man's leg in chain armor with spur rising from a crown. (Illustration from Fox-Davies)

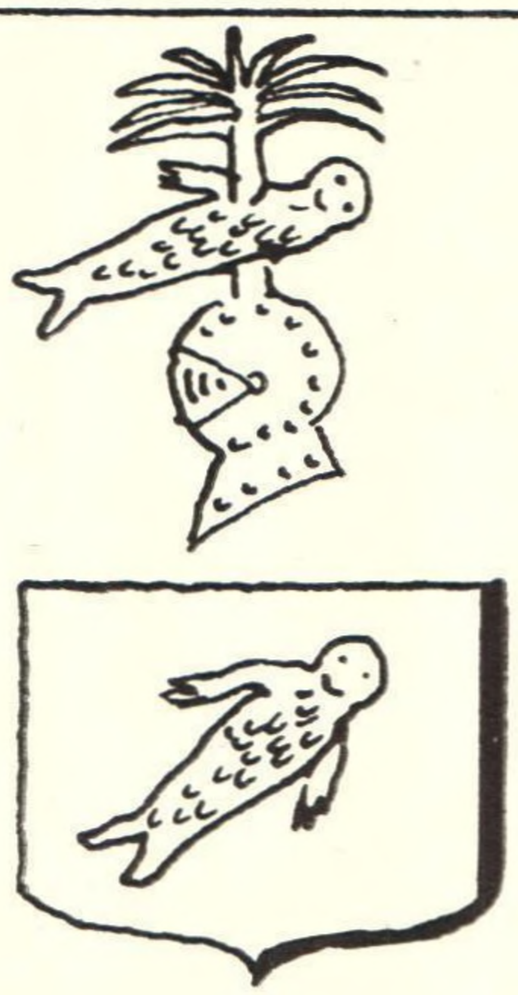

Another very curious crest and coat of arms is an example depicted in the "St. Christopher and Arlberg Register," also German. You will notice that the charge on the shield and the crest are almost the same. In a drawing made at that early date it is often difficult to decide exactly what the artist intended to depict. But after very careful study under a magnifying glass I think that the drawing tries to depict a fish with a human face. (See figure B) In the crest the same curious fish again appears but this time it is transfixed by what appears to be a sort of palm tree. (Illustration from Fox-Davies) The reader will please remember that the drawings of this period were extremely crude and I have tried to reproduce them exactly as they were painted on these ancient parchment leaves.

Another example is taken from the Zurich "Waffenrolle" where again the charge on the shield is identical with the crest. Here we have a double headed rooster. (See figure C) I think it would be very interesting and instructive to know just how and why this coat of arms and crest were granted but I have been unable to find any explanation. (Illustration from Fox-Davies)

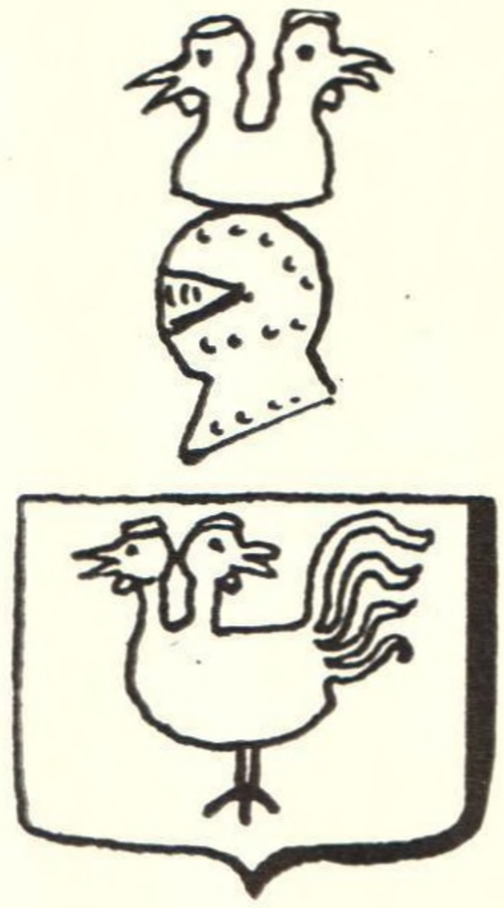

I would now like to turn your attention to some examples of quite modern Heraldry. The crest of the Great Central Railway granted February 25, 1898 is shown in Figure D. It displays an English type locomotive facing, head on and between two wings. In heraldic terms it would be blazoned "all proper." (Illustration from Fox-Davies)

FAXON

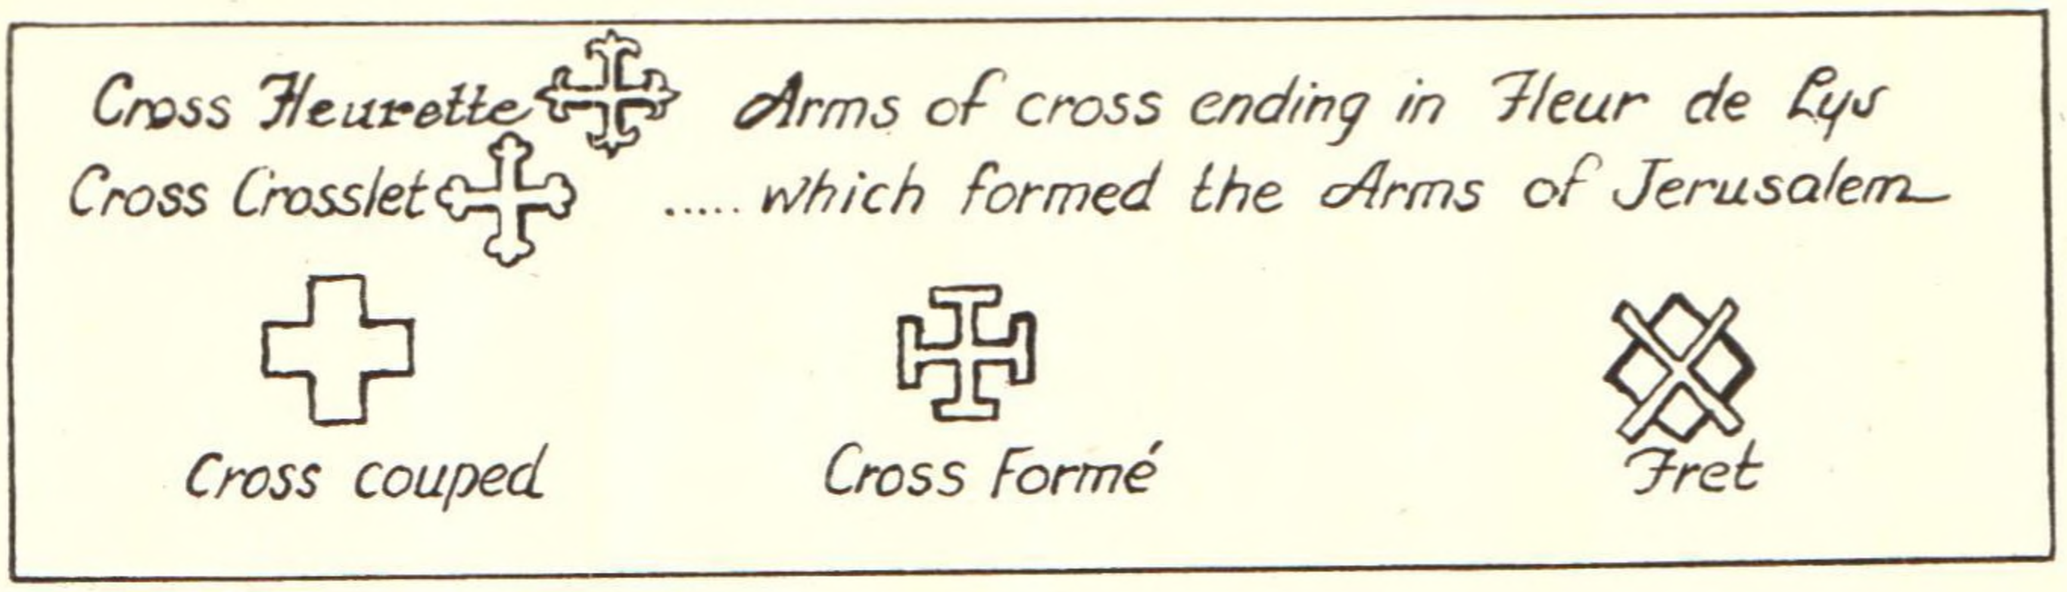

Under figure E we have the arms of the Swindon family. The illustration taken from Fox-Davies gives no account of why the arms were granted but from the fact that an extremely early type of English locomotive is depicted in a chief, together with the fact that the crest is composed of a hand and arm holding two hammers I infer that the family was prominent in rail road building. This being the case it is difficult to understand why a Bishop's Miter should be inserted.

Short List of Heraldic Terms

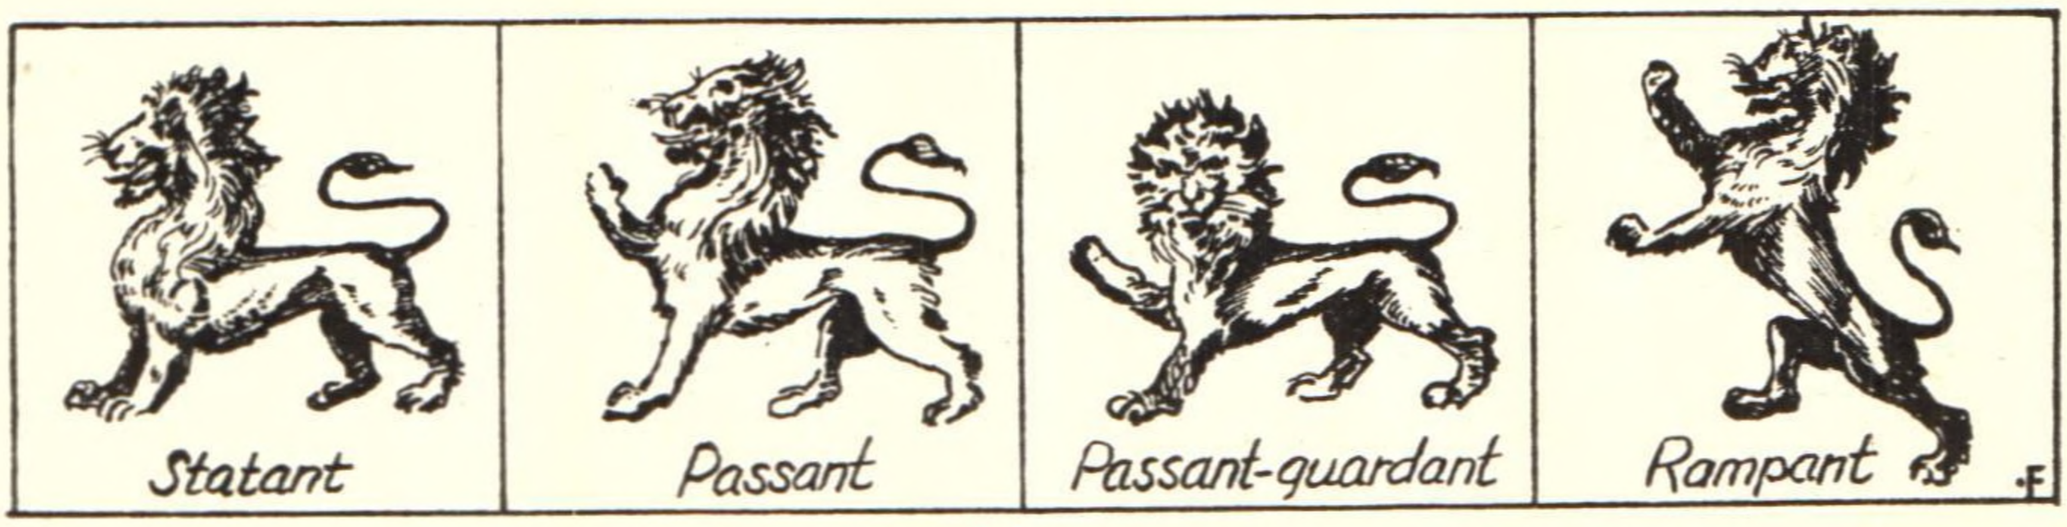

Lines

Engrailed, Invected, Undé, Indented, Dancette, Embattled, Potent,

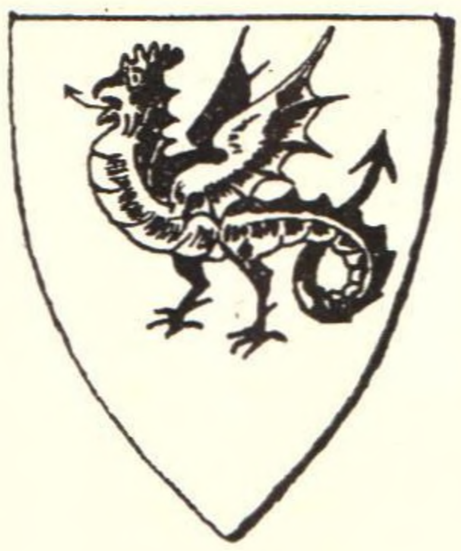

Crosses

Cross couped, Cross Formé, Cross Fleuretté, arms of cross ending in Fleur de Lys, Cross-Crosslet, which formed the Arms of Jerusalem.
Fret

Lions

The Lion: Statant, standing in profile, looking before him. Passant, as if walking, with Dexter paw raised, looking forward. Passant-guardant, walking in same manner as Passant but with head affronté. Rampant, standing on Sinister hind-leg and both fore-legs elevated.

The Cockatrice is a charge often used in Heraldry. This mythical monster has the head, body, and wings of a Cock and the tail of a Dragon. As natural histories are deficient in details connected with Cockatrices, I have translated and condensed the best account I have found which is from a MS (No. 10,074) in the Royal Library in Brussels, which reads "When the Cock is past seven years old an egg grows within him, whereat he greatly wonders. He seeks privately a warm place, such as a dunghill, and scratches a hole for a nest, to which he goes ten times daily. A toad privately watches him and examines the nest every time the Cock leaves it to see if the egg has been laid. When the toad finds the egg he rejoices much, and at length hatches it, producing an animal with the head, neck, and legs of a Cock and the rest of his body that of a serpent. And that is a Cockatrice."

Trees, the Oak, Pine, Olive, Palm and Laurel are the most commonly blazoned. The following terms are used in describing this class:

Accrued—Full blown. Barbed—Leaved. Blasted—A branch destitute of leaves. Couped—Cut off evenly. Eradicated—Torn up by the roots. Slipped—Torn or broken off. Adumbrated—Under shadow.

Additional Terms

Ambulant—Walking. Cap-à-pie—In full armour. Assurgent—Rising from the sea. Engouled—Being swallowed or devoured. Fresné—Applied to horses in a rampant position. Genuant—In a kneeling posture. Purfled—A mantle garnished with fur. Vested—Clothed. Usually applied in blazoning a part of the body as "a dexter arm couped, vested gules, hand proper." When an entire figure is clothed it is commonly described Habited.

Annodated—Curved somewhat in the form of a letter S. Arondé—Rounded off. Arrasways—A rectangular charge, such as a book or cushion when it is placed on its side with one corner toward the spectator.

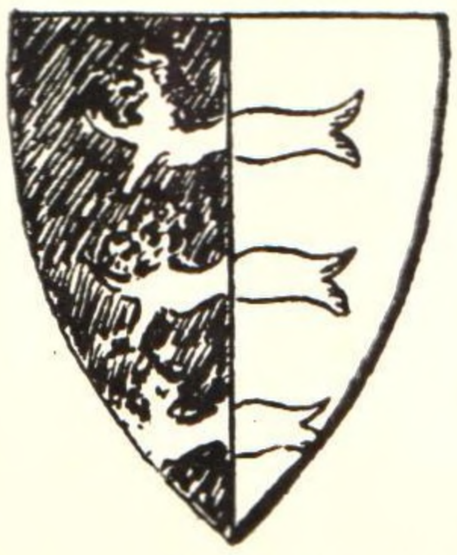

Bi-corporated—Having two bodies conjoined to one head. Animals, and more particularly Lions, are occasionally thus represented, and, sometimes Tri-corporated. Such a device was borne by the Earl of Lancaster, brother of Edward the First. Another example of this type of charge would be the arms of Milan, three serpents each with the body of a child coming out of its mouth.

Cloué—Studded with nails. Conjoined—Joined together. When hollow charges, such as annulets are linked together, so as to form a chain they are often blazoned as conjoined. Dilated—Open or extended, applied to a pair of Compasses. Flotant—Applied to flags when they appear to wave. Fumant—Emitting smoke. Guarded—Trimmed or turned up. Interchangeably posed—When charges are placed in parallel lines, so that the head of each appears between the tails of the two others.

The most ancient method of Marshalling two coats on the same shield was by Dimidiation, which was effected by simply dividing both coats "per pale" and joining the Dextor half to the Sinister half. The arms of the Borough of Great Yarmouth are compounded in this manner. By a seal affixed to an ancient Charter, the arms appear to have been originally "Three herrings Naiant in pale" to which were later added by Dimidiation Three lions of England; producing the curious combination shown in the diagram.

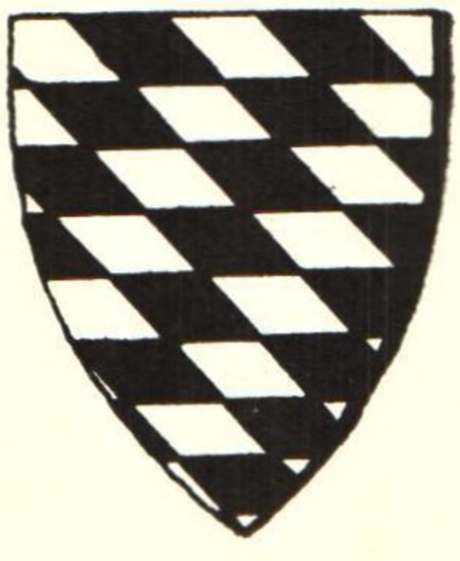

Laminated—Scaled, applied to reptiles only. Lionced—Crosses are thus blazoned when their limbs terminate in the heads of lions. Rebated —When the head of a Cross or weapon is broken or cut off.

Dimidiation

Inescutcheon

Barry-Bendy

Inescutcheon or Shield of Pretence, is a small shield, borne on the centre of the Field (of which it occupies one-fifth) on which the husband emblazons the arms of his wife. This is sometimes done instead of placing them "in pale."

Barry-Bendy is formed by the intersection of lines drawn Barwise and Bendwise as shown in the diagram.

An excellent example of this type is now on exhibition in the Metropolitan Museum in New York on a very early 13th Century enamel.

Lymphad—A vessel, usually with one mast and a high bow and stern.

Augmentations are certain honourable Addendo to HEREDITARY arms specially granted by the Crown to individuals in recognition of some extraordinary public service. As for example in the case of Sir Cloudesly Shovel, Queen Anne gave him as Augmentations of honour, two Crescents and a Fleur-de-lys to be added to his paternal arms for his victories over the Turks and the French.

The Duke of Wellington was permitted to charge upon an Inescutcheon the Union Jack in commemoration of his distinguished services to the nation. An almost unheard of honor.

Abatements, which were represented upon the Escutcheon by voiding certain parts thereof, were liable to be imposed for any of the following misdemeanours, a knight revoking a challenge, deserting the banner of his sovereign, uttering a lie to the King and acting as a traitor to his King and Country. For this last crime, the Escutcheon was condemned to be borne reversed. As Shakespeare so aptly puts it—

"Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive
And be an eyesore in my golden coat
Some loathsome dash the Herald will contrive
To cipher me."

Quarterly-quartered—Four grand quarters, two of which are subdivided into four quarters each, as per illustration.

Two very fine examples of Hatchments are now on exhibition in the American Wing of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. One of them was made in Boston and dated 1770, showing that they were in use in this country at that period.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

FORTUNE MAGAZINE. The June issue of this de luxe magazine contains a beautifully illustrated seven-page article on medals and decorations. It discusses the development of medallic art from the time of Pisanello (circa 1395-1455) to the present day, giving particular attention to the mechanical processes involved.

An entire page is devoted to illustrating, in full color, a knuckle-action medal press which is capable of delivering a pressure of 1,000 tons. Another picture that adds much interest to the article is that of the reducing machine which is used in cutting the dies for coins and medals.

A copy of this article may be borrowed from the A. N. A. Library but it must be remembered that requests will be handled in the order in which they are received.

THE COIN COLLECTORS' JOURNAL (Wayte Raymond, Inc.) for March and April. As a supplement to "The Silver Dollars of North and South America," published by Mr. Raymond in 1939, this issue of the Journal illustrates and describes fifteen additional pieces. Three of them, the Canadian dollar of 1939, the peso of the Dominican Republic also of 1939, and the 5 sucre piece of Ecuador dated 1943 are the only dollar size pieces that have been issued in North and South America since the book was published. The other twelve pieces are valuable additions to the series as it is seldom that they are recorded elsewhere. Phares O. Sigler presents the 6th chapter of his series on the Coin of Colonial America, covering in this section the issues of Connecticut. Fred R. Marckhoff gives a list of the National Banks which were organized in the Territories during the First Charter Period, 1863-1882. Other articles are on Confederate Currency and Fractional Currency.

THE RETURN OF ULYSSES AS RECORDED ON A ROMAN DENARIUS

By FRED S. KNOBLOCH

According to Homer, long after the other heroes of the Trojan expedition had reached their homes Ulysses was still being tossed about by storms. He passed through great perils, encountered strange beings and ultimately succeeded in many unhopeful adventures. After an absence of almost twenty years, our Grecian hero resolved to return once more to his island kingdom of Ithaca. Wishing to appear unknown he adopted the disguise of a pilgrim and was not recognized except by his old dog, Argus, who died of joy at seeing his former master.

This incident is most pleasingly recorded on a denarius of the ancient Roman Republic struck by the Mamilia gens, circa 83 B. C. A man in the mean and humble dress of a traveller, wearing on his head the pileus or hemispherical bonnet, holds a long knotted staff while a dog caresses the feet of his long lost master. The well proportioned head on the obverse has been identified with that of Mercury as designated by his attributes, the winged cap and caduceus. Mercury or Hermes was an ancestor of Ulysses and the bust of that divinity therefore finds a fitting place on the coins of this family.

As for the man who struck this interesting coin, Caius Mamilius Limetanus was a member of a noble and ancient family which claimed descent from Mamilia, daughter of Telegonus the reputed son of Ulysses and Circe. The surname Limetanus was first given to Caius Mamilius, tribune of the plebs in B. C. 164, when he carried the Lex de Limitibus or boundary law. He was the son of the tribune of the plebs, by the same name, who in B. C. 110 pressed a law to prosecute those who had assisted Jugurtha in his opposition to the senate.

THE COINS OF JULIUS CAESAR

"The coins are a motley shabby lot. But we must remember that they were issued in a revolutionary period, at the very close of his life, after an absence from Rome of nine years in Gaul, succeeded by five years of hasty visits to the capital, in interludes between adventurous campaigns far from it. These short returns assuredly allowed him no time to pose for die-cutters or sculptors. Money had to be issued quickly and copiously, without reference to the artistic merit of the dies, or the resemblance of the profiles to Caesar. Some of the effigies on his coins were designed to typify his pontifical office—the head drapery being more important in the workman's eyes than the features under it. Some aimed to represent Caesar's profile, but made apprentice work of it. Others contented themselves with wild approximations, seemingly without care for accuracy. A few are caricatures; as if the artists were in sympathy with his enemies, and in his absence took malicious pleasure in using the graver to belittle the conqueror. It was not a period of artistic excellence of any kind. The gravers' and the sculptors' arts had come to the highest perfection before Caesar's time, and reached it again after it, in the reigns of the emperors Augustus and Hadrian. But the whole revolutionary period preceding, during, and after his time, was not an era of good art work."

COIN COLLECTING BECOMES COMPLICATED

Dear Mr. Mosher:

I have recently read and re-read the article, "The Condition of a Coin," that appeared in the April issue of THE NUMISMATIST, with much interest and profit. I also read, as I always do, the advertisements appearing in the same magazine, and the rather cynical state they aroused in me prompts this letter.

Your remarks on Supplementary Terms were most pertinent, especially when one turned to the double page advertisement in the same issue, where, with the lavish use of the abbreviation, A, no less than fifteen degrees of classification were supposedly described, and neither proof or poor were included. A, is the abbreviation for almost, or about, and this is the list; Unc., A Unc., XF, AXF, F to XF, VF, AVF, F to VF, AF, F, VG, AVG, G, AG, Fair. Seems as though that advertiser could only make up his mind on one thing, not to use A Fair, sounds too much like Wretched. Nearly is sometimes used in a similar way, maybe because when coupled with U, (NU), it sounds like new.

Actually most dealers and collectors have a very clear understanding of the use and meaning of the various terms used in classifying coins as long as the coins are not the subject of a trade. But the instant a coin is for sale it becomes the subject of another datum of classification. That which you term over-enthusiasm is apt to become an over-polite way of terming what is actually deliberate, misleading and confusing description, leavened only by a Money Back Guarantee prominently displayed. Since mail order frauds are a serious offense, such a guarantee is without much meaning, and is poor compensation for the time, effort, expense and patience wasted in the return of mis-represented merchandise. But many sales of mis-represented merchandise must stick, and for the time pay off, probably due to the buyer making a mental reservation such as, "I've learned my lesson, but never again," but more often I suspect it may be due to the avid appetite for a certain coin, which when received is patently not as described in the advertisement, but is retained.

There seems to be a sort of Battle Royal taking place between several other advertisers in THE NUMISMATIST in the use of super-super-superlatives and it really is neither interesting reading or doing these firms much good in indicating their actual reliability. Not many collectors are interested in who has the most beautiful coin shop, or where the finest coin sales are held. Neither are they interested in the tremendous resources of another dealer, (it even scares some away), or in the vaunted rapid growth of another. It is doubtful if the following slogans sell many coins, "Buy now before they go up," "I've got 'em," (Who cares), and "Bargains," which are definitely not bargains, but the one that gives me the biggest chuckle is, "You'll be surprised at our prices," (and this in a rising market).

Collectors with the buying urge are interested in an accurate description of coins that are for sale, and to the various announcements of the trade, Less Scare Heads. A plain dignified statement of these facts goes a long way to carrying conviction of that advertiser's reliability.

Please pardon me for being caustic at times in the above letter, but I cannot help believing that I express the thoughts of many.

Sincerely yours,

ROSCOE F. BALLARD

CHINESE COINS ARE FEATURED FOR NATIONAL COIN WEEK

Chiang Kai-shek indeed would have been happy could he have been a visitor at the April 17 meeting of the Orange County Coin Club, Brea, California, because China in all its glory was the main feature in celebration of National Coin Week.

Not only were some of this country's finest Chinese coin collections on display but the featured event of the evening was a skit on China and Chinese coins.

Herbert Bergen, past president of the Orange County Coin Club, accurately and completely garbed as a Chinese mandarin (see cut below), talked in Chinese on Chinese coins, history, life, liberty and pursuit of happiness.

"Dr. Li" Herbert Bergen and Dr. C. Glenn Curtis

Howard E. Bowers, a member of the club, acted as interpreter for "Dr. Li's" profound remarks.

Needless to say, the crowd of over 400 received quite a thrill out of this program and it may be possible that there will be a sharp increase of collectors of Chinese coins in Southern California. In addition to the special feature, the Orange County Coin Club held its annual Hobby Show.

The main features of the exhibits were H. M. Budd's Carson City coin collection. Mr. Budd showed all of the Carson City mint coins with the exception of the 1873 twenty cent piece. Mr. Thomas Neilsen had some of the rarest gold that has ever been shown at our meetings. Among other exhibits were S. L. Burgess' mustache cups. He showed about 300 different cups including the very rare and hard to get, left handed mustache cups.

Lt. Col. Charles Westerhout had a beautiful exhibit of arm insignia of the U. S. Army. The largest collection of arm insignia in the world. Other exhibits were souvenirs from the Italian war front; Susan McGraw showed her dolls, many coin and gun exhibits.

Program consisted of an inspiring talk by Adolph Larson, Jr., president of the California Coin Club, whose subject was "A Collector is Born." He held the audience spellbound for thirty minutes.

Refreshments were served after which we had a most successful coin auction.

Meeting adjourned at 10:45 p. m. to meet again the third Tuesday evening in May.

THE NEW THEORY ABOUT ANCIENT COIN TYPES

By T. O. MABBOTT, A. N. A. 3160

Mr. Mosher's very kind notice of my article on Roman Republican Bronze reached me soon after a friend, a professor of history interested in coins, discussed the article with me. He felt that while my ideas are not revolutionary, they are fundamental, and of interest to many who are not especially students of ancient coins alone. My original article was addressed to specialists, and included a good deal of technical argument. Some of the argument may be disputed in detail; in general it has been thus far well received. What follows is a brief and non-technical statement of the new theory and its implication.

It is my belief that the great coinage of bronze coins of the Roman Republic was planned carefully, and that the selection of types was harmonious, that all the types are related. The heads are Janus on the As; Saturn on the semis; Minerva (?) on the triens; Hercules on the quadrans; Mercury on the sextans; the patron goddess of Rome on the uncia, she may be called Virtus, Diana, or RWMH, the old description Roma being not far from right. (The only change from the traditional interpretation is that Saturn rather than Jupiter is recognized on the semis. The arguments for this are several rather vague ancient allusions in literature, and a symbol added by one college of moneyers. There is no ancient testimony for Jupiter; the modern tradition comes from the great Eckhel, who did not know of the coin with the symbol.) No harmonious grouping of the old set was possible. The set now suggested is bound together by the single idea, all these divinities are persons connected with the legends about the FOUNDING OF ROME.

This has a fundamental implication for the whole meaning of the types of ancient coins. It has long been observed that almost without exception Greek coin types relate directly to religion and/or trade. But Roman types came in time to include many things that were of what we should call a purely historical nature. This difference has been noticed but no explanation has been offered, although it is admitted by all that Roman coinage follows Greek models. The true explanation of a difficult problem is frequently something very simple.

It will be noticed that (if my descriptions of the divinities are correct) the one most important and continuous series of Roman coins, the bronze pieces, of which the types were continued with only minor variation for more than a century is religious enough in origin. But it also, by its emphasis on the several founders of Rome, includes the germ of the historical types. It was the Roman idea that the city was made up of several settlements that united. The step was easy to the idea of the families that united to form and preserve Rome. Thus gradually, without perceptible loss of the idea of what was sacred, types commemorating the ancestors of the monetal magistrates came in; and ultimately we have types which relate to the activities of the issuers themselves. But at bottom there was always the idea of types with sacred meaning, because what was represented related to the founding and preservation of the city. It will thus be seen clearly that there is no cleavage between Greek and Roman coinage. The latter developed a new aspect, but only by a gradual and natural process of thought.

What I have suggested is a method of harmonizing a large number of facts that have appeared to be incapable of interpretation as a unified whole with a single idea binding them together.

NOTES AND QUERIES

Every Time He Buys a Coin His Wife Wants a New Hat—

Dear Sir:

Why is it that every time I spend $10 on a coin, my wife starts acting up and claims I should give her another $10 for a new hat or something?

This takes all the pleasure out of my collecting. I can't afford it, and besides she buys new hats as often as the next woman.

No doubt there are other collectors up against the same problem. Believe me, it's no laughing matter. If you have a solution to it, I wish you would let us have it.

—A DISCOURAGED COLLECTOR

(You might try letting her buy a hat first and then asserting your rights by spending an equal amount on your coin collection. This sometimes works, but watch your step.—Editor)

"Was Uncirculated Once"—

Sir:

Lots of talk going on about the condition of coins, and I see new classifications used every month. Why not end the whole thing once and for all, and simply describe all coins as "Was uncirculated once."

A. FRENCH, Troy, N. Y.

Off to a Remarkable Start

Sir:

In my opinion collectors miss a lot of fun specializing in one series of coins. During the nine months I've been collecting coins, I've met dozens of collectors and nearly every one of them advises me to specialize. I have no intention of doing so. I've got my type set of U. S. coins two-thirds complete and I'm starting on foreign and ancient coins. I aim to get at least a coin from every country and, if it's possible, one of each ruler. Paper money interests me too, and I've got a darn nice collection started—, even if I do say it myself.

R. N., New York City

Condition Not Everything—

Dear Sir:

I suppose I must confess to belonging to that large group so looked down upon by the elite in the A. N. A., the "penny-board collector." I didn't realize I should come to be ashamed to exhibit my Whitman folding board with its "good," "very good" and occasional "fine" specimens. Now, where am I? My name in the membership list brings me many a catalogue listing "superb" "gem" "uncirculated" and proofs. Can it be a fact that a coin which served its legitimate and intended use is unfit to grace a collection, because it "shows wear?" Oh, yes, I know used coins are occasionally listed, but you know it is with a sort of apologetic air. Now what has it done for me, and I venture to say some thousands of other middle-class collectors? I'm buying more than my ten percent of war bonds, and the constantly rising cost of living, leaves me little for the purchase of coins. In short, it seems the A. N. A. is away out of my class. And this is not to be taken as criticism of the organization; far from it. It is an excellent society—for the $5,000 a year up executive. Perhaps some hint along this line should be thrown in with your membership solicitation.

H. O. WOODWARD,
A. N. A. No. 10586

(If it's any consolation to Mr. Woodward we would like him to know that some of the finest known collections contain coins that are sometimes worn, holed and battered.—Editor.)

He Should Hear the Other Fellow—

Sir:

For the last ten years I've specialized exclusively in large cents and I want to let the collecting world know that it's the most interesting and worthwhile field in coin collecting. New and old collectors would do well to give it a try. I can't understand why anyone should collect ancient and foreign coins.

—H. W. A., New Jersey.

CHOPPED COINS OF SIAM

In remote parts of northern Siam, money of any sort is rarely seen in circulation. When it is, it may consist of practically anything from worn foreign coppers to mutilated silver coins. The pieces illustrated were found in circulation there several years ago. They were in use as currency though valued by weight which is approximately one-quarter and one-half tical respectively. Underneath the numerous Siamese chop-marks can be seen the design of a Mexican peso of a type issued about the middle of the 19th century.

Half-Dimes Vary in Weight—

In 1853 the U. S. half-dime was reduced in weight from 20 5/8 to 19.2 grains. This accounts for the difference mentioned. It is possible, but not probable, that your half-dime of 1844, which weighs 20.61, is a counterfeit.

Small and Large

There exist two varieties of the O mint mark on the dimes struck in 1905 at the New Orleans Mint; one large and one small. The small or "microscopic" O mint mark seems to appear less frequently than the large.

Look Them Up—
W. S. T.

The Lincoln medals you describe appear to be familiar ones and instead of listing them here we suggest you borrow the publication Lincoln in Numismatics from the A. N. A. library. Written by Robert P. King, it is the most complete work on the subject ever published.

Expert Trouble Shooter—

Fourteen subscribers have expressed surprise and some little pleasure because THE NUMISMATIST was delivered to them shortly after the first of June. It was the June issue and not that of May, as some of them must have at first suspected.

The man responsible for this decided improvement is Damon G. Douglas, a member of the Board of Governors of the A. N. A. For six months, Mr. Douglas has given generously of his time in an effort to bring this about. It was no easy task and was accomplished only because he wouldn't take "no" for an answer.

Gold Certificates

In response to numerous enquiries regarding the legality of owning gold certificates we can only relay the advice contained in a recent letter from the Director of the U. S. Mint:

"Any gold certificates situated in the United States and owned by any persons subject to the jurisdiction thereof should be promptly delivered to the Treasurer of the United States, a Federal Reserve Bank or branch, or a member of the Federal Reserve System, with a request for settlement . . ."

It is apparent that this ruling applies to collectors and non-collectors alike and should be strictly observed by all those owning gold certificates. It is also illegal for dealers to buy or sell gold certificates.

Reason for the Star Notes—

Why do some bills have a star * instead of a letter before the serial number?

ROBERT ANDERSON, Vestal, N. Y.

Star * notes are used to replace notes which are imperfect and therefore not fit to be issued.—Editor

Sand Blast Hawaiians—

According to The Numismatist, page 31, January, 1929, there were 50 Hawaiian half-dollars issued in sand-blast proof. We are unable to find a recent price record one.

1945 NATIONAL COIN WEEK REPORT

Report of the Chairman

Another successful Coin Week has been concluded. The Awards Committee has completed its task and the winners have been chosen. L. W. Culver, Chairman of the Awards Committee, has given detailed account of the winners and the prizes in his report. I wish to express my thanks to him and his able assistants, Hubert L. Polzer and N. J. Hoffman, for their splendid work.

Congratulations to the clubs and individual members whose winning exhibits and activities proved equal or superior to any previous Coin Week participation.

The District Secretaries, who were all members of the Publicity Committee, played an important part in unifying the National program.

The entire Committee joins me in acknowledging the fine spirit of cooperation displayed by all participants, especially those who headed local Coin Week Committees. To those who did not win awards, we say, "There are other Coin Weeks coming—try again!"

Charles E. Green, who headed the Dealer Committee, as well as the dealers who so generously donated prizes, deserve the applause of the entire association for their part in the successful celebration of Coin Week.

In the radio phase of our program a new note was sounded when, through the efforts of William Brimelow (Bill the Coin Man) an international broadcast was brought to us from London via the BBC facilities. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation rebroadcast the program from coast to coast. A transcription recorded in Elkhart, Indiana, was heard over WRTC of that city and WRJN Racine during Coin Week. Many local radio programs and news items relating to Coin Week were heard throughout the country. It is evident that the air waves are becoming a more important factor in Coin Week celebrations each year.

It was more difficult to secure newspaper space for notices and articles than in former years owing to space curtailments under war conditions. This was particularly true in the larger cities. In spite of this obstacle most clubs ran a half column or more. The quality of Coin Week publicity in newspapers was generally excellent.

Your General Chairman takes this opportunity to thank every member for his part in making the 1945 observance of Coin Week so successful. It was an honor and a pleasure to have served the American Numismatic Association as coordinator for this important annual event.

Good luck to the 1946 Committee!

Respectfully submitted,

R. S. YEOMAN, General Chairman,
1945 National Coin Week

Report of the Committee

The Committe met on May 20, 1945, to review the reports submitted on National Coin Week activities. The reports were very gratifying, and we believe the number of clubs participating was greater than at any previous time. Many of the clubs had one large display, making it exceedingly difficult to award prizes to individual members. After many hours of study, it was decided to increase the number of awards because of the many clubs with outstanding reports.

The awards were made as follows:

Coin Clubs

First Prize: To the Columbus Numismatic Society. This club had thirty-four displays, with twenty-one members furnishing a wide variety of material. Thirty of these displays were in Columbus, and four were in near-by towns. Three newspapers published articles about the displays, and several spot announcements were made on Radio Stations WBNS, WHKC, and WCOL. Awarded a club banner, and ribbons for each member of the club, and the following books: Guttag Collection Latin American Coins, U. S. Large Cents, 1793-1857, World's "Greatest" Collection of U. S. Silver.

Second Prize Club—Boston Numismatic Society

Second Prize: To the Boston Numismatic Society. This club had displays in Filene's Department Store, three banks, Public Library, Museum of Fine Arts, Mass. Historical Society, Association for Preservation of N. E. Antiquities, Children's Museum, and five other stores. These displays were well planned and located where they would attract the attention of a large number of people. In addition to the exhibits, they had two radio programs, and two newspaper articles. Awarded eleven booklets of The Coin Collector Series.

Third Prize: To the Heart of America Numismatic Association. This club had extensive and well-organized displays in the Kansas City Museum, Plaza

Bank of Commerce, and several stores. In addition to the displays, C. Allen Harper has been working with a Cub Scout pack, and had the boys show their collections of Lincoln cents, awarding several prizes of uncirculated cents. In spite of the difficulty of getting newspaper coverage at the time, they were able to get some publicity in the Kansas City Star. Awarded a copy of Scott's Coins of the World.

Fourth Prize: To the Wilkes Barre Coin Club. This club had a display that covered about three hundred square feet of table space in the Lyman Howe Room of the Y. M. C. A. representing the combined efforts of fifteen members. The club invited the public to this exhibit on Thursday evening, April 26th, and each exhibitor was on hand to discuss his collections. The material shown covered a wide field, and aroused considerable public interest. Awarded a copy of Raymond's Spanish American Gold Coins, and Numismatic Mythology by Cammann.

Fifth Prize Club—Albany Numismatic Society

Fifth Prize: To Albany Numismatic Society. This club had a large and comprehensive display at a central location on Albany's main intersection, as well as one smaller display. Mr. W. J. McKinney appeared before two organizations and gave twenty minute talks on numismatics. Awarded a copy of State Bank Notes by Muscalus, and Raymond's Early New York City and State Merchants' Tokens.

Sixth Prize: To Charlotte Coin Club. This club had a display in seven large cases in the main lobby of the American Trust Company. A wide variety of coins were shown, the numismatic value of which was estimated to be $20,000.00. Club members were present most of the time to answer questions and they feel that their display increased the public's interest in, and understanding of numismatics. Awarded four Corteau booklets on Canadian Tokens.

Sixth Prize Club—Charlotte Coin Club

First Individual Prize

Joseph W. Schmandt, Kansas City, Missouri

Seventh Prize: To Westchester County Coin Club. This club had interesting exhibits in two libraries, a public school, and a bank. The Mount Vernon Library requested the exhibit for a month, and a feature writer for a local paper gave it a four column spread. Awarded Johnson's Auction Prices of United States Coins.

The following clubs were given honorable mention: Phoenix Coin Club, Greeley Coin Club, Philadelphia Coin Club, Calumet Numismatic Society, Cincinnati Numismatic Society, Washington Numismatic Society, Cedar Rapids Coin Club, Milwaukee Numismatic Society, and the Racine Numismatic Society.

Individual Members

First Prize: To Joseph W. Schmandt of Kansas City, Missouri. Mr. Schmandt had two displays, one at the Plaza Bank of Commerce, and the other at the Kansas City Museum. These displays included commemorative coins, type sets of U. S. coins, coins of England, China, and the Philippine Islands, Biblical coins, and many others. Awarded a 1936 set of Vatican coins.

Second Prize: To E. M. Eversole of Ravinnia, Illinois. Mr. Eversole exhibited in the Lake Shore National Bank of Chicago. There were several window displays as well as several frames inside of the bank. Mr. Eversole spent the week at the bank, and explained the coins to all that were interested. Awarded five commemorative half dollars.

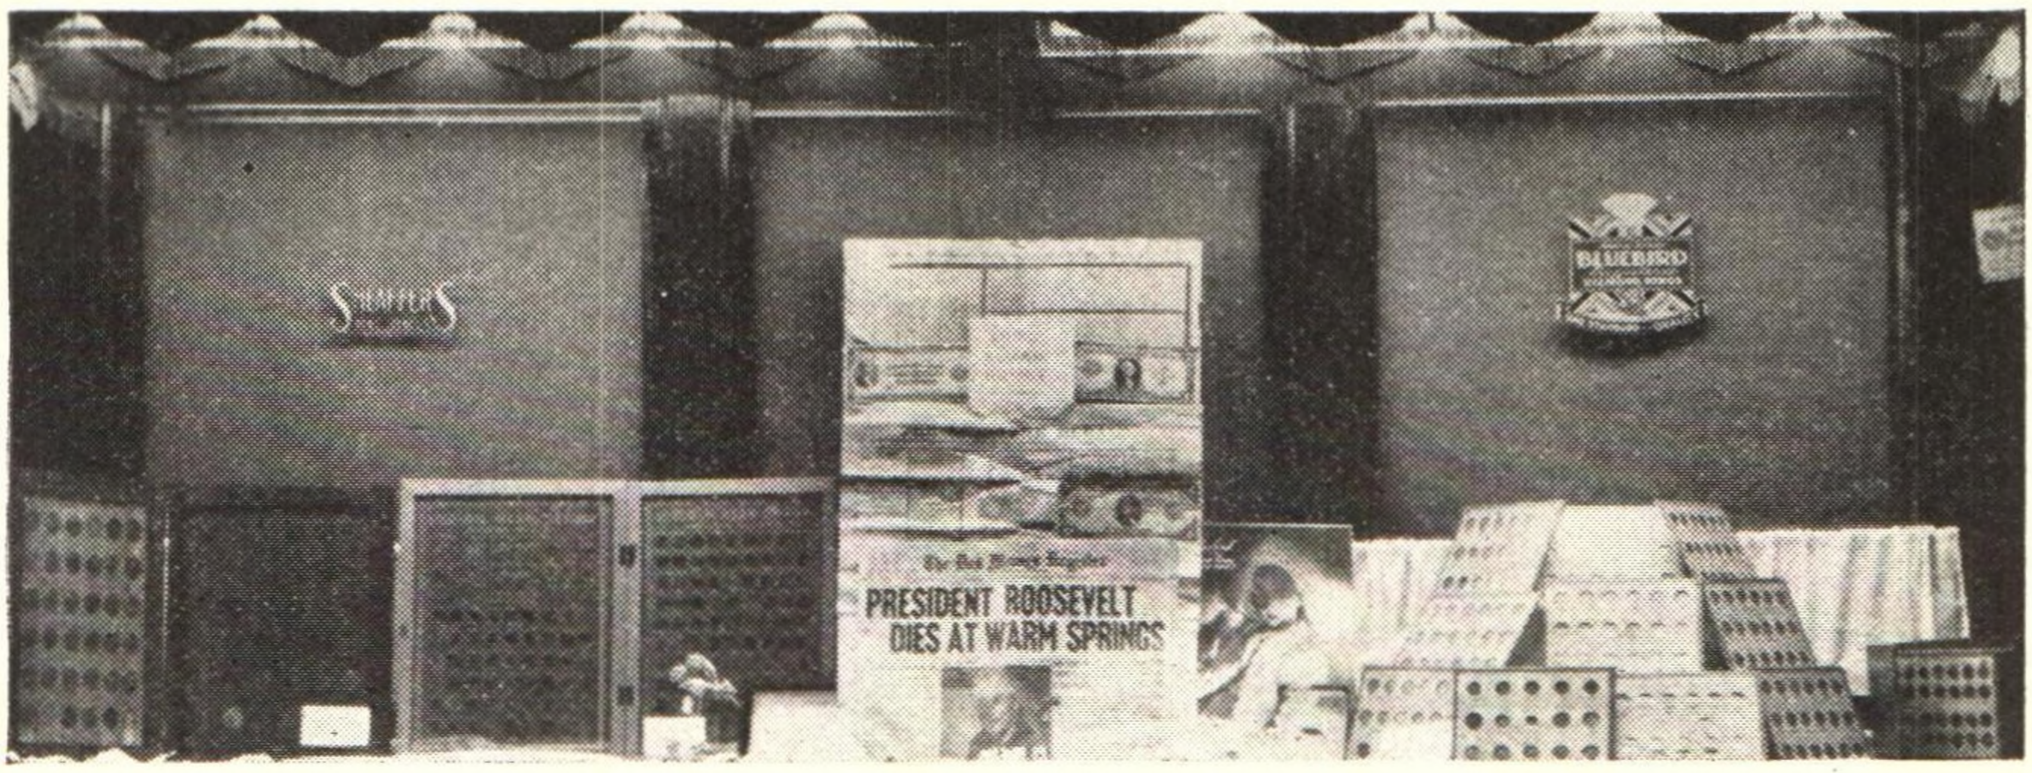

Third Prize: To Dr. Ralph R. Chandler of Wilkes Barre, Pa. Dr. Chandler exhibited a practically complete collection of paper money, gold and silver commemorative coins, and the following in proof or uncirculated condition: Indian head cents, two-cent pieces, three cent pieces, liberty and buffalo nickels, Washington quarters, and many others. Awarded a 1908 Philippine proof set.

OFFERS TO HELP REBUILD MANILA LIBRARY

Dr. E. D. Skeen has come up with a splendid idea. He suggests that members of the A. N. A. help rebuild the numismatic section of the library at Manila, which was completely destroyed by the Japanese.

He has some twenty volumes of THE NUMISMATIST ready to ship as soon as mailing facilities are restored, and he is willing to act as clearing agent in order to avoid sending duplicate books.

Send a list of such books or magazines as you wish to donate and Dr. Skeen will select those which do not duplicate others that have been offered. His address is 504 Broadway, Suite 1038, Gary, Indiana.

Here is a fine opportunity for us to help our brave Filipino friends. If you don't think they need help, read the letter written by District Secretary Perez, page 502 of the May issue of THE NUMISMATIST.

FORERUNNER OF PRESENT DAY ARMY AND NAVY IDENTIFICATION "DOG TAG"

By ROBERT I. NESMITH

This pocket piece should interest many people who are familiar with the metal identification tags worn by all enlisted men and women in the armed services.

It was no doubt carried for the same purpose by at least one soldier (British) in service many years ago with a famous Regiment, and shows signs of long wear.

It is an English crown of 1696. Across and encircling the face of King William is engraved "JNO. JONES TRUMPETER BORN 22 MARCH 1779." In the center is the insignia of the Regiment, a skull surmounted with cross bones and the words beneath "OR GLORY"/ XVII/ LIGHT DRAGOONS." The Seventeenth Light Dragoons served in the American Revolution and fought the colonists from New England to the South, in all the most important battles. I am quite sure they were in at the finish at the surrender of Cornwallis.

On the reverse side appears the record of a former owner "RD EVANS/ BORN/ JUNE 24/1767." Did he also serve in the Regt.? How did he happen to hand down the piece to young Jones? Were they friends or relatives? Did the piece come from the pocket of its owner lying dead on some battle field far from home? The records of the Regiment, if available, might tell the story. Is the Regiment of the 17th Light Dragoons in there punching in World War II with their motto "Death or Glory?"

The owner would like to know!

COIN CLUB ORGANIZED IN ELKHART, INDIANA

On June 4, sixteen coin collectors met at 618 South Main Street, Elkhart, Indiana, to form what promises to be a really progressive society which will be known as the Elkhart Coin Club.

Much of the preliminary work was done by William (Bill the Coin Man) Brimelow, C. C. Lickey and Kenneth Cook, all members of the A. N. A.

The following officers were elected: president, William Brimelow; vice president, C. C. Lickey; secretary-treasurer, Kenneth Cook; librarian and curator, M. D. Misener; sergeant at arms, E. Bowman.

The next meeting will be held on the evening of July 9, at the Hotel Elkhart.

CANADIAN MEMORIAL SILVER CROSS

This silver cross in memory of those members of the Canadian Armed Services who have died in the service of their country during this war, will be received by the mothers and widows of those who have paid the supreme sacrifice.

With the cross goes a personal note from the Minister of National Defense, General McNaughton. This note reads—

"This Memorial Cross is forwarded to you on behalf of the Government of Canada in memory of one who died in the service of his country."

A somewhat similar Memorial Cross was given to the mothers and widows of those who were killed while serving their country during the first World War.

The latest figures which have been released on the total dead or presumed dead while serving with the Canadian Army, the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Canadian Navy is 32,155.

The cross is suspended by a purple ribbon. The name and the service number of the soldier, airman or sailor whose name is being so honored is engraved on the reverse of the cross.

THE EDITOR'S CORNER

PROOFS EASILY DAMAGED

A dozen or more readers want to know how to clean proof coins. We wish we could give the answer here, but it would result in more harm than good. Cleaning proofs is a delicate and difficult operation and unless it is done by an expert irreparable damage may be done. By expert, we mean one having a good knowledge of chemistry and metallurgy, plus actual experience in handling precious objects which are easily ruined.

In our opinion, it is better to have a perfect proof that is tarnished than a brilliant proof that has been cleaned by improper methods. Such an impaired proof is actually worth less than an uncirculated coin.

Perfect proofs are highly desirable. Don't run the risk of ruining them.

LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE

The announcement that the portrait of the late President Roosevelt will shortly replace the winged Liberty head on our current silver ten cent piece has prompted many A. N. A. members to express their opinions on the matter.

It would be quite impossible to publish all the letters received and we feel it is sufficient to say that ninety per cent are in favor of the change. The remaining ten per cent think the change ill-considered and personally we are inclined to agree with the minority.

With the majority, who wish to pay tribute to an outstanding personality, we are in complete accord. Our dissenting opinion is based on the practicability of the plan. For the matter of clarity we will paragraph it thus:

I. Once a design is adopted, it cannot be changed within twenty-five years, regardless of its artistic or serviceable merits.

II. With rare exceptions, miniature portraits are highly unsatisfactory.

III. The rigid requirements of our coinage laws prevent even the most skilled artist from producing anything but a low-relief, cramped profile portrait. Under these conditions it is doubtful if any artist could do full justice to our late lamented President on the limited space provided by a dime.

IV. The current winged Liberty head dime is one of the most handsome of modern coins, and should not be replaced with a commemorative issue unless the latter has all the good qualities of the first.

V. A hastily conceived, poorly executed coin does honor to no man. Let us honor our late President with a commemorative coin that will do him full justice.

VI. In order to make certain of this, let us utilize our right of coining silver dollars. The design of our current Peace type silver dollar can be legally changed in 1946. Let the country's foremost artists compete for the honor of designing the coin and let us make sure that the design selected is worthy of the man it honors.

As to changing our dime—let us leave well enough alone.

PLEASED WITH AWARDS

Editor THE NUMISMATIST

Dear Mr. Mosher:

The May issue of THE NUMISMATIST arrived and gave me a terrific jolt. When I submitted my article to our magazine, I had no thoughts of competing for a prize. The chart was really only tabulation of others efforts far more extensive than mine. Then, the other day your letter arrived with your most generous check. The very least I can say is "thank you," and if the men on the committee feel that the article was that worthy, you may rest assured that I shall try again to produce something of interest and worth to my fellow members of the A. N. A.

Sincerely yours,

—EDWARD B. HADEN

Haddonfield, N. J.

I would like to express my deep appreciation for your editorial policy and for having selected one of my articles among the best published in THE NUMISMATIST during the year 1944.

I have material for more articles on medals which I hope to develop in the future for THE NUMISMATIST and for the lovers of numismatic art.

Sincerely yours,

—E. GALLO-RUIZ
Ann Arbor, Michigan

I was quite surprised when I read THE NUMISMATIST to find that I had been awarded $30 for my article on Civil War Tokens and Cards, and want to thank the committee for same. Keep up the good work. It will inspire members to send in more articles.

Yours sincerely,

—JOSEPH BARNET
Brooklyn, N. Y.

I was completely surprised to note from the May issue of THE NUMISMATIST, on page 486, that the Award Committee has included my articles in its selections. Needless to say, this is very gratifying to me and I hope that there will be no let down before the series is finished.

Sincerely yours,

—P. H. CHASE
Philadelphia, Pa.

Thank you very much for the check and the accompanying letter. One derives pleasure from doing an enjoyable job and in presenting it to others of similar interests. But it certainly heightens that pleasure to have his efforts rewarded in such a concrete way.

I hope THE NUMISMATIST can continue or even expand its present program, which should surely be an incentive to collectors with information and interesting material to make both available to their fellow numismatists.

Sincerely,

J. S. DAVENPORT
Buffalo, N. Y.

Please accept my most sincere thanks for the wonderful prize awarded to me by the American Numismatic Association. Certainly, when the article was being prepared, I had no thought to receive compensation, it being a labor of love purely.

This new policy, created to stimulate research in various branches of the science of numismatics, will, I trust, receive the support of the entire membership. It is one phase of collecting that has been too much neglected, and one that I have been endeavoring to nourish among the members of the Philadelphia Coin Club.

When the war is won and some leisure hours can again be spent in necessary research, I hope to submit further articles for your consideration and assistance to other collectors.

Thanking you again for your kindness and generosity, I am,

Sincerely yours,

—RICHARD T. HOOBER
North Hills, Penna.

WE CALL IT VERY FINE

The first issue of "Strictly Mutilated" the monthly bulletin of the Northwest Coin Club, has just been received. Edited by Gerald Huber, it is nicely arranged and contains many useful hints on collecting, along with the usual club news.

Informal publications, such as this, do much to sustain the interest of members, as well as promote the interests of numismatics.

THE SOCIETY OF MEDALISTS

The main objective of the Society is to develop the greatest possible appreciation of the American sculptor and his work in the medallic field. Those interested in additional information are invited to write for their illustrated folder. The address of the above Society is 115 East 40th Street, New York City.

DEATHS

SHEPARD POND

On May 28, Shepard Pond of 2 Salisbury Street, Winchester, Massachusetts, died suddenly at the Winchester Hospital. He entered the hospital the night previous but had not been in the best of health for several weeks. He was 56 years of age.

Mr. Pond was the son of Handel, and Amelia (Herrick) Pond, both long residents of Winchester. Born in 1889 he graduated from Harvard in 1909 and became associated with the banking house of Hayden, Stone & Company of Boston. In 1923 he joined his brother, Clarence H., in the Ivers & Pond Piano Company, which had been founded by his father. Later he became president and treasurer of the Poole Piano Company.

For many years Mr. Pond was deeply interested in the study of numismatics. He specialized in coins and medals of the French Revolution and Napoleon, and was considered by many experts as the highest authority in this particular field. Early American and Colonial coins attracted his interest as also did numismatic items related to Massachusetts.

He held membership No. 2198 in the American Numismatic Association and had served on the board of governors. He was a former president and curator of coins of the Boston Numismatic Society and curator of coins of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Since 1937 he was a member of the council of the American Numismatic Society. He was also a member of the New York Numismatic Club; the Societe Francaise de Numismatique; Societe Royale de Numismatique de Belgique; the Numismatic Society of Australia; and a fellow of the Royal Numismatic Society, London.

His untimely death is an irreparable loss to the entire numismatic fraternity and one that will be keenly felt by those who were privileged to know him.

Mr. Pond leaves his wife, the former June Anne Thornton of Boston, a daughter Susan Shepard Pond, and two brothers, Clarence H. and Dana Pond.

Among those attending his funeral services were Horace M. Grant and Malcolm Chell-Frost representing the American Numismatic Association; Sydney P. Noe representing the American Numismatic Society; and Henry Schumacher and Jesse Klein representing the Boston Numismatic Society.

ISAAC LIEBERMAN

Word has been received of the recent death of Isaac Lieberman, A. N. A. No. 1401, who had been a faithful member for the last 35 years. At the time of joining in 1910, he lived in Independence, Mo. His last address was Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. Lieberman was interested mainly in gold coins and at one time he owned a fairly large collection.

REPORTS OF CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 10th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in. and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally. regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense. and, incidentally. the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—There was an attendance of 21 at the June meeting held June 5.

Business was dispensed with so that the Club might have additional time to listen to the principal event of the evening, namely, a travelogue of Central and South America by past president A. F. Pradeau who has just returned from a numismatic tour of those countries. Dr. Pradeau had a most exciting and unusual trip, flying from Los Angeles to Mexico City, and from there to Guatemala, Honduras, Columbia, Peru, Jamaica, Cuba, and other countries. Mexico has the distinction of being the only country coining gold at the present time, and possesses one of the best equipped mints in the world. Another volume of Dr. Pradeau's great work on Mexican coinage will be published in the near future. In Bogota, a great Museum of Gold was found most impressive. In several of the countries visited revolutionary conditions prevailed in one of which the speaker was arrested because thought to be a revolutionist. After being gone for two months traveling conditions became so unsettled and dangerous that proposed visits to various other South American points were eliminated for the time being. During his travels Dr. Pradeau discovered a manuscript in code which proved to be interesting comments by a mint director to his successor, written about 1858, a portion of which was read to the club. The speaker also brought special greetings from the Mexican Numismatic Ass'n. and the American Numismatic Society. The address was, without doubt, the most enjoyable in the history of the club.

Mr. Turner gave a most interesting talk on coinage from 700 B. C. to the present day. Encouraging collectors to specialize in some field to get the most benefit from their studies, he pointed out that the only record known of some countries of antiquity is in that left by its coinage. His personal opinion that American coins do not compare in design and artistic value with many of ancient times, was shared by many present.

The successful officers were elected: President, S. L. Stolte; Vice President, Julius Kurtz; Secretary, Gerald Huber; Treasurer, Hjalmer Carlson; Historian, John B. Robinson.

Brief talks by Messrs. Stolte and Huber followed. Mr. Huber, an ex-paratrooper from the Airborne Troops, has, on his own initiative, commenced the regular issue of a club bulletin, christened "Strictly Mutilated" by Mrs. Huber. This will be issued monthly and will give news of club activities, stories about members, and miscellaneous coin information.

The first issue resulted in favorable publicity in "Under Your Hat" a daily feature in the Minneapolis Daily Times which used some of the coin information.

Recent new members are A. B. Nelson, Kenneth Smith, James C. Stewart, and Geo. C. Keller all of Minneapolis. Neil S. Utberg, Maxwell G. Winters, John George, Ernest N. Lutton, A. P. Ford, John B. Robinson, William E. McCoy, Richard B. Anderson, and Bruce L. Clark, all of St. Paul.

Other coins exhibited were half-dollars, half-cents and other U. S. coins.

—RAYMOND MOULTON, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 106th meeting was held on May 31st. There were nineteen members and four visitors present.

Carl Olander gave an interesting talk on the Monroe commemorative half dollar.

The highlight of the evening was a display of large cents by Chris Peterson of Chehalis, Washington. Mr. Peterson's collection contains over six hundred varieties of the large cents, and he brought some of them in for our meeting. Among those displayed were 24 varieties of 1793, seven different 1794, and six varieties of 1795. including Doughty's 66, 67, 68, 69. 70 and a hyphenated Liberty that is unclassified. Both varieties of 1799 were shown, and many others, too numerous to list here. The condition of these cents is remarkable, his 1803 Newcomb 23 (15C-QD) is the second best specimen known. And I must mention that six varieties of 1804 were included.

Paul Fouts displayed four gold coins in almost uncirculated condition: an English Noble and 20 shilling piece, and two 1815 French coins. Stephen Bibler showed a fractional currency shield, and Mr. Saeman displayed a Joachimsthaler of Bohemia.

—G. W. WOODS, Secretary.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY COIN CLUB—The 131st regular meeting was held at the New Rochelle Y. M. C. A. on May 15, at 8:45 P. M. with President Weidhaas in the chair.

Favorable and complimentary comments of the various local newspapers on the four very fine exhibits that club members placed on display at various locations for the attention of the general public were read with evident relish by our librarian, Mr. Marsden.

The topic of the evening was "Ancient Coins" and although no speaker had been lined up, President Weidhaas had prepared a paper on Byzantine coins supported by specimens as detailed hereunder. This paper proved to be such an interesting and informative narrative that all those present jointly and severally "went to work" on the authur thereof in an effort to induce him to submit it to "ye editor" of The Numismatist for consideration of publication in that organ. Articles of this calibre certainly deserve greater distribution than that provided by our limited local circle.

Byzantine Coins—Anastasius I AD 491-518; Justinianus I, AD 527-566; Justinianus II, and Sofia AD 565-578; Mauricus Tiberius, AD 582-602; Phocas and Leontia, AD 602-610; Heraclius I, AD 610-641; Constans II, AD 641-668; Constantinus IV, AD 668-685; Michael II, AD 821-829; Leo VI, AD 886-912; Constantine VII and mother Zoe, AD 913-959; John I Zimisces, AD 969-975; Constantine VIII, AD 1025-1028; Constantine X, AD 1059-1067.

Other exhibits presented by members were as follows:

Mr. Marsden: New acquisitions from Europe including France, 1 Franc (aluminum) 1942 and 1945; Italy, 20 Centessimi (nickel), 1942; Germany, 1 pfennig (aluminum), 1944; Newfoundland, 1 cent (copper), 1919.

The topic for the June meeting will be "War Decorations" and Mr. Dewey has consented to address us on the subject of "Dewey Medals."

These beautiful pieces of jade were "Pieces of Value" or "Coins" in the Palace Compound, and passed among those who were living there. They were used in the same way as gold coins. The Palace Compound in China was sometimes as big a community as a large city.

INDIAN HEAD SET, same as above, but starting with 1879, through 1909. A total of 31 pieces including the scarce 80's. Each coin brilliant and sharp. Catalog value $47.00, and listed elsewhere as high as $60.00. OUR BARGAIN PRICE, $42.50. Coins in holder.

OUR AUCTION DEPARTMENT

A TOTAL OF $13,206!

The amount realized at our last auction was $13,206.00. The response to our sale was very gratifying and we wish to thank everyone who participated.

As an expansion program we have entered the auction field. In so doing, we hope to render a service that will be modern and streamlined to show every improvement possible in this line of selling, which will benefit the collector or estate interested in liquidating their collections or duplicates.

OUR STAFF We now have a staff of more than thirty, which is the largest of any numismatic establishment in America, including some of the best informed experts in the field. We offer you the best of facilities in cataloguing and selling your collection at auction.

MAILING LIST During our fifteen years of phenomenal progress, we have acquired a mailing list of more than 10,000 collectors which is, no doubt, one of the largest ever assembled. It is unnecessary for us to go into any great detail to explain the possibilities and advantages that you will experience in placing your coins with us for disposal, with this tremendous mailing list of individuals who now, according to economic statistics, hold more liquid cash and purchasing power than ever before in our country's history.

SECURITY Every employee of our organization is bonded just as the employees at your bank in which you place your money for safe keeping. Furthermore, we have just completed construction of two large fireproof vaults, electrically protected against burglary, aggregating an area of 250 square feet of storage space where even the largest collections may be stored conveniently and yet arranged, classified and catalogued intelligently for the most efficient auction disposal methods.

RELIABILITY When submitting your coins to the Tatham Stamp & Coin Company, to be sold at auction, you have more than 15 years of progress and experience in numismatics placed at your disposal. We are members in good standing of all leading national and international philatelic and numismatic societies.

FINANCIAL RESOURCES We are able at the present time to handle collections of almost any value. We have financial resources to cover the largest collections that may be available, offering liberal cash advances when desired on the material you wish to sell.

TYPE OF MATERIAL DESIRED We especially desire consignments of better grade material, and with our large following offer great sales possibilities.

TERMS Our selling terms are only 20% of the proceeds, with cash settlement within thirty days after the sale.

Consignments Solicited

We are planning to hold another public and mail bid sale in September, and another in November. We solicit your consignments for either or both of these sales.

Special Announcement—

A Monthly Auction will be listed in my Bulletin, beginning with the July issue, and will be in direct charge of of Kansas City, Missouri. All material will be sold without reserve to the highest bidder, and neither Mr. Hansan nor myself will supply any of the coins except such as may be needed to complete a series, or to lend variety to an offering of limited appeal.

Each subsequent issue of the Bulletin will carry the prices realized from the preceding month's sale —certainly a feature of value to auction buyers.

Several thousand collectors have already seen my Bulletin, now only a few months old. Among them are many who regularly buy at auctions, and others who have material to sell through the same means. The former will find this section of the Bulletin of great interest; and those who have really choice coins to offer will do well to write direct to Mr. Hansan, at 1326 Main St., Kansas City 6, Missouri.

May I remind you that the Bulletin is sent without charge, but upon request only. The maximum issue will be held at 8,000, so if you are not already receiving it I advise sending in your request at once.

FIFTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF CONTINUOUS PUBLICATION

INFLATION REFLECTED IN ROMAN COINS

By LOUIS C. WEST

(A paper read at the 1945 Spring meeting of the American Numismatic Society)

We have on display today a selection of our rich collection of Roman coins, a part and only a part of the bequest given us by E. T. Newell. These coins are of interest and value from many points of view and later I shall call attention to a few of the outstanding pieces. To me this collection has particular interest because of the way in which it reflects the changing fortunes of one of the world's great empires. My main purpose today is to attempt to illustrate in a few minutes the rise and fall of that empire in terms of the currency it used and the monetary policies that it followed. Of course the currency was not the cause of the rise of that empire nor of its decline, but it is a mirror in which the effects of other acts or policies are clearly reflected.

One phase of the use of coins in the Roman Empire can barely be mentioned, that is their use as a medium of propaganda by the government, for in that respect they are strikingly like the modern postage stamp. Roman emperors struck coins in honor of the great figures of their past; we have issued a presidential series; Roman emperors struck coins in honor of provinces; we have issued stamps in honor of states. Roman emperors struck coins to honor members of their families, to announce the coming of war, the conclusion of peace, to commemorate some great anniversary such as the millennium of the city of Rome, or to publicize some proposed plan. We have issued stamps for Washington's Bicentennial, for NRA, for defense, for victory.

A Roman citizen of the second century A. D. could look with pride on his accomplishments. He was part of a state that stretched from Scotland to the Sahara; from the Atlantic to the Euphrates. If he had made a financial success of his life he could live in a house with running water, with window panes of glass, with central heating. He could travel with reasonable speed and comparative comfort over a road system that reached all parts of the empire. He could have foreign products, for the cargo ships that served him were larger than any the world was to see again until the time of Queen Elizabeth. Chinese silks, Indian pepper, African ivory, Arabian and Persian spices were commonplace. Unhampered by restrictive tariffs, the glassware of Syria and Egypt, and later of Cologne; the wines of Italy and France, the woolens of Spain, the tableware of France, the paper of Egypt, were distributed in volume over large areas of trade. His taxes were comparatively light; the laws that governed him were reasonable and generally well administered. In addition he had the advantages of a universal monetary system. One can see evidence of this either in the New Testament or in the Talmud where the names of the imperial coins occur together with the local names of the local copper coins.

One can understand the belief of that Roman in "Eternal Rome." Yet within a comparatively short time the picture had completely changed. Western Europe sank into a depression in which it took over a thousand years to regain the level of material well-being and of individual opportunity that it had enjoyed under the Romans. In Northern Africa large sections have even yet not regained it. For example, at El-Djem, south of Tunis, in a region that now supports some 5,000 persons, there still stands a colosseum built to accomodate 80,000 persons.

One can of course be too concise in naming the reasons either for the rise of this prosperity or for its decline. With that warning in mind it seems to me that the tax policy and the resultant monetary policy of the Roman rulers were responsible both for the period of prosperity and for the collapse. As long as taxes and money were wisely handled, conditions prospered; when bad policies became permanent the empire fell. Bad policies were not deliberately chosen; they came to the Roman as they have to many modern peoples because the need of the moment made what seemed immediately expedient more desirable than what was wise.

When Augustus laid the foundations for the Roman Empire, he seems to have been actuated by the belief that the best government was the one that interfered the least with the individual's proper liberty, and initiative. There was widespread a general feeling that the disturbances and civil wars of the previous century were over; that men could once more safely make plans for the future. There was available a great field for expansion, so the next century witnessed in France, along the Rhine, in the Low Countries and later in Britain, a development as striking as our own development of the far west after the Civil War. As an essential part of his program of rehabilitation, Augustus revised the existing coinage. He issued gold, silver and copper coins of good quality and related all existing coinages to that standard. His gold and silver coins were of pure metal, struck with weights that indicate a ratio of about 12½ to 1. Perhaps because the use of gold coins at Rome was new, he seems to have attempted a bimetallic standard, but that attempt was unsuccessful. In one province, Egypt, he laid the foundation for what proved to be one of the most successful as well as perhaps the longest lived purely token coinage that the world has seen. It also ended in failure.

Fifty years after the death of Augustus, Nero made certain changes in the money, among them one that put the Roman Empire definitely on the gold basis. Because the ratio between gold and silver was changed from 12½ to 1 to about 11¾ to 1 the weights of the gold and silver coins were also changed. The new gold which was still 100% pure was almost exactly the weight of the recent English sovereign, there being less than 1% difference between them. In the silver coin Nero put 10% alloy, probably in part for the same reason that we put 10% alloy in our silver dollar:—the coin wears better. There is also another important reason. If the nominal value of the coin is greater than its bullion value it is less likely to be used in the arts and less likely to go abroad in foreign trade.

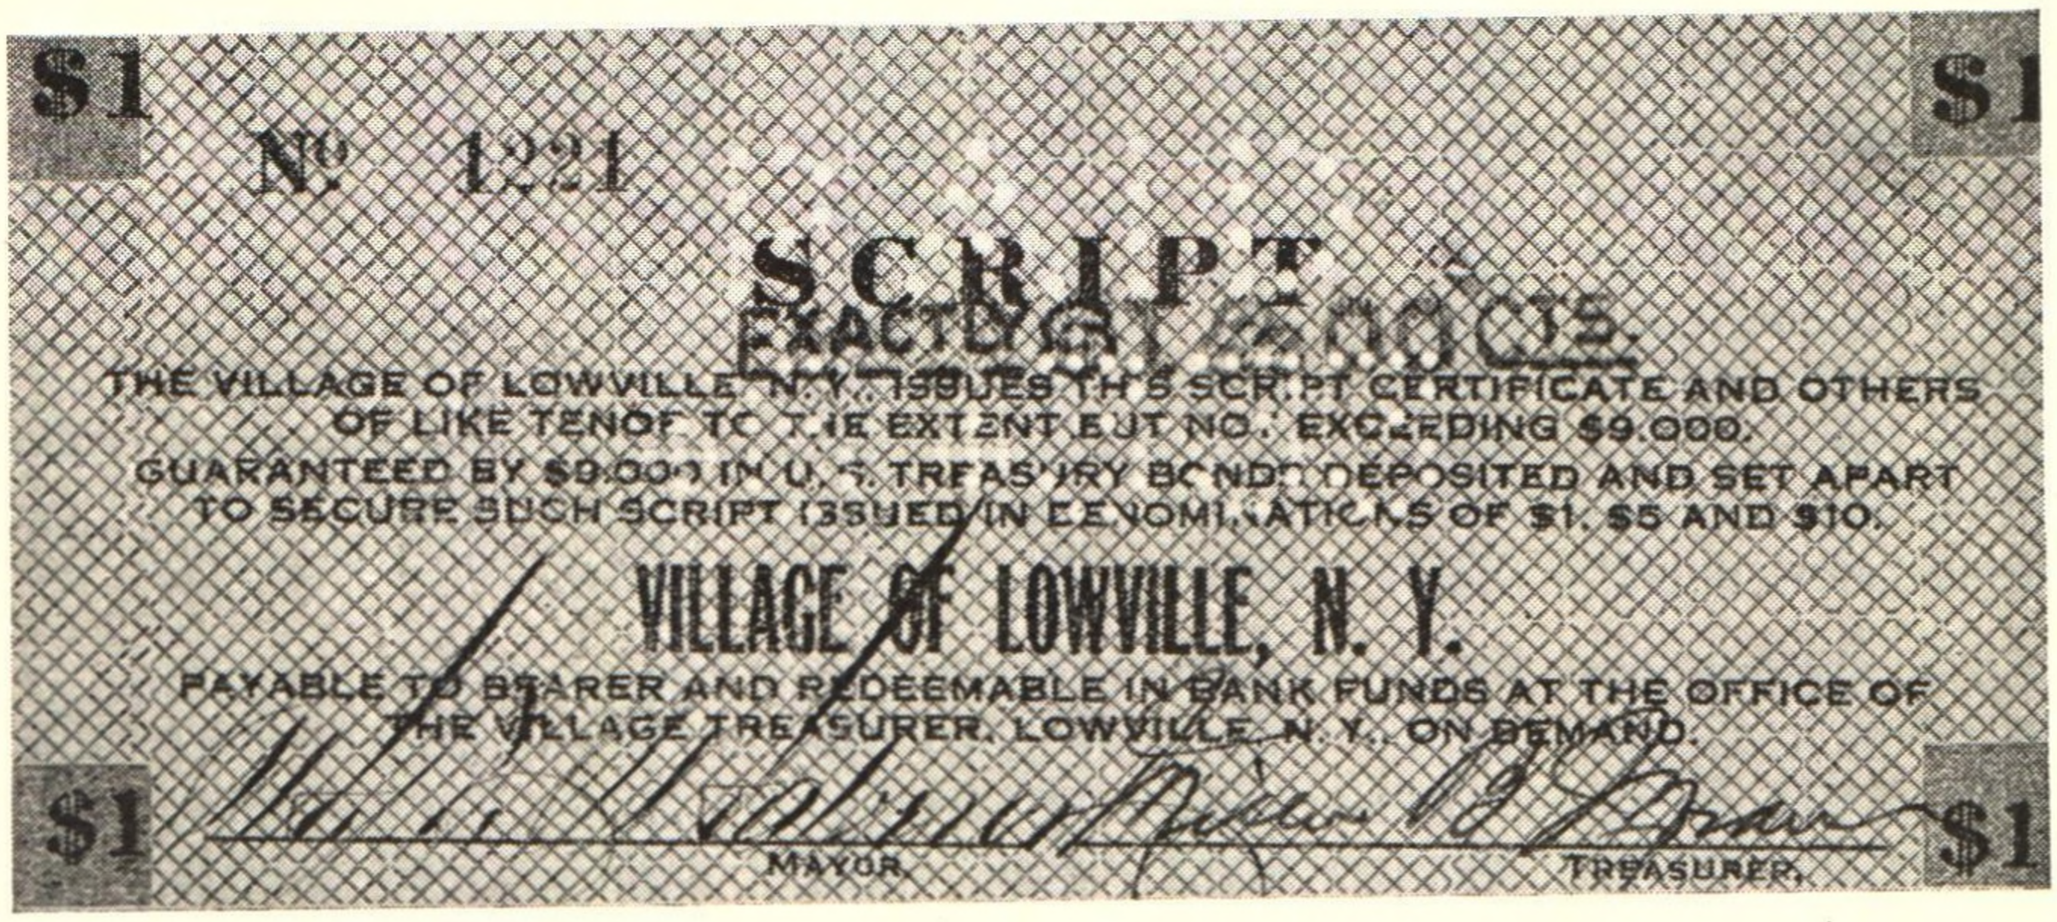

After Nero the Roman silver coinage was a token coinage. We take our own silver without hesitation and without discount, even though we know its value as bullion is only about one-third or one-half of the nominal value stamped on it at the mint. The Roman did likewise for a long period of time because he had confidence in his government's willingness to accept it at its face value for obligations owed to the government.

could easily be tested as to weight and fineness and nothing else mattered. The coinage of the first two centuries, though based on gold, was practically speaking a token coinage, whose value in ever-growing degree depended upon the faith and credit of the government. When popular belief in that faith and credit was lost, the whole system collapsed.

SCRIP OF LOWVILLE, NEW YORK

A little known issue of scrip is that issued during the "banking holidays" by the Village Board of Lowville, Lewis County, New York.

The urgent need of the issue is indicated by the haste with which it was printed. The word scrip has been mis-spelled "script." The paper resembles cheap wall-paper and as an extra precaution against scrip-raisers, a check-writing machine was used to print the denomination EXACTLY $1 & 00 CTS in the center of the note.

Though the issue is undated, it was put into circulation shortly after its authorization on March 7, 1933. The entire issue totalled only $9000 and was made up of three denominations as follows: $1, 5000 pieces; $5, 700 pieces; $10, 50 pieces. These were signed by H. N. Haberer, Mayor, and Miller B. Moran, Treasurer, though a few bear the signature of David S. Roberts or D. S. Roberts, Acting Mayor.

They were widely circulated in the whole north section of Lewis County, being readily accepted by merchants and the public in general. None is outstanding and the few specimens extant have been officially cancelled.

Charles Z. Mihalyi, who at the time of the issue was curator of the Lewis County Historical Society, reports that only three complete sets are known. One is owned by the above Society, one by the Smithsonian Institution and one by himself. About a dozen of the cancelled $1 denominations are in the hands of collectors.

Mr. Mihalyi has generously donated the specimen illustrated to the collection of the American Numismatic Association.

MEXICAN PATRIOTS AND THEIR PART IN NUMISMATICS

PART I

Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla *

(Me-gayl e-dal-go e kos-te-ya)

By DR. A. F. PRADEAU

Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla was the Washington of Mexico. He was a creole, born of humble parents of Spanish and Mexican descent, in the San Vicente ranch, Penjamo County, State of Guanajuato, on May 8, 1753.

As a youth he attended the College of San Nicolas where he majored in theology, philosophy, and French. He was a brilliant student, and because of his perspicacity he was nick-named the fox.

The period in which Hidalgo attended college, graduated, became a member of the faculty, and later, dean of the institution in which he had been a student, cannot be accurately determined because during the French intervention (1862-1867), the invaders used the college as barracks, and during their stay there, the archives were destroyed.

During 1778 or 1779 Hidalgo went to Mexico City where he received a doctorate in theology and was ordained a Catholic priest. As such he served in various parishes but towards the end of the eighteenth century he was assigned to the Dolores parish, in the state of his birth.

Here, his efforts were directed toward the betterment of his illiterate and long oppressed parishioners. Within his limited means, Hidalgo found ways of teaching them how to read and write, introduced the cultivation of the grapevine and the mulberry tree, brought cultures of the silk-producing larvae (Bombyx mori) and started the manufacture of silk. Careful study effected far reaching improvements in the fields of irrigation, brick and pottery making, and apiculture. In addition he attended the physical ailments of his flock, and, not infrequently, acted as their public defender. Hidalgo was an eloquent speaker, loved and respected for his knowledge and wisdom.

Dissatisfied with the Spanish-Colonial regime that had enslaved, abused, and robbed the natives for three hundred years, Hidalgo began conspiring against it. His goal was the emancipation of the slaves, the abolition of tribute taxes, and various other social reforms. His liberal ideas brought him before the Inquisition tribunals, but his case was not prosecuted. He joined a circle of freedom-loving people and it became the nucleus of revolutionists and heroes that ultimately brought independence to New Spain, now Mexico.

The Napoleonic invasion of Spain, the virtual imprisonment of Ferdinand VII in 1808, and the non-recognition of the Bonaparte regime, gave the conspirators added impetus. Hidalgo's group aspired to bring the Spanish king to New Spain and to institute the social reforms projected. The insurrection was to break out on the eighth of December, 1810, but weak-kneed collaborators informed the authorities of the plot as early as the tenth of September. As the Spanish-Colonial governor—as well as his wife—was in favor of the revolt, he delayed acting against the conspirators until eleven o'clock the night of September 14, 1810. Hidalgo, forewarned by the governor's wife, mobilized his adherents and on September 16, 1810, at the 5 a. m. mass, delivered the famous sermon that started the war for independence.

As a liberator, Hidalgo achieved great triumphs, but his life as such was of short duration. He was betrayed by one of his subordinates and on March 21, 1811, was ambushed and captured. His trial was brief and the sentence inexorable. Hidalgo was shot on July 30, 1811, his head severed from the body, taken to Guanajuato where it remained impaled for all to see, until March 28, 1821, when it received a decent burial.

Numismatically, Hidalgo was responsible for the establishment of the first insurgent mint of New Spain, in the City of Guanajuato. Don Jose Mariano Robles was the engineer in charge, but Hidalgo furnished the plans and specifications. The building chosen was an ore reducing plant known as the San Pedro Hacienda, still standing, and at present serving as barracks.

The adaptation of the old building and the construction of the mint machinery began on October 9, 1810, and proceeded with such rapidity and skill that by the end of the month limited minting operations had started. Several counterfeiters found among the prisoners of the Guanajuata jail served as craftsmen. The mint's first director was Don Casimiro Chovell.

The coins issued were similar in every respect to those of the Mexico City mint, even to the assayer's initials, and the reproduction was so perfect that detection was impossible. The reasons for imitating the coinage of New Spain were the psychological effect upon the timid populace, and the retention of the comparatively stable economic status.

When the royalists re-entered Guanajuato, November 25, 1810, amazed by the perfection of the mint machinery, sent it to Mexico City to be used as a model. Chovell, its director, also fell in their hands and three days later he was hanged.

The second numismatic event was the casting of the rare, irregularly square, unifaced eight-real provisional pieces. The one illustrated measures 31x35x2 millimeters and weighs 25 grams. The initials P. V. stand for PROVISIONAL. VALLADOLID.

* The prefix "Don" is not part of the name. Formerly it was used to indicate a title of nobility, similar to the English "Sir." At present it is a sign of respect and prominence. It is frequently represented by the letter "D." only. The feminine form is "Dona," pronounced do 'nya, and abbreviated "Dna."

BANK NOTE REPORTERS AND COUNTERFEIT DETECTORS

By WILLIAM H. DILLISTIN

(All rights reserved by the author)

In this article is presented a bibliography of newspapers and periodicals known as "bank note reporters and counterfeit detectors." The year 1826 appears to have been the date when the first periodical of this type was published, and this record covers a period of about forty years to the end of the State bank note era soon after the close of the Civil War or, more specifically, shortly after July 1, 1866 when a Federal tax of 10% became effective on State bank notes paid out by any bank. This prohibitive tax forced most of the State banks, then issuing bank notes, either to go into liquidation or convert into national banks and the primary need for these publications ceased. Several, however, found it worth while to continue after this date and, in addition to describing counterfeit notes, they furnished information now found in current bank directories. One of the more important publications of this type and one which probably enjoyed the largest circulation during the State bank note era has continued to this day and has appeared for many years as the American Banker, a daily banking newspaper.

The bank note reporters and counterfeit detectors served a two-fold purpose, first, to show the rate of discount at which uncurrent bank notes would be purchased in the more important business centers of the country and secondly, to furnish a brief description of counterfeit, spurious and altered notes. Many of them contain financial and banking news of their period and some of them contain other news quite aptly described in several of the titles listed. The frequency of publication varied from daily to semiweekly, weekly, semimonthly and monthly and while many of them appeared in pamphlet form, several were published as a newspaper folio of varying sizes. One publisher in New York City and one in Philadelphia simultaneously published a weekly in folio form and a monthly in pamphlet form. Over a period of years, titles were changed from time to time, and the names which appear herein are the names under which they were more generally known.

One of these publications, a weekly in newspaper form, had a continuous existence as such for more than twenty-five years and, with the exception of a few scattering numbers in the first two years, a complete file was located. In another instance, a monthly in pamphlet form, a full twenty year file was found with the exception of only one issue. In a few other cases several relatively large files were found while in many cases only a very few scattering numbers were found to exist today. About twenty-five of the publications listed herein are known to the compiler merely by name. Owing to the fact that this subject has had little or no attention from writers in the past, it is likely that there were other publications of this type, that are not included in this bibliography.

The compiler has under preparation a history of these publications which will include a description of conditions in this country that led to the need of publications of this type, brief biographical data of some of the publishers, and a description of the contents together with the location of the more important collections.

Many individuals, libraries, historical societies and others have very kindly replied to his requests for information and he would appreciate advice from any others who can furnish information as to the location of publications of this type that are or are not included in this bibliography.

A SURVEY OF NEW HOBBY MAGAZINES

Despite the paper shortage, we frequently receive initial copies of new "hobby and collectors' magazines." Generally they are shabby publications, being more devoted to advertising income than to hobbies. The most recent is an eight page tabloid affair called the something or other "Bulletin." It is loaded with cheap, catch-penny advertising, numerous "testimonials" from readers stating that the "Bulletin" is one of the finest things ever attempted, and a number of indignant complaints about the treatment accorded collectors of this and that. That is all, and as far as we can see the "Bulletin" serves no earthly purpose save to make some easy money for the publisher.

Leading the long list of indignant writers are the stamp collectors. Even the better grade stamp publications devote much space to collectors with complaints and grudges. We know nothing of the merits of these complaints, but the fact that they occupy so much valuable space is a sad commentary on the stamp business.

An article filled with rightous indignation is sometimes entertaining, and occasionally serves a useful purpose, but as a steady reading diet, week after week, month after month, such articles must finally become tiresome if not altogether revolting.

While coin collectors have reason for an occasional complaint, they are subject to none of the abuses suffered by stamp collectors at the hands of dishonest, greedy and/or careless "philatelic bureaus," which are now being operated so profitably by the governments of many countries.

The gold dollar standard was adopted by Canada in 1871.

THE CARSON CITY MINT

By HAROLD M. BUDD, Los Angeles

In my New England boyhood days, I always had an avid interest in the Great West, which we boys in Connecticut always referred to as the Wild West. When I migrated to California thirty-five years ago, I brought along with me—and have never lost it—that priceless devotion for the West that made my boyhood dreams so realistic and yet so glamorous.

Once I moved to the West, I immediately became attached to its legends and determined to re-live those days of America's wonderful growth insofar as I was able. So I have become a civilized desert rat. On the slightest provocation—or with no provocation at all—I'll set my car in the direction of the desert, just as a cowboy or prospector would direct his poney or mule, and ride to what is to me the most beautiful and most absorbing part of the United States or any other country for my book—the great American desert. (I'm waiting for gasoline rationing to be lifted).

And in first place in all this glamorous land, in the land of mesquite, and sand, and cactus, and Joshua trees, is Carson City, Nevada. There, history was made; there America went through the pangs of empire-growth; there American mineral wealth reached undreamed of heights; there, for the rich numismatic-world flourished the fabulous Carson City Mint, whose output of fifty millions of dollars in gold and silver has now almost vanished to a very few coins most of which are collectors' items.

My interest in the West became tangible when I decided to collect only Carson City Mint coins. I am very proud of my collection because it began in an amateur sort of way and has helped me to grasp more fully the history of our great West; to snatch it from fiction and make it live and breathe with coins that literally shout their age—old stories to those who will but seek the source.

But enough of introduction. Let us see Nevada and Carson City particularly as it was in its early days.

FOUNDING OF CARSON CITY

Carson City, as you probably know, was named for Kit Carson, famous scout, trapper and hunter. Before his death in 1868 he was also an Indian agent for the United States. Although named for Kit Carson, the city was founded by Abe Curry in 1858. It has an elevation of 4720 feet above sea level.

In 1861, when Congress authorized the statehood of Nevada, Carson City was made the capital. Incidentally, Nevada, 6th largest state in the Union, was admitted to the Union by proclamation of President Abraham Lincoln in October, 1864.

Early in its Statehood days, Nevada was recognized as a source of great mineral wealth. Accordingly, Hugh McCulloch, U. S. Secretary of the Treasury, on December 27, 1865, authorized a committee of three Nevada citizens to select and approve a location for a mint at Carson City, Nevada.

Abe Curry, 1st Supt. of the Carson City Mint
(From a rare unpublished photograph)

The committee consisted of Abe Curry (founder of Carson City), F. Rice, and John Mills. Mr. Curry helped facilitate the work of the commissioners by donating an entire square city block as the mint site.

Why was Secretary McCulloch so anxious to have a mint in Carson City? First of all, Carson City was the capital of the state and the center of federal and state agencies. But, more important, was its proximity to the fabulous Comstock Lode and to other surrounding Nevada and California mining activities flourishing in the 'Sixties. You will see on your map that Carson City is only 15 miles from Virginia City, location of the Comstock Lode. Also Carson City is but a short distance from Grass Valley and Nevada City, important gold producing districts in Eastern California.

THE FAMOUS COMSTOCK LODE

Let us digress for a moment or two and comment on the Comstock Lode and Virginia City. The Comstock Lode, covering an area of only four square miles, ranks as the richest mining district ever discovered in the world, even including Cripple Creek or Black Hills. Its wealth was the foundation of famous California fortunes, including the Floods, the Fairs, the Sutros, and of John W. Mackay, a common miner who rose to the presidency of Postal Telegraph.

Comstock Lode was named for Henry P. Comstock, well known in the early days as a mining appropriator.

According to the records of the U. S. Geological Survey, in an extensive report prepared by Eliot Lord, the Comstock Lode, until 1882, produced $305,779,612 of gold and silver bullion. After all expenses were paid, enough remained to pay eight times over, all the costs of all U. S. territorial acquisitions up to that time.

FOUNDING OF VIRGINIA CITY

While we are reminiscing, we might go into the historic founding of Virginia City itself as typical of Western lore. It seems that two Irishmen, on a drunken brawl, were arguing about something or other—it really doesn't matter and during the argument, a quart of whiskey fell to the ground. The bottle broke and the alcoholic contents were spilled. So as not to feel that the spilled whiskey was entirely lost, one of the miners seized upon the incident as an occasion for christening and shouted, "I now name thee Virginia City, in honor of the great State of Virginia." Needless to say, Virginia was the miner's birthplace.

Well, let's get back to that mint at Carson City.

On July 18, 1866, the three commissioners received the authorization to proceed with the construction of the mint. On September 18, 1866 the cornerstone was dedicated and laid by the Grand Masonic Lodge of Nevada. The stone was obtained from a quarry which was located at the state penitentiary yards about three miles from the mint.

The mint building was finished and the machinery was received on November 23, 1868 and completely installed November 1, 1869 and the mint started its operation in January, 1870.

Its first superintendent was Abe Curry.

Coinage

During the mint's operations, gold and silver coins only were minted as follows:

	VALUE	COINS
Gold	$23,829,425	$20, $10, $5 pieces
Silver	25,445,009	$1.00, Trade dollars
		50c, 25c, 20c, 10c pieces
TOTAL	$49,274,434

There were 57 different issues of gold and 53 different silver coins, making a grand total of 110 pieces minted.

The mint closed entirely at the end of 1885. However operations were resumed again in October, 1886, but the mint closed finally as a mint on May 23, 1893.

In addition to the foregoing many millions in both gold and silver bullion were received and turned into bars, which were shipped to the San Francisco Mint, for coinage.

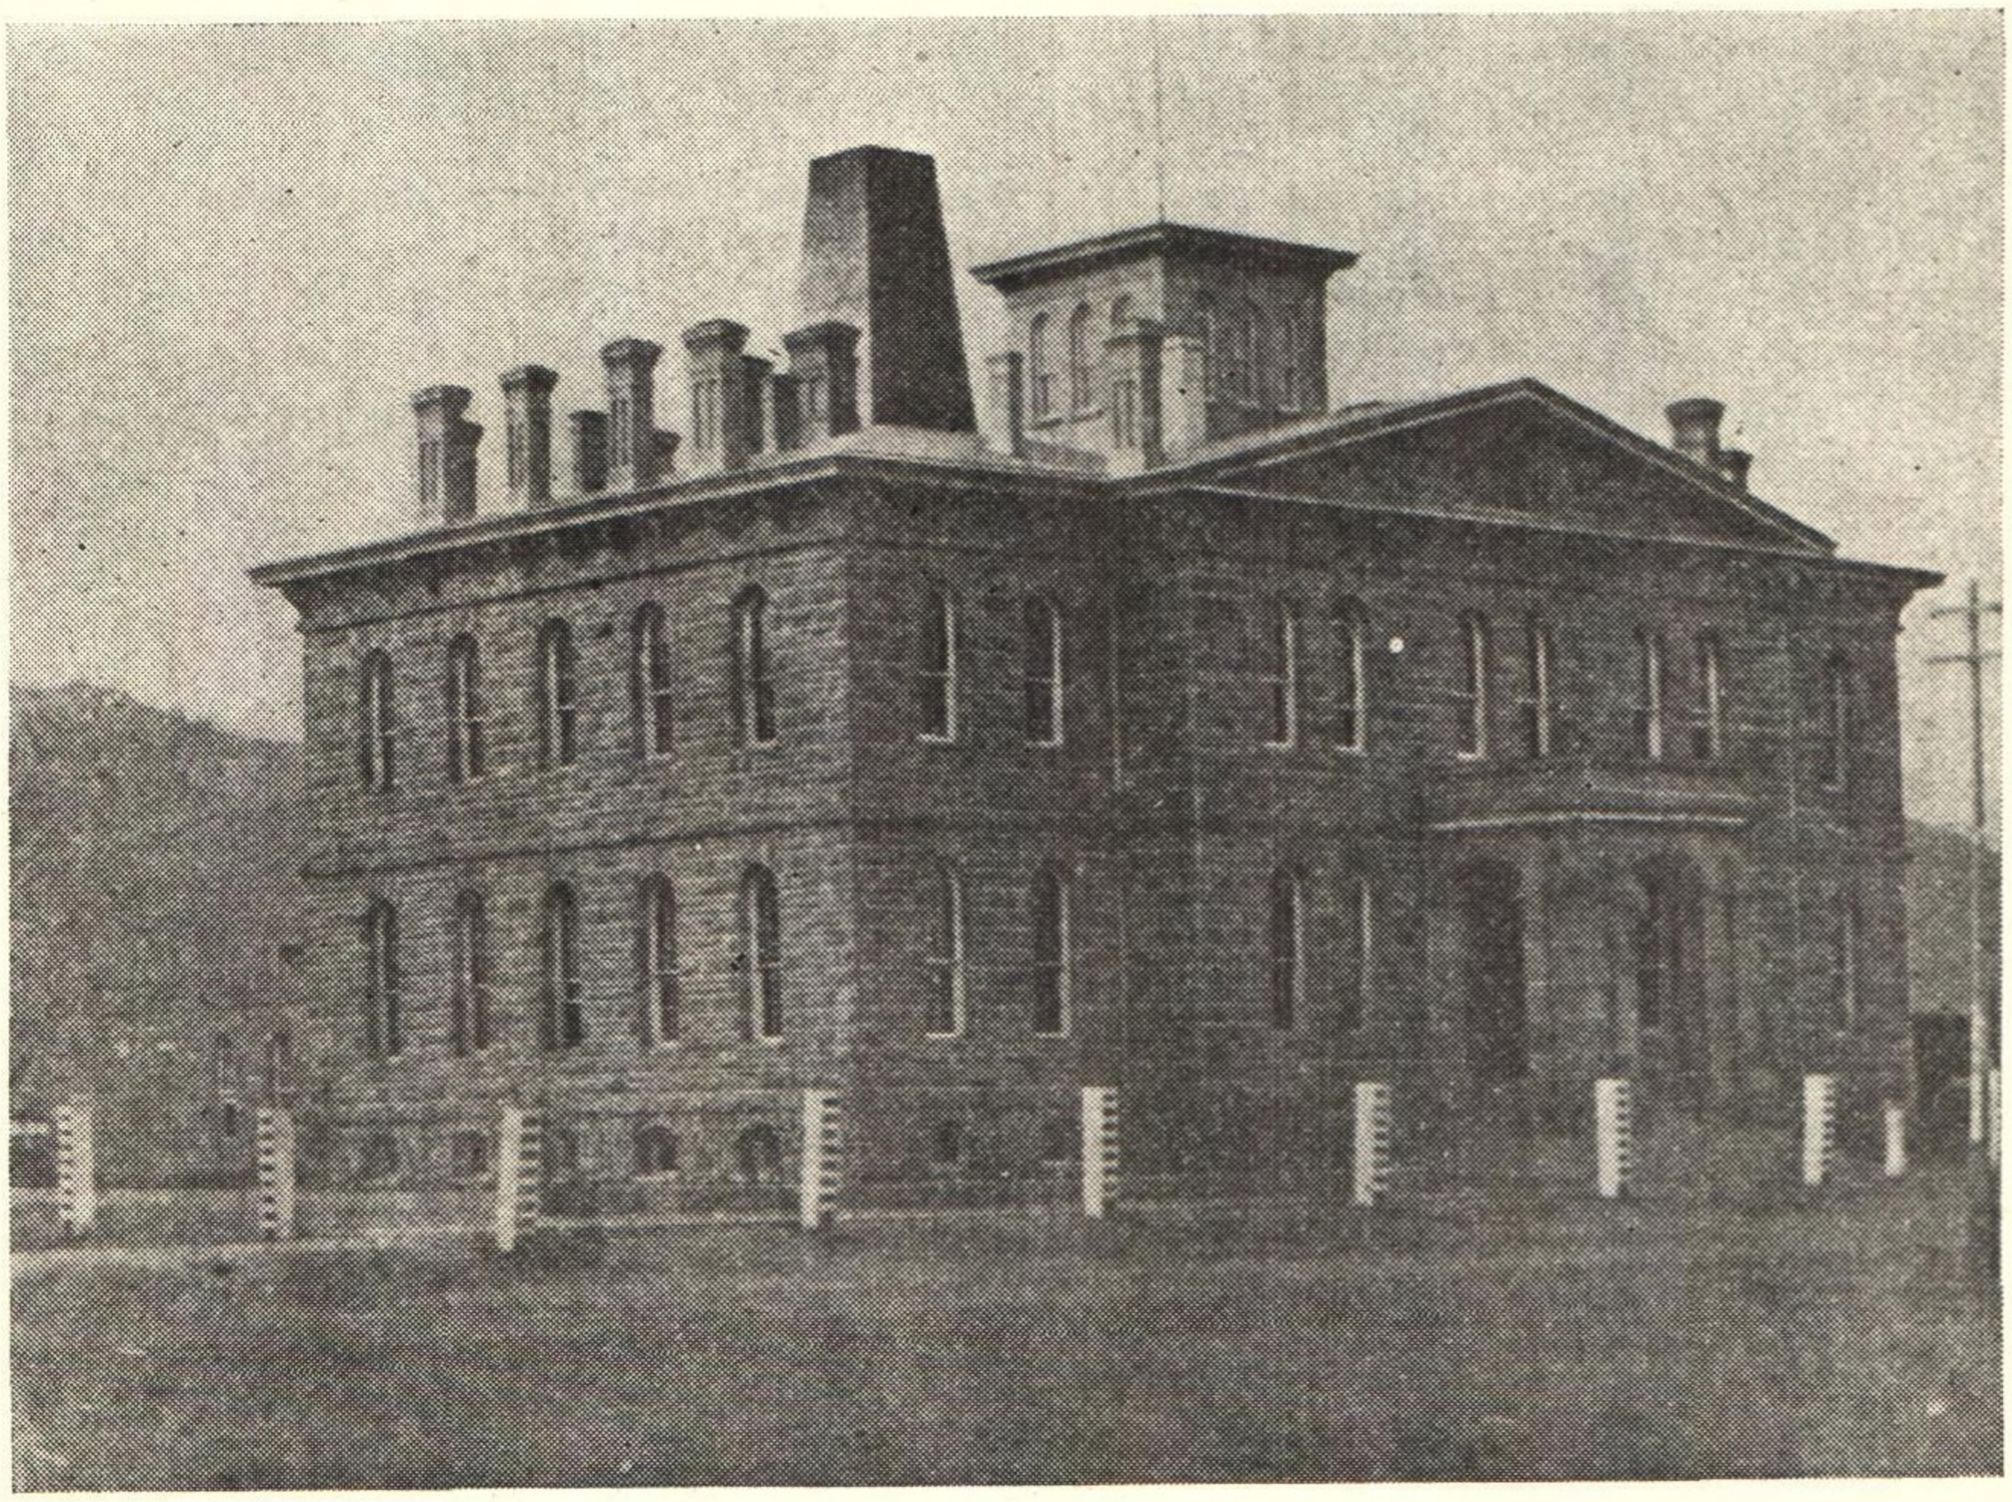

Although nominally in operation for 24 years, but being closed entirely the years of 1886, 1887 and 1888, it was actually in operation for only 21 years, which is the shortest period any United States mint operated.

NOW A STATE MUSEUM

From 1893 to 1933 the United States used the mint building as a federal assay. When the government discontinued the mint as an assay, the building had become badly run down. Floors and roof had rotted. It was not feasible to put the building back in good substantial condition.

The U. S. Government then put the mint on the market to be sold for $10,000.00. It was finally bought in December, 1939 by the State of Nevada, to be used as a State Museum and Art Institute. It was opened to the public for this purpose on October 31, 1941.

The mining industry of Nevada donated an entirely new copper roof of Nevada copper at a basic cost of about $40,000. Thus the mint is being utilized today as an educational and artistic museum in memory of the Old West.

DOLLARS

The Liberty seated dollar was minted only in 1870, 1871, 1872, and 1873.

The Trade dollar was minted only in 1873, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878.

HALF DOLLARS

Ten different pieces were coined in nine years as follows: 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, (one with arrows at date and one without arrows at date) 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878, (none after 1878).

QUARTER DOLLARS

Nine different pieces were produced in eight years as follows: 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, (one with and one without arrows at the date) 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, (None in 1874 or after 1878).

20c PIECES

Minted only in 1875 and 1876. (The mint records show that 10,000 were struck in 1876, but only 10 are known—nine in brilliant uncirculated condition and one uncirculated.) Undoubtedly, the mint's records are incorrect. This 1876 20c piece is now listed at around $1,500.00.

DIMES

Nine different pieces were minted in eight years as follows: 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874, 1875 (one with the CC within the wreath and one with the CC below the wreath) 1876, 1877, 1878. (None in 1870 and after 1878.)

SPECIAL NOTE

Special note regarding the Carson City dime of 1873 without arrows. It is well-known to most numismatists that this coin without arrows never did exist. The only one ever seen or heard of was exhibited at the Great Exposition of Coins, held in 1913 at the American Numismatic Society.

This dime was only in good condition and its authenticity is doubted until it can be proven differently.

The Colonel Green collection did not contain one Carson City dime of 1873 without arrows and his collection was supposed to be one of the most complete at that time.

SPECIAL NOTE ON HALF AND QUARTER DOLLARS

You may wonder why two different halves and quarter-dollars were minted in 1873—one with and one without arrows at the dates. The reason is that those first coined that year were without arrows. When weighed by the government scientists it was found that the coins did not contain the required silver. Then the arrows were added to give the exact weight.

FEW PIECES AVAILABLE

I have personally written hundreds of letters to dealers and collectors all over the United States regarding the Carson City coins for sale. More than 75 per cent answer that they have no Carson City coins of any kind. Others answer they have a few of the more common dates mostly in good to fine condition. About 5 per cent write they have a few in extremely fine to uncirculated condition.

CONCLUSION

This has been sort of rambling. Perhaps my boyhood Western dreams have colored the picture in my eyes, but the facts are still there.

Collecting Carson City coins has been a delight, not only for the joy of collecting, but because it has enabled me to drink deep of that glorious fountain of American history, right here in the West, where History was made by giants.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

NUMISMATIC NOTES AND MONOGRAPHS, No. 105. "The Byzantine Hoard of Lagbe," by Edward T. Newell. Published by the American Numismatic Society, Broadway and 156th Street, New York City. This previously unpublished work of the late Edward T. Newell, describes a small hoard of Byzantine gold solidi found in the south central part of Asia Minor in 1920. Of the 102 coins unearthed, five went to the National Museum at Rome and the remaining 97 were obtained by the author. They belong to the period from Leo III, 717, to Theophilus and his son Constantine, before circa 839. Eleven different rulers are represented and without exception the coins are in remarkable state of preservation. The hoard is illustrated by seven full plates.

ROYAL CANADIAN MINT REPORT FOR THE YEAR 1944. Ottawa, Canada. During the last year the Canadian Mint produced 76,490,775 pieces as compared to 153,380,716 in 1943. The staff was reduced from 176 to 95 employees due to the urgent need of war industries and service. It is little wonder that the Mint was unable to "meet all requirements (for coins) fully in the late fall."

The total coinage for 1944 was made up as follows: 50 cent pieces 2,460,205; 25 cent pieces 7,216,237; 10 cent pieces 9,383,582; 5 cent pieces (steel-chromium plated) 11,532,784; 1 cent pieces 44,131,216.

For Newfoundland: 10 cent pieces 151,471; 5 cent pieces 286,504; 1 cent pieces 1,766,751.

In addition the Medal Branch manufactured a considerable number of War Service Medals and several issues for official purposes.

Page 3 of the report states that $400 in tombac 5 cent pieces were issued in 1944. The last foot-note in the report states: "This coin struck in 1943." Another item of interest will be found in the Appendix. Under "Gold Coin Issued" we find that $30 was issued in 1940.

The report contains a summary of all coins issued for and in Canada, the coinage of the last 17 years being itemized.

NUMISMATIC SCRAPBOOK (Hewitt Bros.) for June. Charles N. Schmall describes and illustrates two early bank notes of Louisiana issued by John Law in 1718. According to Mr. Schmall the total value of the issue amounted to over $30,000,000. Leonard Olson has an article entitled "Grading Standing Liberty Quarters." He uses some novel terms including "very fair," "extra fine," (in place of extremely fine) and "about uncirculated." The latter classification he applies to coins with "very slight signs of wear and only the knee can show slight flattening."

Other contributors include Joseph Coffin, W. G. Hankins, Paul Pennington (who has an interesting article on Greek coins), John S. Davenport, R. S. Yeoman, "Uncle Ben," and B. Morgenthau.

THE ESSAY-PROOF JOURNAL (Essay-Proof Society, Inc.) for April. Collectors of paper money will find much to interest them in Julian Blanchard's article entitled "Signed Vignettes on Obsolete Bank Notes." Such signed notes are rare and Mr. Blanchard states that out of 1350 notes examined only 52 had signed vignettes. The article is to be continued in the next issue.
